TITO'S NOTE ON TRIESTE FAILS TO SATISFY U. S.

England Likens Yugoslav Chief to Hitler

Washington, D. C., May 19 (AP)—Acting State Secretary Grew said today that a Yugoslav government note on the Trieste question had been received and that it could not be reconciled with the American position that territorial disputes must be settled thru orderly adjustment.

Field Marshal Alexander

Grew said the United States cannot acquiesce in the settlement of territorial claims by forcible seizure.

He said this government is consulting on this problem with the other governments concerned.

Grew said that the situation in Venezia Giulia, the region where Trieste is located, is being complicated further by the continued infiltration of Yugoslav Partisan troops and their assumption of authority. The moves, he said, directly affect the ability of the allied commander to perform duties assigned to him in the occupation of Austria.

Likened to Hitler

ROME, May 19 (AP)—Field Marshal Alexander declared today that Marshal Tito apparently intended to resort to force in backing Yugoslavia's claims to northeastern Italy and southern Austria—a course of action "all too reminiscent of Hitler, Mussolini, and Japan."

Belgrade radio broadcast Tito's reply that the Yugoslav army, the same as other allied armies, had the right to remain in territory it liberated and the presence of his troops in Istria, Trieste, and the Slovene coast would not "prejudice dicisions of the peace conference as to whom these territories belong."

Asserting that "we cannot throw away the vital principles for which we fought," Alexander told his land, sea, and air forces in the Mediterranean theater that all his efforts to "come to a friendly agreement" with the Yugoslav leader had failed.

Await Coöperation

The question had been checked back to the governments of the United States and Britain, he said, and they now had "taken up the matter directly" with Tito.

"We are now waiting to hear whether Marshal Tito is prepared to coöperate in accepting a peaceful settlement of his territorial claims or whether he will attempt to establish them by force," Alexander told his troops. "I send you this message so that you may know the issues which are now at stake."

Alexander said the soviet government had been kept fully informed.

Marshal Surprised

LONDON, May 20 [Sunday]—(AP)—The Yugoslav Telegraph agency today quoted Marshal Tito as expressing "resentment and surprise" at Field Marshal Alexander's statement that Tito's policies were "all too reminiscent of Hitler, Mussolini, and Japan."

"Such an accusation can only be thrown into the face of an enemy, but not to a tortured and bled-white ally who until now was recognized by all freedom loving people as an example of heroism and self-sacrifice in this great war of liberation.

"I declare once again that our Yugoslav army in Yugoslavia is prepared to coöperate with the allied forces, with the allied countries, but at the same time I declare that Yugoslavia cannot allow herself to be humiliated or that she should be tricked out of her rights."

Slavs Set Up New Rules for Life in Trieste

TRIESTE, May 19 (AP)—Yugoslav authorities tonight issued three more dercees regulating life in Trieste and there was little to indicate that dual occupation of this disputed port was about to end.

Yugoslav troops appeared to be installed here in the same strength as before the western allies asked them to evacuate and there was little movement of military transport.

A decree announced by the Yugoslav-dominated regional committee of national liberation provided for the confiscation of all property owned by the German nation and by German citizens or persons who fought for the German cause.

Dissolve Fascist Groups

The document also set up a trusteeship for the property of persons who left the city at the time of the Yugoslavs' arrival.

The committee also decreed dissolution of all fascist societies, with the council of fascist administration empowered to determine which organizations were fascist.

A third decree subdivided new territory occupied by the Yugoslavs into the district of Gorizia and the district of Trieste and an autonomous district embracing the city of Trieste.

Meanwhile, relations between the Yugoslav and allied occupation troops appeared to be more friendly than ever.

The Yugoslavs have appointed two English speaking liaison officers to smooth out normal difficulties with New Zealand and African troops in the city.

Both Sides Cheered

Both the Yugoslav forces and a British Highland formation paraded in demonstrations at the same time this morning. Both drew large audiences.

Two British destroyers were at anchor in the harbor, along with a number of British mine sweepers, landing craft, and smaller vessels.

Some military observers estimated that Tito has more than 100,000 men in the area between Trieste and Klagenfurt, Austria.

REDS ON ISLAND TO OUST NAZIS, DANES ARE TOLD

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 19 (AP)—Four Danish cabinet ministers headed by Foreign Minister J. Christmas Moeller arrived at Bornholm Island by air today and received a hearty reception from the inhabitants and Russian military authorities, dispatches from the island said.

Col. Treptkoff, representing the Russian military commander, told the foreign minister, "We have come to this part of your country exclusively to remove all Germans. When this is completed we hope to continue friendly relations with your island commissioner and I can assure you that when that time arrives Denmark will be a free and independent country."

'Regret' Story Stalin Enjoys Girls, Liquor

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 19 (AP)—The Swedish government has informed Russia it regrets that the soviets considered offensive a Swedish magazine story citing "rumors" that Premier Stalin gave attention to "one or another girl," and that "after a night of heavy drinking he drove back to the Kremlin happily shooting his revolver."

The foreign office made it clear, however, that the magazine would not be confiscated as Russia had requested. The soviet government protested the article in a note saying that it was "incompatible with normal relations between Russia and Sweden."

Sweden's reply said the magazine's editor, Arvid Fredborg, had assured the foreign office that the publication, "Obs," had no intention of abusing or injuring the soviet union or its leaders.

"New Little Father"

The article was printed in Obs' April 20 issue under the title "Steel Man," which is the Russian meaning of the name "Stalin," and which in Sweden is the title of a comic strip.

The article began with a description of what it termed prerevolutionary Russia's love of saints. It said Stalin gave the Russian masses what they wanted by becoming "a new Little Father and the object for a religious cult." The Russians, the sketch added, always wanted holy men to be "strong eaters, drinkers, and lovers."

"Thus Stalin was never injured by rumors that after a night of heavy feasting and drinking he drove back to the Kremlin happily shooting his revolver," the article said. "Nor was he injured by rumors that he hopped up on a table and danced among the glasses, or that he let his happy feelings be increased by one or another girl."

"Robbed the Mail"

The article also said that during his early years Stalin became "the leader of a group of Georgian professional revolutionists which engaged in robbing the mail and bank transports."

The premier was described as a man of great energy, which the sketch said was "exceptional among the Russians." He worked himself into the Bolshevik party machinery by sheer effort, the magazine continued.

Unlike Lenin and Trotsky, it said, Stalin never emigrated, "was unaffected by the west's effeminate influence," and never became an international socialist.

"His strength has been that he has never been born an idealogist," the article said. "He kept belief in the Communist paradise only because it was useful for the country.

"One should not believe that the Russian masses interpret yesterday's pact with Berlin and today's alliance with London and Washington as any treachery. The Russian saint shall always exceed in cunning when it is a matter of handling foreigners."

The article said Stalin has always been an outstanding organizer, particularly in army supply, and "it is in this respect that his contribution to the current war should be judged."

"He shaped Russian administrative apparatus," the sketch added. "He brought order out of the chaos caused by the civil war."

Stockholm's newspaper Aftontidningen described the article as "provocative," but said a person must be very "thin skinned" to interpret it as an insult.

"The Russians themselves generally don't show such solicitude in presenting their views," the paper said.

ATLANTA WILL GIVE 17 GUN SALUTE WHEN GEN. HODGES RETURNS

Atlanta, Ga., May 19 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Hodges, whose 1st United States army captured Paris and drove on into Belgium and Germany, will be flown from Paris to Atlanta next week for an official Georgia homecoming celebration.

He will be accompanied by a general representing the army air forces, four or five general officers, several other officers, and 24 enlisted men.

The party will arrive Thursday and be given an official welcome at the request of Gen. Marshall, chief of staff, Mayor William B. Hartsfield announced.

Gen. Hodges, native of Perry, Ga., will receive a 17 gun salute when his plane lands at the airport. A half holiday will be observed by the city.

German Girls' Wiles Balked by Army Rules

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 7TH ARMY, May 19—The blonde girls of Austria and Bavaria walk down the streets and thru the fields in the warm, bright afternoon. They are clad in their most colorful finery and there is a swing in their handsome shoulders and supple hips. And in their smiles and sparkling eyes, an invitation.

They want attention and frankly show it. They promenade endlessly past the American soliders and cannot understand why the soldiers do not flirt with them.

Particularly, they can't see why the soldiers feel free to romp with youngsters and yet pay no heed to somely girls.

Fraternization Costly

The answer, of course, lies in the ban imposed by the American military authorities against fraternization with the people of conquered Germany and Austria and the severe penalties for violations. The lightest punishment the G. I. can hope to get off with if caught is a $65 fine.

A lieutenant colonel was fined $2,000 recently and an enlisted man was sentenced to a year and a day at hard labor.

Several hundred soldiers were arrested by military policemen for fraternizing with young women a few nights ago at Augsburg in a roundup thru the city. The tongue in cheek excuses of the GIs that they thought the women were displaced persons of allied countries didn't avail.

Difficult to Enforce

The nonfraternization decree is one of the most difficult the army has to carry out and, looking at it squarely, it is one which just cannot be enforced fully—and its enforcement is expected to deteriorate.

It is not that the GI doesn't understand the motives behind the decree—that the people of Germany must be made to know that their armies have been beaten, that naziism and all it stands for in tyranny and atrocity have been crushed, and that it must be impressed on Germany in every way that they never dare again to threaten the peace of the world.

The army is aware of the unpopularity of the nonfraternization regulation and there has been some winking at minor offenses and there are rumors that the ban may be relaxed or completely lifted as applied to Austria.

Strictly interpreted, it is a violation of the army decree for a GI to play with a German or Austrian child and offer the youngster chocolate. But it is rarely that such actions are penalized.

COLONEL UNDER ORDERS TO KILL HIS FUEHRER

Plan to Hide Body from Reds

BERCHTESGADEN, Germany, May 19 (AP)—The $5,000 a year shorthand expert who shadowed Adolf Hitler with a notebook from 1942 until a few days before the fuehrer was reported dead, said today it was likely the German leader was killed by an SS [elite guard] colonel specifically assigned to the task—with Hitler's knowledge.

The statement was made by Gerhard Herrgessel, 36 year old law-trained secretary who said he left Hitler in the caverns under the Berlin reichschancellery shortly before midnight April 22. It was supported by six colleagues who had recorded the most intimate meetings between Hitler and his henchmen since 1939.

The trigger man was identified as a Col. Guensche, SS adjutant in charge of the underground chancellery in its last hours. His assignment, Herrgesell said, was to kill Hitler, make certain his body was disposed of in such a manner the Russians did not find it—then turn his gun on himself.

Feared Capture by Reds

"Hitler was never out of Guensche's sight those last few days," Herrgesell said. "He acted as his personal aide, taking telephone messages and remaining at his elbow. Hitler wanted to make certain he died instantly. He said he did not want to be wounded. He did not want to be captured by the Russians nor did he want his corpse to fall into their hands."

Ludwig Krieger, Heinz Buchholl, Karl Thoet, Dr. Kurt Peschel, Dr. Ewald Reynitz, and Hans Helling, who were present at Hitler's last birthday conference, supported Herrgesell's report. They said they heard the plans discussed and it was common knowledge among Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Col. Gustav Jodl, Martin Bormann, Propaganda Minister Goebbels, and others with the fuehrer at the end.

In a long conversation with the scholarly corps of historians—hired by Hitler to record his every utterance—additional bits of information were picked up to fit into the jigsaw puzzle of the fuehrer's last days.

Hitler Tells Them Off

They all fit into two trends which run thru the events from April 20 on—first, the desperate efforts by Hitler's closest advisers to persuade him to leave Berlin; second, Hitler's growing stubborness, gradually changing to bitterness, which saw him telling them off one by one, leaders of the luftwaffe, the wehrmacht, even the SS.

Goering got it first.

"Hitler told him that for the last year and a half the luftwaffe was responsible for Germany's reverses," Helling said. "Goering did not answer—just shrugged his shoulders and look down."

This outburst came at an April 20 meeting in Berlin and before it broke up, Helling added, Goering, with the attitude of a whipped pup,

530,000 NEW REFRIGERATORS QUOTA FOR '45

Washington, D. C., May 19 (AP)—The war production board tonight announced it will permit the manufacture of 530,000 new, popularly priced household refrigerators this year.

Production of the gas and electric machines may start July 1, after a three year shutdown, WPB said, but the refrigerators may not reach the public until nearly next year.

For Essential Users First

WPB will provide materials for production at about one-third the prewar rate—265,000 machines each in the third and fourth quarters of 1945—but the early output will be added to the country's stockpile reserved for hospitals, blood banks and other essential uses.

Actual amendment of the refrigerator regulation has not yet occurred, altho WPB invited manufacturers to apply before July 1 for priority aid if they wish to start peacetime production in the July-September quarter.

The decision is the first step toward reconversion of an industry which hit an annual peak of $280,000,000 in factory sales in 1941 and expects to expand to $370,000,000 a year volume after the war.

New Floor Lamps Too

Removing another restraint from civilian goods manufacture, WPB also revoked its ban against production of electric floor lamps and table lamps for civilians. Manufacturers will have access to an uncontroled supply of steel, copper and aluminum after July 1. Before then, they may use idle and surplus materials.

Six hundred thousand refrigerators were on hand when the factories were converted to arms production in July, 1942. Despite careful rationing the supply has dwindled to about 35,000.

OPA has announced it will seek to hold refrigerator prices to the level of March, 1942, plus allowances needed to cover increases in wages and material costs.

Fifteen per cent of all materials allotted for the refrigerators will be set aside for plants which did not make them before the war. WPB said this appeared adequate to give them "equitable treatment" in launching their competition with established firms.

Plants to Have Quotas

WPB will decide how many machines each plant may make, basing its decision on the company's machinery, floor space and engineering skill, and on the labor supply in the community.

Restrictions on the use and sale of glassine, greaseproof paper, and vegetable parchment were also removed today by WPB, as was a regulation limiting the types and grades of hand operated wood saws and special purpose saws.

BRITISH TOWN'S WIVES TOLD HOW TO MANAGE MEN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, May 19—A word of advice on how to hold husbands was given war wives today by the women's institute of Burton Coggles, a little town in Lincolnshire. This is how it's done, the girls who have married soldiers were told: "Give him plenty of good food, but never clean his shoes or allow him to shout at you. Don't try too much raw vegetable salad on him. Pull together and be ready to give and take; never argue with him [which ought to please any husband]. Let him think he is your ideal man, dress nicely to please him, and mix a large slice of tolerance, a good layer of love and of patience, and a good sprinkling of humor into the recipe."

U.S. CASUALTIES IN TWO MONTHS RISE TO 30,526

8,310 Killed; Japs Lose 48,103

Normandy Vets Arrive

HONOLULU, T. H., May 19 (AP)—An amphibious assault signal company, veterans of D-day in Normandy and the first complete military unit to be transferred from the European to the Pacific theater, has arrived in Hawaii. The small outfit began training immediately for operations against the Japanese.

(Map on page 8)

GUAM, May 20 [Sunday] —(AP)—Elements of the 6th marine division lost Sugar Loaf hill, important height overlooking Naha, capital city of Okinawa, but reoccupied its summit for the fifth time Friday. It was the 10th assault on the position.

"The Japanese have sacrificed large numbers of troops in defense of this key position before Naha," said Adm. Nimitz in today's bulletin.

Elsewhere along the Okinawa front, the admiral said, the troops "maintained heavy pressure on the enemy," thru Friday.

48,103 Japs Killed

The Japanese counter-attacked near Takamotoji village, northeast of Naha, but were repulsed.

The Japanese defense of Okinawa cost them 48,103 killed, thru Thursday. Nimitz disclosed these American casualty figures since March 18 for the Ryukyus and associated operations:

	Killed and Missing	Wounded
Army, to May 18.....	3,093	12,078
Marines, to May 18...	1,239	6,180
Fleet, to May 16......	3,978	3,958
Totals	8,310	22,216
Grand total...........		30,526

This was the first time Nimitz had reported casualties of all services jointly for the Ryukyus campaign and associated strikes on Japan.

Three Hour Grenade Fight

On the east flank 96th infantry division troops, pushing southwest from Conical hill, engaged in a three hour close quarter hand grenade battle with the Japanese. Elements of this division, which seized much of the Yonabaru area, are moving westward to join the 77th infantry and 1st marine divisions in an assault on Shuri, fortress city in the center of the enemy's defense line.

In the center the 1st marine division and the 77th infantry were attacking abreast on direct approaches to Shuri fortress from the north. Fighting was tough thru heavily fortified ridges and hills around Wana town, northeast of Shuri.

The 77th division called for very close support of airplanes and employed flame throwing tanks in a push against Japanese caves and ridge strong points. The 77th made some gains on its right flank near Ishimmi town, a defense bastion immediately north of Shuri.

Artillery Mows Down Foe

American artillery wrought heavy slaughter in a Nipponese column of 1,800 reënforcements intended to help shake loose the grip of the United States 6th marine division on Sugar Loaf hill overlooking Naha.

Leathernecks held their bridgehead on the Asato river in Naha, capital of Okinawa and west coast port, but confined their activities within the main part of the ruined city to patrol activities, front reports said.

Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd Jr., commander of the 6th marine division, said sacrificial losses of the Japanese along the present line may mean that resistance of the estimated 30,000 Nipponese soldiers may be broken before they can retire southward.

WLB WILL PROBE TRUCK STRIKERS' DEFIANCE TODAY

Firm Seeks $1,000,000 Damages from Union

Officials of the striking Chicago Truck Drivers' union left by plane last night for a hearing today by the national war labor board in Washington, D. C., on the walk-out of 6,500 members that has tied up delivery of food and war materials in Chicago and cut off some hospital supplies.

Employers' representatives and officers of another union, local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, also will attend. Local 705 is not on strike, but contends its 8,000 truck driver members are being intimidated by strikers. The I. B. T. is an AFL affiliate, and the C. T. D. is an independent union.

The hearing was arranged in telephone and telegraph messages by Acting Chairman Lloyd Garrison of the WLB. Washington dispatches said the strike leaders were ordered to appear and show cause why they have defied the WLB's orders to end the stoppage.

Suit Filed Against Union

Another development was a million dollar suit filed by the Chicago Tunnel Transport company and Motor Express, Inc., in federal District court against the striking union and several of its officers for loss of business during the strike. The case was brought under the Smith-Connally act, by which, it was charged, the walkout is unlawful.

The suit seeks an injunction restraining the union from interfering with the trucking companies' business, and asks that a receiver be appointed for the union's books and assets. It likewise seeks an injunction enjoining the union officials from transferring union property.

Representatives of the striking union who went to Washington are Raymond Hayes, the attorney; Edward Fenner, executive director, and Edward Regan, secretary-treasurer. Steve Slahor, president of the local, remained in Chicago to direct the strike.

AFL Counsel to Attend

The I. B. T. will be represented at the parley by H. E. [Bill] Wood, secretary-treasurer of local 705; Daniel D. Carmell, I. B. T. attorney; William Lee, a trustee; Daniel J. Tobin, international president, and Joseph Padway, AFL general counsel.

Representing the employers will be Anthony P. Nelson, president of the Illinois Motor Truck Operators' association; Walter E. McCarron, the general manager, and William Fullerton, head of the group's labor committee.

I. B. T. local 705, like the independent union, is seeking a basic $5 a week boost for a 48 hour week. The independent union members voted Wednesday night to strike in protest against a WLB decision granting them a basic $4.08 wage increase for a 51 hour week, with pay retroactive to Jan. 1.

The Abbott Laboratories, 111 N. Canal st., reported inability to have four carloads of intravenous solution delivered to Chicago hospitals, including Passavant and Ravenswood where there was an emergency need.

TITO'S NOTE ON TRIESTE FAILS TO SATISFY U.S.

British Liken Chief to Hitler

panying Alexander's message said Tito agreed in July, 1944, and again in February of this year that for military purposes the allied forces of Alexander would occupy Venezia Giulia province, which embraces the disputed port of Trieste.

Tito Rejects Agreement

Yugoslavia agreed to occupy territory to the east. This embraced the port of Fiume and an area east of a line running roughly north of that city. [This apparently would approximate the 1939 border between Yugoslavia and Italy.]

When Lt. Gen. W. D. Morgan, chief of staff at allied headquarters, went to Belgrade May 8 carrying a written agreement embodying those terms—including the use of "any Yugoslav civil administration already set up and working satisfactorily"—Tito rejected it.

The plan called for the withdrawal of all Yugoslav troops from Trieste and all other areas that Tito previously had agreed the allies would occupy.

The statement reported that Tito told Morgan "an understanding cannot now be reached" and because of recent events the problem was "now a political one and not a military one."

Tito Insists on Control

Tito offered Alexander facilities in the port of Trieste and on road and rail lines of communications into Austria but insisted that the area must remain under Yugoslav control.

Tito told Morgan that at the peace conference he would lay claim to territory west of the Isonzo river, which empties into the Adriatic west of Trieste.

New Zealand troops had made a junction with the Yugoslavs in Trieste on May 2, and at the time Alexander announced he intended to use the port as a base for large allied forces which would occupy Austria.

Alexander also informed Tito on May 11 that he had been ordered to occupy and administer the Austrian provinces of Styria and Carinthia and "requested Tito to forbid his troops to move over the Austrian frontier and to withdraw those already across," the statement said. "This request, so far, has not been complied with."

Upholds Yugoslavia's Claims

MOSCOW, May 19 (AP)—Izvestia, official government newspaper, printed today an interview with Edward Kerdel, assistant president of the Yugoslav Council of Ministers, upholding Yugoslav claims to Trieste.

Kerdel stated that not only Trieste but Istria and the Slovenian maritime district were "liberated exclusively by the Yugoslav army's own forces."

"This territory is not alien, but our own national land," he added, "forcibly taken from Yugoslavia in the past."

HERRIOT RETURNS TO LYON AS MAYOR AFTER LONG CAPTIVITY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, May 19—After 31 months of imprisonment by Vichy and the Germans, former Premier Edouard Herriot returned by air today to his home town of Lyon, 24 hours after it had unanimously reëlected him mayor for the ninth consecutive time in 40 years.

Accompanied by his wife and the former prefect, Bollaert, who shared his captivity, the portly pipe smoking politician was given a delirious welcome by his fellow citizens. He drove directly from the air field to the city hall where, from a balcony, he addressed a huge crowd gathered in the square below. Herriot reaffirmed his undying faith in republican France and its watchword, "Liberty, Equality, and Fraternity."

Herriot was interned by Vichy and then taken to Germany after he had expressed his disgust with Marshal Petain's policy in 1942 by handing back his Legion of Honor decoration. Last August Laval brought him back to Paris in a vain effort to use him as an intermediary with the allies. The Germans took him to the reich again and imprisoned him near Berlin where he was liberated April 29 by the Russian army.

RUSSIA'S WAR OF NERVES KEEPS TURKEY TENSE

BY CLAY GOWRAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

ISTANBUL, Turkey, May 17 [Delayed]—Turkey has been able to celebrate the end of the European war only half heartedly, and with good reason. Nervous and tense, the nation is waiting for the next move in the expected diplomatic campaign by soviet Russia to gain control of the Black sea straits.

Moscow's denunciation of the Russian-Turkish friendship and neutrality pact two months ago was viewed by the Turks as the opening gun signifying the beginning of this new "war," which will be fought with words, treaties, and carefully concealed pressure.

Until Marshal Stalin breaks his silence and ends the war of nerves which he now is carrying on against this nation the Turks can only speculate as to what character the Russian drive for dominance over the life line into the Black sea will assume.

Government Remains Silent

Government policy is to wait in silence, taking every precaution to do nothing to offend the Kremlin. After the treaty denunciation, the Turkish newspapers did not comment bitterly on the Russian action. No Turk in any official capacity can be persuaded to express his views publicly on the subject.

However, in the last few weeks I talked to many persons—Turks and foreign observers—in Istanbul and Ankara. Several of them have been in close touch with Russian diplomatic representatives here and have learned something of the official Russian attitude on the straits question. In general their observations are as follows:

Russia insists that the straits lead only to Russian territory. To arrive at such a conclusion Russia obviously has come to consider Bulgaria and Romania, which also front on the sea, as vassal states and has conveniently ignored the fact that Turkey has a Black sea coast line. This is similar to the ruthless, high powered reasoning which Hitler popularized before the war in dealing with European minority questions.

Under International Control

Following the first premise that the straits lead only to Russia, Moscow sees no reason why they should remain under international control as governed at present by the Montreux convention, signed in 1936 by England, France, Australia, Japan, Greece, Romania, Bulgaria, Turkey, Yugoslavia, and Russia. If at all possible, the Russians can be expected to make every effort to force out international control and assume full authority over the straits.

However, if this old dream must again be given up, Russia will attempt to achieve practically the same results thru a new international convention. Consider the signatory powers at Montreux nine years ago. Japan can be counted out, and very likely Australia, because she is not vitally involved. Communism is strong in France, and she already has a treaty with Russia. Romania, Bulgaria, and Yugoslavia are under Stalin's thumb, and every pressure is being brought to force Turkey into the same position.

England Greatest Obstacle

If a new treaty becomes the only solution, Russia will enter the arena certain that her demands will be backed by at least half of the powers most likely to take part in the convention.

Reliable sources here say that Russia considers Britain the greatest obstacle. Historically, Britain, with one exception, has contested Russian domination of the straits because of the threat to the eastern Mediterranean and the Suez lifeline to the east. But that one exception is important. The soviets remember that in 1915 England, in an attempt to keep the czar from signing a separate peace with Germany, secretly agreed to give Russia full control of Constantinople and the straits in the event of allied victory.

That chance was lost when the revolution swept Russia out of the war. Today, however, Russia feels that an England whose people are tired of war, as well as grateful to Russia for the fight she has made, may not offer too strong resistance.

Relies on U. S. Indifference

However, one of the principal reasons that British troops were sent to intervene in the recent Greek revolution was to prevent Greece from going leftist and endangering England's position in the eastern Mediterranean. After that demonstration of Britain's stand it seems improbable that she will accede easily to soviet domination of the straits.

With regard to the United States in the matter, Russia is relying on continuance of America's policy of indifference and disinterest in this part of the world.

The most astute observers here believe that the straits question will not be brought up at San Francisco. However, they also feel that Russia will not wait very long before making her next move.

Would Achieve Dearest Dream

If Russia should gain the straits it would be an achievement of the dearest dream she has had for generations. In 1882 Baron Nelidoff, Russian ambassador to Turkey, wrote to Czar Alexander: "To be master of the straits is a historic, strategic, and economic necessity." In 1900 Russian Foreign Minister Nicholas Muravieff stated:

"The possession of Constantinople and the straits remains one of the fundamental principles of Russian politics. Russia must always be ready to be there first before her competitors. Her greatest objective of the 20th century should be to capture the straits and establish herself firmly there."

MRS. QUINCY WRIGHT

British brides of American soldiers indicated complete confidence in their ability to get along with in-laws and showed more concern in the details of American family life, Mrs. Quincy Wright said yesterday after returning from a two months' visit to England and France.

Mrs. Wright departed March 15 at the invitation of three French groups — Mouvement de Liberation Nationale, Union Feminin pour la Suffrage, and National Federation des Femmes — primarily to discuss with French women the use of their newly won suffrage privileges. Mrs. Wright, director of the Chicago Council of Foreign Relations and former president of the Cook County League of Women Voters, said she outlined for French women the experiences of American women voters since receiving the right of suffrage in 1919.

Her impressions of British war brides was gained when she was asked to address two groups during her two weeks' stay in England. Brtish brides, she said, all look forward to a life in America far different—and considerably improved—from their present life. Their questions centered about money, food, doctors, insurance, and homes. Altho many plan to come ahead of their husbands, few anticipated difficulties with in-laws, she said.

RUSSIA ACCEPTS U. S. 'REGIONAL DEFENSE' PLAN

Decision Ends Delay of Week at Parley

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

San Francisco, Cal., May 19—Russia agreed today to the principle of regional collective defense against aggression without getting the permission of the world peace league to employ military forces.

This in effect was an acceptance of the American amendment to the Dumbarton Oaks plan whereby the Monroe Doctrine would be subordinated to the world peace enforcement machinery of the new league of nations except in the event of an actual attack upon a nation in this hemisphere.

In such event the United States and the other American republics would be at liberty to use military force at once to repel the aggression without applying to the league's security council for its consent.

Action Delayed for Week

This action by Russia ended a week's delay in consideration of the regional arrangements compromise pending in the international conference to abolish war. The compromise had been agreed to by the United States, Great Britain, France, and China. The Russian chief delegate, Ambassador Gromyko, however, had intimated opposition to the proposal and asked a delay until he could get instructions from Moscow.

The Big Five powers marked time day after day until this afternoon when Gromyko notified them he had received his orders. A meeting of the Big Five was called immediately.

Text Kept Secret

Gromyko went to the meeting armed with the text of a proposed amendment which was described as an indorsement of the principle of regional self-defense not differing materially from the proposal originally put forward by the American delegation and accepted by Britain, France, and China.

Gromyko declined to make the text public and other participants in the Big Five meeting declined to reveal its precise provisions. Mystery and confusion pervaded the purlieus of the Big Five meeting place in State Secretary Stettinius' penthouse atop the Fairmont hotel. Attending the session, in addition to Stettinius, were Gromyko, Chinese Foreign Minister Soong, British Ambassador Halifax, Alexander Cadogan, British undersecretary of foreign affairs; Jaques Fouques-Duparc, secretary-general of the French delegation; Comdr. Stassen and Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.].

Americans Meet Today

At the conclusion of the Big Five meeting, Stettinius called a meeting of the American delegation for noon tomorrow to consider the Russian amendment. Members of the Big Five were put on notice of a meeting at 5 p. m. [Chicago time] to receive the views of the Americans and seek an agreement of all the powers.

In the midst of the excitement over these developments Marshal Smuts, prime minister of South Africa, touched off some caustic criticism of the confusion and special pressures which he said prevail at the conference. He also deplored the exodus of Russian Foreign Commissar Molotov, British Foreign Secretary Eden, French Foreign Minister Bidault, and other head statesmen, leaving the conference with "only a rump of its membership" as a result of which the ratification of the peace league charter may be imperiled when the governments come to pass upon it.

Cluttered Up with Issues

In a broadcast beamed to the British dominions, Smuts said the conference has been cluttered up with irrelevant and explosive issues.

"The plain fact is," he said, "some people are not satisfied with wrestling with the almost insoluble problem of world security against the dreadful scourge of war. They have a passion for reforming the world in general and are prepared to push forward at full blast along all fronts."

Smuts singled out regional arrangements, trusteeships, colonies, and economic and social matters as issues that should be dealt with in specific conferences or by the world organization when set up. But fair progress had been made, he conceded.

Called a "Rewriting"

The Russian amendment turned out to be wholly different from what the Russophile press had represented to be the attitude of the soviets. It not only lacked the opposition to regional peace enforcement arrangements which Moscow was reputed to entertain but was an acceptance generally speaking of the basis of the compromise proposed by the Americans. One delegate who read the amendment with close attention described it as a rewriting of the American proposition.

The American delegation's amendment proposed that in all peace enforcement action short of an actual attack the league should be supreme and no regional action could be taken without the authority of the security council as provided by the Dumbarton Oaks peace league plan. In case of an actual attack, however, such restraints would not hold and the regional peace enforcement machinery could be brought into action without reference to the league.

The American proposal was conceived as a compromise between the Latin Americans, who wanted full regional autonomy for action against aggression in this hemisphere under the Monroe Doctrine, and the act of Chapultepec providing for continental collective security, and the British who objected to an exception applying to the western hemisphere only instead of all regions and groups of nations like the British empire. The United States delegates generalized the provision to suit the British and the Latin Americans accepted it.

These developments came on the heels of a flareup in the conference committee on the voting formula in the security council which disclosed that the Big Five do not intend to permit any tinkering with the veto power of a big nation as devised by Mr. Roosevelt at Yalta.

Clarification Sought

During a discussion of the matter in the committee, Colombia moved the appointment of a subcommittee composed of the United States, Great Britain, Russia, China, Cuba, Australia, the Netherlands, Egypt, and Greece to clarify the meaning of the voting formula pertaining to peaceful measures of settlement. It was suggested that this subcommittee might redraft the formula or propose amendments to it.

Thereupon Cadogan, the British delegate, and Sen. Connally [D., Tex.] of the American delegation said they would not serve on a subcommittee if amendments to the voting formula were to be considered. The committee finally voted 23 to 3 to confine the work of the subcommittee to clarification of the meaning of the formula.

While increasingly indignant delegates of 48 nations waited for soviet Russia to terminate its stalling tactics on the controversy, the first public meeting of a conference commission was held today.

Foreign Minister Carraciolo Parra-Perez of Venezuela, president of Commission 4 on the judicial organization of the proposed international organization, conducted a two hour session in the opera house at which committee chairmen reported progress.

No votes were taken, no decisions were approved, and the meeting obviously was called as a sort of sideshow to occupy the attention of the delegates while word was awaited from Moscow to break the deadlock among the leaders of the two main disputes delaying formation of a charter.

Vast blocks of empty seats greeted the Venezuela foreign minister as he called to order the first session of one of the four conference commissions since the parley started 25 days ago. About 200 of the 850 delegates were present. The balconies to which the public was admitted, however, were packed and scores were forced to stand.

Points Called Very Delicate

Parra-Perez opened on an apologetic note for the slowness of the work of his commission which has eclipsed all others, however, in its progress.

"The points dealt with in drafting a charter for a world judicial organization are very delicate," he remarked, "because they sometimes present a political aspect which is the subject of discussion in other commissions."

He referred to a fundamental question of the statute to be drawn which deals with whether the new world court shall have compulsory or optional jurisdiction.

He Isn't So Sorry

Sgt. John C. Coleman and bride at wedding breakfast in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., May 19 (AP)—Staff Sgt. John C. Coleman, 27, who had to plead for mercy after saying that Australian girls were more natural and less artificial than American girls, isn't so sorry he made the statement, as it led to his marriage today to his high school sweetheart.

It started last January while he was on a furlough after three years in the South Pacific. After he made the statement, he was swamped by telephone calls, letters, and telegrams from protesting girls, one of whom was the new Mrs. Coleman.

"I told him that if he felt that way about American girls he had better go back to the girls in Australia," the pretty bride, the former Carmeletta J. Haven, 24, of Greenville, Ill., said at the wedding breakfast.

The sergeant, who has 127 points to his credit, said they will spend their honeymoon in Chicago.

16 SEIZED POLES A SIDE ISSUE, STALIN WRITES

MOSCOW, May 19 (AP)—Marshal Stalin, in his first public statement on the Polish question, said today that the recent arrest of 16 Polish leaders had "no connection with the question of the reconstruction of the Polish provisional government," a regime which he declared must be the "basic core" for any expanded unity group.

The soviet leader contended that his view of the Polish provisional government was in accordance with agreements reached between himself, Prime Minister Churchill, and the late President Roosevelt at the Crimean conference, and added that any agreement on the Polish problem would be reached on the "basic core" basis and only on that basis.

Stalin's statement was a written answer to a letter to him from Ralph Parker, Moscow correspondent of the London Times.

There was nothing new in the soviet position as stated in Stalin's letter, since from the beginning of discussions on the reorganization of the Polish government the Russians have contended that the present Warsaw regime headed by President Boleslaw Bierut and Eduard Osubka-Morawski should be the basis for any expanded government.

Assails 16 Seized Poles

Stalin also denied that the 16 Poles arrested for alleged fifth column activities had been invited by the soviets to attend any negotiations on the question of reorganizing the Polish government. He branded their leader, Gen. Okulicki, as a notorious diversionist and called the others law breakers.

"These gentlemen," the Russian premier said, "were arrested in accordance with a law similar to the British defense of the realm act. The arrest was carried out by soviet military authorities in accordance with an agreement concluded between the Polish provisional government and the soviet military command.

"It is untrue that the arrested Poles were invited for negotiations with soviet authorities. Soviet authorities do not, and will not, conduct negotiations with those who break the law on the protection of the Red army rear."

While defining officially the terms on which the soviet union would agree to reorganizing the present Polish regime until time for a general election, Stalin expressed belief that the problem could be solved.

Negotiations at Standstill

At present negotiations are at a standstill, with Russian Foreign Commissar Molotov in Russia and the two other negotiators, United States Ambassador Harriman and British Ambassador Clark Kerr not yet returned to Moscow from the San Francisco world security conference.

In demanding that the present Polish regime, which is friendly to Russia, be used as the nucleus of any new government, Stalin pointed to the "case of Yugoslavia."

London Press Sympathetic

LONDON, May 19 (AP)—Marshal Stalin's formula for settlement of the Polish problem met with a measure of sympathy from the London press today, altho there was no official reaction from either the British government or the Polish government in exile.

Beaverbrook's Sunday Express said, "We must realize that thru the war years our views about Poland have been formed largely on information and propaganda disseminated by the refugee Polish government in Britain.

"We only now are beginning to realize there is another completely divergent view about Poland and that the majority of Poles do not accept the views of the London Poles at all."

Stalin's statement was a direct challenge of the claim by the Polish exiled government that the 16 Poles arrested by the Russians had been invited by soviet authorities to leave for consultations on the new Polish government. The Press association's diplomatic correspondent said Stalin's statement that the 16 Poles were not invited to take part in the discussions at Moscow "cannot be contradicted, altho it is in direct opposition to statements made by the London Poles."

"Keeps Door Open"

Washington, D. C., March 19 [Special]—The best that could be said here today of Marshal Stalin's letter on Poland to the Moscow correspondent of the London Times was that it "kept the door open."

There was no formal comment and no reaction at the state department or the White House to the three "elementary" conditions laid down for settlement of the Polish question. In general, the letter aroused no enthusiasm. Some diplomats considered its tone "mean." They remarked that in insisting upon the Crimean decisions being followed, Stalin was saying one thing but in seeking to draw a parallel between the Yugoslav and Polish situations he was "drawing a red herring across the sky."

PETAIN DENIES HE WAS HEAD OF ANTI-RED GROUP

PARIS, May 19 (AP)—Marshal Petain issued a statement today from fortress Montrouge denying he ever headed the Fascist anti-communist Cagoulard organization. He had been told by French officials at a hearing that witnesses had testified at the trial of Lt. Gen. Mario Roatta in Rome, Italy, that he had headed the organization, the French press agency said. "This is garbage fetched from special baskets to throw in my face," Petain's statement said.

BRITISH CAPTURE HITLER'S 'IDEA MAN,' ROSENBERG

Nazi Leader Is Found in Flensburg Hospital

LONDON, May 19 (AP)—Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, dandy, scented arch-philosopher of nazilsm and leader of Germany's anti-Russian "crusade," has been caught in the allied dragnet of fugitive Nazi leaders, a dispatch from the British 2d army front said tonight.

Alfred Rosenberg

Rosenberg, sometimes called Hitler's "father confessor" and reichsminister for former German occupied eastern Europe, was found in a Flensburg hospital, a British officer said, as the search went on for the Nazi hangman, Heinrich Himmler.

According to a high British officer, Rosenberg was taken into custody by British garrison troops in the house cleaning of Grand Adm. Doenitz' headquarters at Flensburg. He was in a hospital with a sprained ankle.

The officer said Rosenberg's wife and his daughter, 20, also were seized.

Taught Nazi Doctrines

Rosenberg, who wrote hundreds of treatises on anti-Semitism and as director of the Nordic faith movement was the force behind the Nazis' attack on Christianity, had the fancy Nazi title of "director of philosophic outlook."

His was the job of inculcating the Nazi philosophy into German education and he was deputy commissioner for education. It was Rosenberg who supposedly put the bug in Hitler's ear to attack Russia—and it was this which did much to bring about the downfall of both Rosenberg, a one time White Russian, Hitler, and the entire Nazi regime.

Trial Is Big Problem

Meanwhile, diplomatic quarters said that the involved problem of just who is going to try big-shot war criminals may speed a meeting of the "Big Three" leaders of the United States, Britain, and Russia.

Russia's long standing refusal to join the 16 nation war crimes commission has posed problems of pressing importance since most of the German war criminals are falling into Anglo-American hands.

President Truman, Prime Minister Churchill, and Premier Stalin, diplomatic sources said, may take up the problems of the ultimate disposition of nazi war criminals.

On May 31 the war crimes commission will meet officially to discuss the best methods of bringing about close contact between the member governments and the commission itself.

Country of Origin

But sources close to the commission reported that the conference would face the involved demands of member nations for custody and trial of individual prisoners on the various war criminals' lists. In many cases these overlap and conflict.

The conference also may attempt to reach an agreement on the procedure for trials and perhaps fix standards of punishment for the different degrees of war crimes.

Russia, however, is interested in these problems since she already has listed as war criminals some of those in allied hands and a Moscow agreement provided for the return of war criminals for trial in the countries where the crimes were committed.

Under the still general plan, however, the four major powers would appoint prosecutors to handle the trial of top ranking Germans whose crimes blanket Europe.

Still up in the air are these questions:

1. What will be the procedure for dealing with Germans against whom just two countries have filed claim?

2. In case of mass punishment thru forced labor for those convicted of lesser crimes, how will the allocations be made?

3. If Russia and other powers take different views on the guilt of members of the military outside of the Gestapo and the SS, how will the issue be resolved?

3,000,000 Create Problem

PARIS, May 19 (AP)—The allies are wrestling with the big problem of the disposition of all German prisoners, numbering something in the neighborhood of 3,000,000. Reports in recent days suggested there has been a tightening of the method of dealing with them, altho SHAEF had no comment to make.

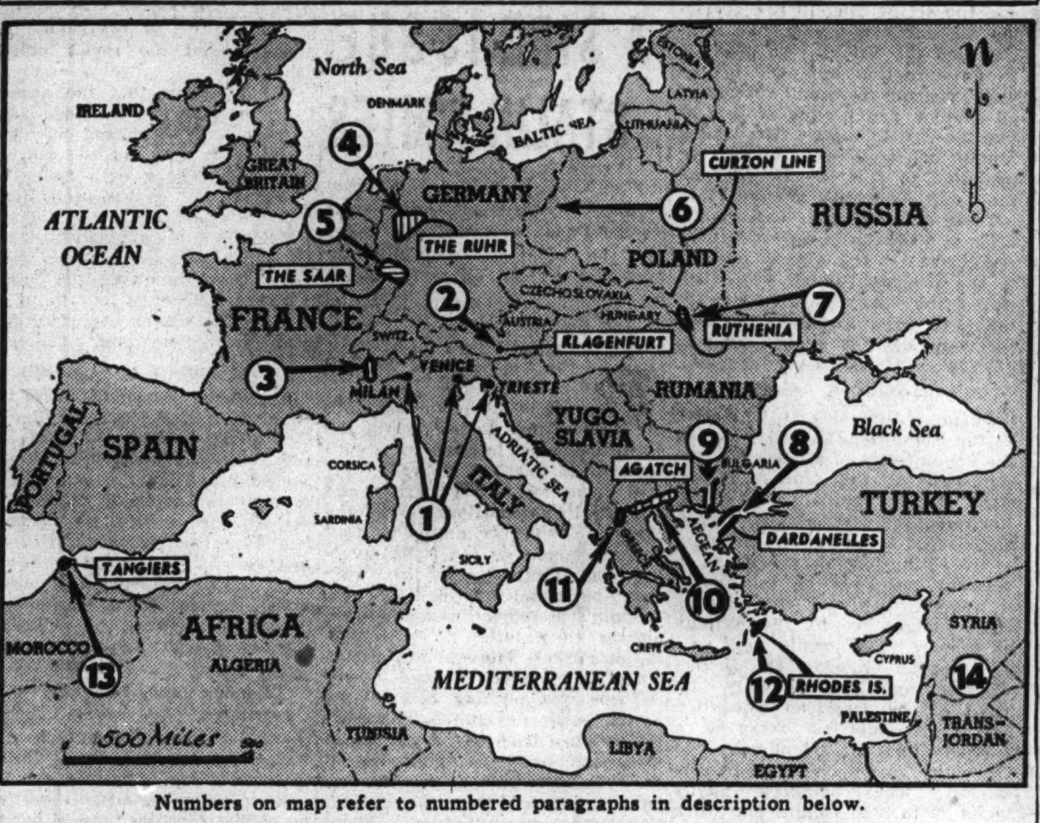
The French are known to have asked for 1,000,000 prisoners to help rehabilitate France, 50,000 of them for the dangerous job of removing mines. The French also have an agreement with American military authorities whereby German prisoners will be placed in the Saar coal mines after the screening process.

Prisoners May Go Home

WITH THE U. S. 9TH ARMY IN GERMANY, May 19 (AP) — German prisoners of war soon may be streaming back home by the thousands following a careful interrogation and intelligence scrutiny by American army investigators.

Altho no confirmation was forthcoming tonight, one army officer said orders had been received to screen all prisoners immediately and release those found not to be security hazards, war criminals, or ardent Nazis.

Points of Friction in Post-War Europe



Numbers on map refer to numbered paragraphs in description below.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, France, May 19 — The United States, by the presence of its armies in Europe, is involved in 14 European quarrels which must be settled before any stable peace can come about. These 14 quarrels, presenting 14 peculiarly European post-war political problems, were listed today in the French press as follows:

1. Trieste, Milan, and Venice. Behind Yugoslav and Italian revendications the old problem of hegemony of central Mediterranean and the Adriatic is posed.

2. Klagenfurt. The Yugoslavs want to seize this region of old Austria. The British oppose.

3. The valleys of Aosta and Suza on the Alps frontier. Tendencies are discerned in France to revise the Franco-Italian treaty of 1860 and get a more strategic frontier along the Alpine crests.

4. The Ruhr. This is the apple of discord between two countries. The French want to exploit the Ruhr. The British don't want them to.

5. The Saar. The allies, while not formally opposing, have not yet admitted French claims to this importan mineral basin. The French claim they need the Saar's coal while their own coal regions are on strike.

6. Poland. Warsaw has accepted the Curzon line to the east conditional on large territorial compensations in Germany in the west.

7. Ruthenia. The soviet Ukraine wants to annex the Czechoslovak Ukraine. A provisional compromise has been concluded under the form of an autonomous Ruthenian government.

8. The Dardanelles. Soviet Russia refuses further to admit that access to the Mediterranean depends on Turkish good will.

9. Port of Dede Agatch. Bulgaria wants access to the Aegean sea thru a corridor across Greece.

10. Macedonia. The Yugoslavs are favoring a movement for a Macedonian state to the detriment of Greece and Bulgaria.

11. Northern Epirus. The Greeks want this region at the expense of the Yugoslavs.

12. The Dodecanese. The Greeks propose to regain possession of these islands annexed by Italy in 1912.

13. Tangiers. The British want to revise the status of this port, which was annexed by Franco of Spain.

14. The Near East. Disputes for any hegemony over this region cause the loss of French prestige and consequent French resentment.

TENSION IN LEBANON RISES AS FRANCE SENDS MORE TROOPS

BEYROUTH, Lebanon, May 19—(AP)—Arrival of 1,200 French troops in this capital of Lebanon while the protectorate was agitating for independence precipitated a stormy session of the Lebanese parliament yesterday and left the atmsophere tense today.

[In Cairo, Egypt, the newspaper Al Balagh said British Ambassador Killearn, after a meeting with Premier Nokrashy Pasha, termed the situation in Syria and Lebanon "very delicate." The secretary of the General Arab league, Abdel Rahmen Azam Bey, conferred with Lebanese officials.]

IDENTIFY WOMAN KILLED IN LEAP OFF RAIL BRIDGE

The body of a woman who was killed Thursday in a plunge from a pedestrian footbridge at 88th st. near Baltimore av., was identified last night as that of Mrs. Margaret Yates, 35, whose home was reported to be in the vicinity of 59th st. and Wentworth av.

Police are hunting a woman who telephoned to report that Mrs. Yates had been hurled off the bridge by a man with whom she had been struggling. Her body landed on the Illinois Central railroad tracks after a drop of about 35 feet.

Identification was made by Miss Cirilea Ramirec and Ralph Valverde, both of 8745 Burley av. They told police Mrs. Yates, estranged from her husband, had twice been committed to the State hospital at Manteno as a mental patient. Last Sunday Mrs. Yates told them she believed she was being followed by the wife of a man friend.

CHARGES RAIL MAIL OFFICERS NEGLECT DUTY

Robert A. Rice, president of the Watertown-Portage branch of the Railway Mail association, an A. F. L. affiliate, and candidate for national association president in elections beginning May 29, charged yesterday in Chicago that the railway mail service has been permitted to deteriorate.

He blamed leadership of the association. He accused present union heads at Washington, D. C., of neglecting their duty in failing properly to guard the welfare of the employes of the service.

In the forthcoming elections, Rice will attempt to unseat C. M. Harvey, incumbent association president. Membership of the association includes 22,000 railway postal clerks thruout the United States.

NORWAY SEIZES LOOTED ART IN QUISLING HOME

BY HAL FOUST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OSLO, Norway, May 18 [Delayed]—Priceless art and household furnishings looted by the Nazis from thruout Europe have been seized by the Norwegian government in the home of Vidkun Quisling, who has become known as "the world's No. 1 traitor." Furniture from his private study was returned this afternoon to the royal palace, and other property was being catalogued for return to the legal owners.

Meanwhile, the former Norwegian minister of defense, accused of surrendering his country to Hitler in 1940, is complaining about being treated as a common prisoner in the jail here while awaiting trial.

His arraignment is scheduled for next week. and his trial before a special jury of three judges and four laymen is expected to follow promptly.

30 Room Mansion

The Quisling home is a stone mansion of 30 rooms in a garden on a hilltop in the outskirts of Oslo. He named it Gimle, meaning home of the viking gods. Before the war he and his Russian born wife lived in a small apartment, and his fortune was estimated at $25,000. The furnishings alone at Gimle are estimated as worth more than $1,250,000.

In the study was a gold sword and battle ax modeled after those of the vikings. A collection of looted books included biographies of Napoleon in four languages. An engraving of Napoleon was on the wall. In closets were seven uniforms, with seven different military hats ornately trimmed in gold. In the cellar were 2,000 bottles of whisky, cognac, and wine.

Paintings by Old Masters

Persian rugs adorn the floors of the living rooms. Paintings, including works by Rembrandt, Rubens, Mignard, and Tiedeman, are on such walls as are not ornamented with rare tapestries.

Almost every room has at least one clock, representing famous makers of many countries, dating back to the 16th century.

In the streets of Oslo it is predicted that the man who collected this treasure during his five years as a traitor to Norway and the pet of Hitler will die before a firing squad. The Norwegian government in exile in London has amended the law, introducing capital punishment in Norway for the trial of war criminals.

Auto Gift from Hitler

In the garage of the Quisling home is an automobile, a gift from Hitler, in which Quisling surrendered to the Norwegian police two weeks ago. It is a special Mercedes Benz, a long, black job with a 320 horse power engine, bulletproof body, and bulletproof glass. It mounts a machine gun in the rear.

Entrance to the Quisling mansion is thru armed gateposts, leading to the front door of steel resembling that of a bank vault.

TERROR ROBBER KICKS WOMAN; GETS $1,000 RINGS

Englewood police last night sought a man who knocked down Mrs. Eva Burner, 59, of 317 W. 61st st., at 61st st. and Princeton av. early yesterday and robbed her of $25 and two rings valued at $1,000. Unable to snatch the rings from her fingers, he threatened to cut her fingers off unless she gave them to him, she told Englewood police. When she complied, he kicked her and fled, she said. Her husband, Charles Burner, is a retired railroad conductor. Mrs. Burner was on her way home from a restaurant where she is employed.

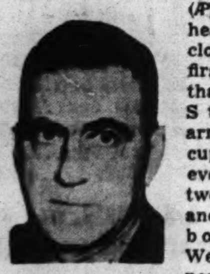
U. S. TO OCCUPY 14,000 SQ. MILES IN RHINE AREA

15th Army Zone Defined; Ports Taken Over

SUPREME HDQ. ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Paris, May 19 (AP) — Supreme headquarters disclosed for the first time today that the United States 15th army's zone of occupation includes everything between the Rhine and the German border, from Wessel in the north to Karlsruhe in the south, and a small triangle east of the Rhine from Coblenz north to Dortmund.



Gen. Gerow

In the final occupation, however, much of the present zone is expected to be taken over by the French and British.

The 15th thus is governing approximately 14,000 square miles, including the rich Saar basin, the Rhine valley, and the western half of the industrial Ruhr. Aachen, Bonn, Cologne, Trier, Saarbruecken, and Duesseldorf are under its jurisdiction.

Under the command of Lt. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, the 15th army controls an area about eight times as large as the district supervised by the Americans after the first World War. According to best available estimates, 300,000 to 400,000 United States troops will make up the final American occupying force.

Had 11,000,000 Population

While military governors have no definite information on the present civilian population of the area assigned to the 15th, in pre-war years approximately 11,000,000 persons lived in the region.

In London it was officially announced that the German ports of Bremen and Bremerhaven have been taken over by the United States navy and that supplies for the American army of occupation would be funneled thru them. Bremen is Germany's second largest port.

Already some 5,000 square miles of the American area have been turned over by the 15th to non-Nazi German administrators. The area known as "Saar-Pfalz-Hhein-Hessen region" embraces the pre-war province of the Westmark Palatinate and that part of Hessen lying west and south of the Rhine. American military authorities will exercise a "supervisory" rôle over the German administrators.

Today's announcement, while stripping the secrecy from the rôle of the 15th, failed to outline the final American occupation zone in Germany.

Presently attached to Gerow's army are the 22d corps under Maj. Gen. Ernest N. Harmon, former commander of the 2d armored division, and the 23d corps under Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Gaffey, former commander of the 4th armored division.

Divisions Identified

Divisions presently identified are the 94th infantry, commanded by Maj. Gen. H. J. Maloney; the 28th infantry under Maj. Gen. Norman D. Cota; the 66th infantry, which, it was revealed, has been operating against German garrisons in the St. Nazaire and Lorient areas on the French west coast, under Maj. Gen. H. F. Kramer, and the 17th air borne under Maj. Gen. William M. Miley. In addition, there are numerous nondivision units of all branches of the service.

However, the 15th will be augmented by additional units. This will not affect redeployment of troops now attached to the 15th or of units to be attached.

PICK NON-NAZIS IN FIRST GERMAN PROVINCIAL RULE

U. S. Officials Given Loyalty Pledge

NEUSTADT, Germany, May 19 (AP)—Under the watchful eye of American occupation officials the first provincial government of post-war Germany, carefully picked from over 200 non-Nazis has begun administration of more than 5,000 square miles in the United States zone of occupation.

Maj. Gen. Gaffey

Three American generals attended the inaugural ceremony of the new government yesterday and received a pledge from Dr. Hermann Heimerich, head of the German administration and former Mannheim mayor, who said:

"We are extremely grateful to you. We want to try to lead the German people out of catastrophe and work for reconstruction. Naturally we will show loyalty in all of our work. We will discuss all of our problems openly. We who have been entrusted with this work do not entertain any mental reservations."

Ludwigshafen Included

The new political division, known as the "Saar-Pfalz-Rhein-Hessen region" embraces the pre-war province of the Westmark Palatinate and that part of Hessen lying west and south of the Rhine.

Cities in the region include Saarbruecken, Worms, Ludwigshafen, Zweibruecken, and Mainz.

Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Gaffey, commander of the 23d corps, is military governor of the area under Lt. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow of the 15th army which is also occupying German territory as far north as the Ruhr.

Until yesterday German administrations had been reconstructed only on the level of municipalities and counties.

Chosen by Parties

Informal statements of these officers have indicated they are selecting Germans identified with the Social Democratic and Catholic Centrist parties before 1933.

Known Communists have not figured importantly in this selection altho they were among the first anti-Nazis to make their identity plain to American authorities.

Ousted by Nazis

The new oberpraesident [chief president] heading the enlarged Westmark province, Dr. Heimerich, was mayor of Mannheim until ousted in 1933 by the Nazis as "undesirable." He was a member of the Social Democratic party since 1911 and a civil administrator since 1916.

SHAW DOUBTS PEACE CAN ENDURE; CITES POLAND AND TRIESTE

LONDON, May 19 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw, in a reply written between paragraphs and on the margin of a questioning letter, today expressed doubt that Europe could keep the peace for long.

Asked whether he considered the prospects good for lasting peace based upon continuing coöperation of Britain, Russia, France and the United States, the 88 year old dramatist responded: "No. How can any one hope that men who have made such an unholy mess of Europe will now make a paradise of the world? How far will they cooperate when the German bayonet is no longer at their throats? Eden and Molotov, for instance."

"There is no harmony among the big powers," Shaw replied to a question about the Polish issue and the likelihood of its being settled amicably around the conference table. "Already Poland and Trieste are out of tune; and there will be dozens more discords. But Poland has to be set on its legs again somehow, harmoney or no harmony."

REDS EASE CURB ON REICH TRADE TO FIGHT FAMINE

MOSCOW, May 19 (AP)—The Red army command in Russian occupied Germany today reëstablished free trade and the profit system and encouraged peasants to sell or barter their surplus produce on the open market in a move to combat the serious threat of famine in the cities.

The new decrees, together with the establishment of a food ration in Berlin and Dresden greater than the Germans had under Hitler in the last days of the war, was reported to have made a deep impression on the German people.

The new measures were announced by the Russian commissar of foreign trade, Anastas I. Mikoyan, who told a Pravda correspondent that the Russians went into action after reports of near-famine in Berlin and Dresden.

Seek Quick Reconstruction

The decrees were ordered as a means of getting devastated territory quickly working again. They follow pretty much the regulations in the soviet union, where peasants are allowed to sell their surpluses for private profit. In some liberated areas, the Russians have allowed free trade for profit.

What form of taxation the Russian command plans to impose on private traders—or whether taxation will be suspended or credits given for it until Germany is functioning well enough to combat the threat of famine — was not announced.

Today's new decrees and previous announcements that German burgomasters were being employed in Russian occupied cities revealed that the soviets were making a serious effort to win the friendship of the Germans and counter Nazi propaganda concerning the "bolshevik menace."

Berlin Starvation Told

Mikoyan said there were shocking scenes of starvation in and around Berlin with thousands of men, women, and children constantly begging for bread scraps from Russian officers and soldiers.

He quoted letters from Red army soldiers saying that Berliners were devouring grass from the parks and bark from the trees in their great hunger.

"All these conditions," he said, "forced our command to take measures to improve the German food situation."

"But that is not the only reason," Mikoyan said after returning from a visit to Berlin and Dresden. "The morals and traditions of the soviet people prescribe that we humanely treat the peaceful inhabitants of conquered lands."

Mikoyan pointed out, however, that the measures were only for peaceful inhabitants and not for nazis or ardent supporters of national socialism.

Mikoyan did not define what ration the Germans were receiving.

SALAZAR RALLY FAILS

LISBON, Portugal, May 19 [Reuters]—An attempt to organize a demonstration in favor of Dr. Antonio Salazar's regime failed today when only about 3 per cent of the population obeyed an injunction to put out flags. When the Portuguese premier came out to speak, his words echoed round an almost empty square, rain having driven away the few who had come to hear him.

REPORT BRITAIN, U.S. WANT FRENCH TO QUIT ITALY

PARIS, May 19 (AP)—Responsible sources said today the United States and Britain were exerting pressure on France to withdraw troops from forward positions across the Italian border.

Government circles said the mixed French-Italian populations of the occupied border regions "have given voluntary manifestations" of a desire for French citizenship. They denied reports, however, that French commanders had held local plebiscites in these areas to determine whether they wanted to belong to France or Italy.

French sources said the areas were occupied across the Italian border up to a distance of 12 miles at some points in the course of advances during military operations.

They indicated the French government would strongly resist any efforts to force the troops to withdraw, saying French control over the area was dictated by military necessity after Italian operations there in 1940 demonstrated "all too clearly" that it was a danger zone to French security.

BELGIAN CHIEF ON WAY HOME

RIOTING SPREADS AS EX-CAPTIVES MARCH IN PARIS

400 Crash Thru Police Lines; Unrest Grows

BY ROBERT SAGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, May 19—Rioting and demonstrations by returning French prisoners in protest against the lack of food and clothing and a wide open black market became more widespread in Paris over the week-end.

This morning several hundred former prisoners, disgusted with filling out forms and other delays, demonstrated in the Latin quarter. There they were joined by 200 students who smashed the iron gates of a high school. Eight students were taken to a police station.

Yesterday more than 400 liberated Frenchmen in uniform broke thru four police lines guarding a house in the old quarter of the city where tenants were being expelled. Seizing furniture that had been moved out into the street, they returned it to the house.

Break Into Storehouse

The furniture was moved by police to a storehouse, but in the evening 30 of the demonstrators drove up to the storehouse in a truck, forced their way in, and were starting to carry off the furniture when police arrived and dispersed them.

The nightly demonstrations at the Theatre de la Michodiere against the actor Pierre Fresnay, suspected of having collaborated with the Germans, were joined last night by a group of former prisoners who climbed on the stage. Police dispersed the demonstrators. Other demonstrations were held, one at the town hall of Menilmontant, a working district.

The unrest also is based on the continued rise of living costs and official red tape, incompetence, and inaction.

Act on Food Crisis

Faced with a spreading strike movement, as well as the mounting wave of public discontent, the French governmet, meanwhile, moved to patch up the chief source of complaint by ordering a purchasing agent to proceed immediately to Argentina to negotiate for huge purchases of foodstuffs, particularly meat and grain.

The former prisoners have been given clothing tickets, double meat rations, and a bonus of 1,000 francs, but they are not able to buy a suit of clothes except on the black market, where prices run as high as $300, and there is no meat in the Paris butcher shops.

At the same time they see customers eating steaks, lobsters, eggs, and other "luxuries" at black market restaurants thruout the city.

Tired of spending the day standing in line or going from office to office, they paraded in the Champs Elysees and marched on the ministry of prisoners and deportees. At the ministry they were received by Minister Henri Frenay, who reportedly told them that the hitches were the fault of the war ministry and the allies.

Afterward they went thru the streets yelling for Frenay's resignation, a clean-up of the black market, and for shoes and clothing.

REVEALS NIMITZ SPURNS HELP OF OSS IN PACIFIC

He Plans to Use Own Intelligence

BY WALTER TROHAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., May 19—Rep. Shafer [R., Mich.] today made public an exchange of letters between Adm. Nimitz, commander in chief of naval forces in the Pacific, and Maj. Gen. William J. Donovan, chief of the office of strategic services, which disclose the admiral spurned OSS coöperation in the Pacific theater.

Earlier in the week it was revealed that Gen. MacArthur, commander in chief of the army forces against Japan, had turned thumbs down on OSS aid, stating he would rely on his own intelligence service.

The Michigan congressman, who is one of a group of congressmen who have been studying the operations of the hush-hush propaganda and intelligence agency, disclosed that Adm. Nimitz had politely, but nonetheless firmly opposed OSS entrance into the Pacific a year ago and has refused to change his opinion.

Forced to Retreat

As a result of the Nimitz-MacArthur stand, OSS has been forced to dismantle a Pacific organization which it had been building for several months.

In asking to be admitted to the Pacific, Donovan offered the admiral the use of special secret funds, made available by congress to be spent only on Donovan's personal certification among a series of OSS services. Donovan said OSS was ready to furnish:

1. Espionage and counter-espionage within the theater and its coordination with similar activities in adjoining theaters.

2. Training facilities for all types of irregular guerrilla warfare.

3. Trained base operators and field agents with special radio equipment.

Would Train Natives

4. Procure, train and equip natives with special weapons for sabotage, guerrilla warfare and subversive activities.

5. Study the psychological weakness of the Japanese soldier and civilian by technical analysis of captured letters and interrogation of prisoners.

6. Penetration of selected positions thru . . . [voluntarily censored by THE TRIBUNE because such penetration is being employed against Japan].

7. Furnish a group of outstanding scholars consisting of economists, historians, and scientists, who are trained in the mobilization and analysis of economic, political, sociological, and psychological material.

8. Provide for the appropriate use of a separate budget approved by congress, including "special secret funds to be spent only on my certification."

No Need for Service

In his reply, Adm. Nimitz wrote "Your offers of assistance are very much appreciated" but said there was no actual need for any considerable OSS personnel in his theater.

The admiral asked for one technical OSS expert but made it clear that assignment would not be permanent and was only for purposes of exchanging information.

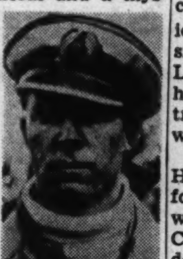
He requested the services "of a technical expert familiar with the details of all the weapons developed by the office of strategic services" and explained the expert's services "would be needed only temporarily for purposes of conferences and exchange of information.

"I am convinced that the success scored by MacArthur and Nimitz in the Pacific are due in no small measure to their decision to keep the OSS from cluttering up the area with misinformation and well meaning but ineffective propaganda," said Rep. Shafer.

"War is the business of fighting men, I learned in touring the European front, and is only retarded by the economists, psychologists, historians, and other joy riders in the OSS, OWI, and like organizations."

MYSTERY MAN ARRIVES IN BIG GERMAN U-BOAT

Boston, Mass., May 19 (AP)—A German air force general and a mysterious civilian were aboard the 1,600 ton Nazi submarine U-234 which came into the Portsmouth, N. H., base today shortly after a U-boat commander who surrendered earlier this week committed suicide in a Boston jail.



Capt. Lt. Steinhoff

Lutwaffe Lt. Gen. Ulrich Kessler was among the nine submarine passengers who included minor air and navy officers and a drab, dumpy man in civilian clothes, whose identity was not made known.

However, the general belief of observers was that the civilian was a technician who accompanied the bales of air plans, contents of which remained secret, reported aboard the submersible.

Destination Not Revealed

The destination of the crew members—six officers and 51 men—was not known but the nine passengers were believed to have been taken to Washington.

Kessler said nothing as he reached the dock, but the skipper of the U-boat, Johans Fehler, told a coast guard officer: "Your men treated me like a gangster."

"Just What You Are"

"That's just what you are," replied the coast guard officer, Lt. Charles Winslow of Portland, Me.

The bodies of two Japanese, which were reported by the navy aboard the U-boat when it radioed its surrender from a point 500 miles off Greenland while en route to Japan, were not aboard. Navy officers said the two apparently had been buried at sea after committing hara-kiri.

The commander who killed himself, Capt. Lt. Fritz Steinhoff of the U-783, which was brought to Portsmouth four days ago, punctured a wrist artery with part of an eyeglass he smashed in his Charles street jail cell in Boston, the 1st service command announced. He died in the Massachusetts General hospital.

Steinhoff and other members of his crew had been lodged in the civilian jail temporarily pending transfer to a prisoner of war camp.

Tale of a Hammond Organ that "could take it" and its owner who "couldn't take it with him" . . .
HEARING A HAMMOND ORGAN AGAIN was like
Paradise Regained
Corporal Bill Havemann of Villa Park, Illinois, missed the kind of music he and the fellows used to play for their club dances. . . . About the only music he'd heard since moving up to the Philippines from New Guinea was the whining rat-a-tat from thousands of "devil's pianos" and "bazookas," . . .
And then it happened. . . . An American civilian walked into the improvised chapel one morning . . . calmly announced he was "going back to the States." . . . He had a Hammond Organ that had withstood the Nips' bombing . . . said he couldn't take it along . . . and did they want it ! ! !
"Did we want it?" wrote Bill. "What do you think? Soon it was set up, and you can imagine how the men flocked around that Hammond from home. After all they had gone through, hearing Hammond Organ music again was like 'Paradise Regained'."

JAPS EXPECTED TO YIELD WHEN HOME ISLES FALL

One Word from Emperor Can End the War

[The air transport command of the army air forces recently took 13 American war correspondents on a 26,000 mile flying visit to military bases in the Pacific. The correspondents were received in conferences with all the leading military strategists, American, British, and Australian. Many things these leaders said were confidential, precluded from print by military security. Some general impressions are presented here by the Associated Press representative on his return to the United States.]

BY HAROLD STREETER

San Francisco, Cal., May 19 (AP)—Many of the top ranking army, navy and air strategists, mounting the all-out offensive in the Pacific believe:

Japan will quit the war when her military defeat becomes obvious rather than continue fanatical resistance.

Defeat will not likely become obvious to Japan until the Japanese homeland is invaded.

The emperor is a key figure in the Pacific's war picture and if he ever gives the word for his warring subjects to cease fire every Japanese, wherever he is, immediately will lay down his weapons.

There is no sound basis for speculating when the war will end. It could end in a relatively short time, and efforts are bent toward that result, but its duration is strictly up to Japan. Any effort of the enemy toward a compromise short of unconditional surrender is foredoomed.

Homeland Defeat Fatal

Japan cannot long wage an effective war in China and Manchuria if the homeland falls.

The key to success or failure in the Pacific is the supply line. The allies are winning because of brilliant successes in bridging the Pacific's staggering distances. Japan is losing, despite tough, bitter-end resistance, primarily because her supply lines are cut.

These impressions were obtained on a 26,000 mile air tour of the Pacific which took in the Marianas, the Philippines, Australia, and subsidiary island bases.

They are the product of conferences with such men as Gen. MacArthur, commander in chief of all army ground forces in the Pacific; Adm. Nimitz, commander in chief of Pacific naval forces; Adm. Bruce Fraser, commander of the British Pacific fleet; Gen. Thomas Blamey, commander of Australian ground forces, and such air leaders as Gen. Kenney, commander of the far eastern air force; Lt. Gen. Curtis Le May, key man in the B-29 raids on Japan, and Maj. Gen. Willis Hale, commanding army air forces in the Pacific ocean areas. Navy and marine air strategists also were consulted.

One of the high ranking leaders, a keen student of Japanese thinking, discussed frankly the likelihood of the greatest revolution in history within the Japanese homeland once the Japanese man on the street sees for himself that his war lords are not infallible.

Enemy Navy Crushed.

The broad assessment of the situation currently is this:

JAPANESE NAVY—Beyond all doubt, it is a crushed force. Adm. Thomas Kinkaid, commander of the American 7th fleet, said, however, that should Japan ever manage to get her still usable warships all in one spot they could cause trouble.

JAPANESE AIR FORCES—Altho deteriorating, it still has destructive power, particularly among its suicide squadrons; its planes are good and there still are many of them; but the earlier losses in personnel have been heavy, resulting in a speeding up in training and a consequent drop in the quality of airmen.

JAPANESE ARMY—At least one-fourth of it either has been destroyed or rendered strategically impotent. The other three-fourths comprise a formidable force; the Japanese are tough, relentless fighters—but they can't hold out if their factories fail them. One famed American leader said the job is to defeat the Japs "without bleeding us to death."

The drive toward Tokyo seems destined to remain predominantly an American show.

ILLINOIS YANK HAS BAD NIGHT IN A FOXHOLE

SOMEWHERE IN THE PACIFIC—[Delayed]—Marine Pvt. William D. Wright 26, of Kansas, Ill., spent a night of terror in a foxhole on Iwo Jima expecting any moment to be blasted by the Japanese.

"We could hear the Japs below us digging, digging, and we waited in the darkness, expecting each moment to be our last," Pvt. Wright said. "Three of us had dug a foxhole on the nose of a bluff, overlooking the entire north end of the island. Our job was to watch for Jap attempts to land troops, and we dug in directly over a cave that our men had sealed three days before."

There was an opening into the cave below. If they dropped grenades thru the opening they didn't know if their foxhole could withstand the explosions. But they dropped a half dozen grenades. "The blast was terrific but the ground held and we didn't hear any more from the Japs," said Wright.

4 DIVISIONS OF FRENCH READY FOR PACIFIC WAR

LONDON, May 19 [Reuters]—A French expeditionary force to take part in the Pacific war is already four divisions strong, Paris radio reported tonight.

Expressing appreciation of the statement made last night by President Truman after his meeting with Georges Bidault, the French foreign minister, the radio added:

"France, like the United States, will not consider the present conflict terminated before Japan is beaten and the French territories in the far east are liberated."

Okinawa Yanks' Own Radio Goes on Air Today

OKINAWA, May 19 (AP)—The Okinawa radio, newest addition to the United States military forces' radio service in the Pacific, will go on the air tomorrow. Broadcasting will be on a daily schedule, with programs built around the rebroadcast of United States radio show transcriptions. Short wave news reports will be picked up from San Francisco, Cal., and rebroadcast. The station has a 50 watt semi-portable outfit but will eventually have a 1,000 watt transmitter.

33,429 YANKS KILLED SO FAR IN PACIFIC WAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., May 19—The American drive to Tokyo, starting with Guadalcanal and including the fighting on Okinawa up to May 9, has cost the nation casualties of 33,429 killed, 125,477 wounded, and 4,175 missing, the office of war information reported today. The total is 163,081.

On the credit side of the ledger are 498,697 Japanese killed or taken prisoner. Only about 10,000 Japs have been taken prisoner, OWI says, so they have lost about 14 men killed for every American who died in the 27 island battles we have fought to date.

Thousands More Drowned

In addition, the OWI report says, many thousands of Japs drowned or were killed in ships and barges sunk or damaged by aerial or naval action. Other thousands have been left wounded or diseased in the garrisons cut off and isolated.

Army casualties for these campaigns total 17,681 dead, 64,697 wounded, and 1,262 missing. Navy and marine totals are 15,784 killed, 60,750 wounded, and 2,913 missing.

Our greatest loss in life occurred in the Philippines, where the army casualties were 10,432 killed, 35,699 wounded, and 507 missing. Jap casualties there were 237,256.

OWI says the conquest of Iwo Jima cost the navy and the marines 4,189 killed and 15,308 wounded in annihilating 21,200 Japs. The figures given for the continuing battle on Okinawa are 3,468 marine and navy deaths and 2,771 army deaths. The wounded total 14,248 for the marines and navy and 11,675 for the army. Jap losses are 37,235.

4,453 Died in Marianas

Conquest of the Marianas Islands cost the navy and the marines 4,453 killed, 20,273 wounded, and 719 missing, but the Japanese bag there totaled 53,195, second only to the number wiped out in the Philippines. In the Palaus Islands 13,460 Japs were killed or captured at a cost to the marines and navy of 1,198 killed and 4,974 wounded.

The capture of Sansapor cost the army only 44 casualties—13 killed—while the enemy lost 959 killed.

MP (MONKEY PATROL) ENDS YANK PROBLEM OF TOO MANY KIDS

WITH THE AMERICAL DIVISION, Philippines [Delayed]—(AP).—A monkey and her great dislike for children has solved a big problem around the 164th infantry's mess hall.

Hordes of Filipino children, with a special liking for C-ration stew, bully beef and sausage, besieged the enlisted men's mess and disrupted each meal for days. Sgt. Michael Barry, of Albert Lea, Minn., and Corp. Roy Thorselius, of Chicago, the cooks, couldn't control the children and things were in an uproar until "Felicia" joined the outfit.

"Felicia," a tiny monkey, was picked up as a pet. She went into rages when children were about. The cooks fitted her up with a band marked MP—"monkey patrol"—and gave her enough rope to cover the mess hall perimeter. She brought the youngsters under control and now the GIs eat in peace.

MIDWEST BOY RELIES ON HIS 'SECRET' ARM

BY WALTER SIMMONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

TUGBOK, Mindanao, May 19—Pvt. Gareth E. Hudson, Cainsville, Mo., has an infantry regiment excited over his "secret weapon." His buddies noticed that the quiet, serious soldier spent most of his spare time reading his Bible. When the regiment went into the Mindanao battle he continued to study whenever he was free from the dangerous duty of evacuating the wounded from the front in his jeep.

On these trips the drivers were almost always shot at by Jap snipers and some of the vehicles were knocked out by mines tossed by the Japs. But Hudson never was shot at.

Soon men crowded about him, teasing him for his secret. In reply he handed them his Bible. It is his explanation of never having been shot at on the worst sniper infested roads of the Philippine campaign.

NEW JAP MOVES AROUSE PEACE TALK IN CAPITAL

Report Tokyo Is Looking for a Way Out

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., May 19—Peace talk echoed thru the capital today as the Japs began abandoning southeastern Asia and the British press reported the Japs are looking for a way out of the war.

Chinese reoccupation of the city of Foochow, announced in Chungking, brought a wave of speculation as to whether this is not the first Jap step toward peace. It was held possible that the Jap withdrawal in front of the Chinese may be similar to the German withdrawal in front of the Anglo-American forces while they offered resistance to the Russians.

Japs Quitting Ports

This supposition was given wide credence because there were indications that the Japs were withdrawing from Wenchow, 220 miles south of Shanghai, and also from Amoy and Swatow, ports above Hong Kong. It is felt here that the Japs would prefer to have China hold all her territory in Asia, rather than have Russia increase her holdings by adding Korea, Manchuria, and Inner Mongolia to the soviet union as the reported price of aid in the war against Japan.

The British press confirmation of Jap peace bids attracted wide interest here because it appeared in the Yorkshire Post, which is regarded as the mouthpiece of British Foreign Minister Eden. The newspaper is owned by the Eden family.

"Fishing" for Peace

"Japan is seeking a way out," the paper declared in its leading editorial.

"The rejection of any proposals short of unconditional surrender should not involve the allies in even a moment's reflection. The destruction of Japan's military strength will not suffice as long as the state Shinto [religion] is left to warp the souls of the Japanese."

Earlier in the week official circles had disclosed that individual Japanese in neutral countries were fishing for signs of peace, but these sources insisted that nothing approaching an official proffer of surrender had been made.

Japan "Annoyed."

San Francisco, Cal., May 19 (AP)—Tokyo broadcasters today said allied reports of unofficial Japanese peace feelers were a "source of great annoyance" in Japan and were branded as enemy propaganda.

Nothing is more remote from the Japanese mind than peace with the enemy, said Isamu Inouye, an editor of the Nipponese Domei news agency, in a broadcast heard by the FCC.

The talk is merely evidence that the Americans and English are tired of the war and want to get out of it, said a Spanish language broadcast from Tokyo, intended especially for delegates to the San Francisco conference.

Children in Training

Meanwhile, radio Tokyo said that Japanese school children are being trained to throw hand grenades in preparation for the expected American invasion.

The speaker, in glorifying the training, told how Okinawa school children, "gripping hand grenades in their small hands," charged to their deaths in American positions—a story which had no confirmation from United States sources.

YANKS BATTLE ON MINDANAO TO TAKE AIR FIELD

MANILA, May 20 [Sunday]—(AP)—United States doughboys fought a sharp battle for Sasa airdrome in the Davao sector of Mindanao Island Friday. On Luzon Yanks and guerrillas carried on an annihilation campaign against a large Japanese force encircled west of the captured Ipo dam near Manila.

Twenty-fourth division Americans captured seven six-inch enemy guns at the southern fringe of Sasa airdrome, north of captured Davao. Other units seized three five-inch naval guns on Samal Island in Davao gulf.

Knock Out 30 Pillboxes

Japanese infiltration was so widespread in the mainland jungle battlefield that an American burial detail found itself cut off from the cemetery and had to fight its way thru enemy lines to bury the dead.

Infantry men knocked out 30 pillboxes and gun positions to take one knob of Polomo-Libby hill, a long, natural defense line.

In central Mindanao the 31st division advanced along the Sayre highway four miles north of Valencia, where two airdromes were captured Thursday. American planes are operating already off these fields.

Bomb Formosa Air Fields

Bombers raked Formosa from Atsuyama in the north to Takao in the south, pounding air fields and factories, including alcohol and cement plants, a copper works and the Shoka aircraft assembly center. Considerable rolling stock was wrecked and bridges and buildings were demolished.

Bombers sweeping the China sea and coast hit installations in the Yangtze river area in particular. A salvage craft, a freighter, and two coastal ships were sunk. Rail facilities and motor traffic were harassed.

YANKS BATTLING YAMASHITA PLAN IN PHILIPPINES

Long Fight Against Caves and Tunnels Predicted

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA

Four campaigns are under way in the Philippines, main fighting field of Gen. MacArthur's Southwest Pacific command. Three of them are under the 6th army, and one under the 8th army.

The most northerly, and probably the most important of the campaigns, is under way just east of Lingayen gulf. This campaign is directed against what is believed to be the main Japanese force under Gen. Yamashita, a cautious leader. He took over after the defeat of the Japanese last autumn on Leyte. There Japan made strenuous efforts to fight back, reënforcing its troops both by air and sea, but the Nipponese were thoroly beaten.

America's enormous superiority on the sea and in the air was a material factor in our success. In view of that experience, Gen. Yamashita has not since tried to fight off our sea and air forces. In no place has the seashore been defended; and in no place have Japanese troops come out into the open to fight.

Japs Using New Plan

It was believed when our troops landed at Lingayen early in January and found no opposition that the Japanese had been surprised, and, as stated in the official announcements, had been caught off base. There has been no confirmation of this theory, and the uniform action of the main Japanese forces in most sectorr points to a plan which is presumably that of Gen. Yamashita. This plan apparently is to withdraw to the mountains and the jungle, where our naval forces cannot get at them and where our air forces cannot locate them. The Philippines are full of mountains, and in these the Japanese have constructed positions in which caves and tunnels are prominent features.

Cave and tunnel warfare is not new. It was extensively used between 1915 and 1917 by the Austro-Hungarian army on the northeast frontier of Italy. It was then realized that that kind of position was a hard one to capture. Japan has developed this special form of fighting.

Withdraw to Mountains

Yamashita did not defend Lingayen gulf. Our naval and air bombardment fell on empty villages, and countryside. Most of the Japs had withdrawn to the mountains—their main forces to the east, and a smaller number to the west.

The mountains are close to the shore on both sides of Lingayen gulf. Across the base of the gulf is the central Luzon plain, which stretches toward Manila 110 miles away, and is 30 to 40 miles wide. Yamashita is somewhere in the mountains which line the plain.

The main Japanese position extends over a front of 100 miles covering the northern part of Luzon. Behind this line are several important provinces. The Japanese occupied area is roughly 180 miles long and 120 miles wide. From the south, where Gen. MacArthur's troops are moving up, only two roads lead over the mountains into north Luzon. One of these goes thru Baguio, and the other thru Balete pass, about 50 miles to the south.

Caves Protect Roads

Fighting along the lines of approach to the Japanese commenced early in February, by which time Yamashita's plan had become evident. Both roads were protected by a series of cave and tunnel positions. After three and a half months of fighting, the Americans have taken Baguio, which, in an air line, is 20 miles inland from Lingayen gulf, and Balete pass.

Beyond Baguio and the Balete pass is the fertile Cagayan valley. This is where the finest Philippine tobacco is grown. Many other crops also are raised and the area is self-sustaining as to food. Japs could live there indefinitely, and are now doing it. Beyond the American lines are 40 to 50 miles of jungle mountain territory to go thru before the troops reach level valley ground. This northern campaign may require considerable slow and tedious fighting before it is won.

CHINESE RETAKE FOOCHOW; DRIVE OUT 1,000 JAPS

Enter Big Port After Being Repulsed

CHUNGKING, China, May 19 (AP)—The high command announced tonight that Chinese assault forces had reoccupied the great city of Foochow, freeing the first of China's important coastal treaty ports from Japanese rule.

It was the second time in four years that the Chinese had won back the strategic port, 125 miles northwest of the Japanese island of Formosa. The former capital of Fukien province had been held by the Japanese since October, 1944, and previously was enemy occupied for five months in 1941.

There were indications that Foochow, lying in the coastal defense region where an American invasion of the Chinese coast has been envisaged, was abandoned by the Japanese. There also were signs that enemy forces were pulling out of Wenchow, Amoy, and Swatow.

Success Follows Repulse

Against independent reports which suggested that the Chinese occupied Foochow virtually without bloodshed, the high command said the city of 322,725 persons was taken in a Chinese assault that smashed enemy resistance. It said Chinese forces which were driven out of the city Tuesday night after a brief penetration received reënforcements Wednesday and launched an attack Thursday morning. By evening the Chinese had beaten back the Japanese garrison and broken into the town, completing its occupation Friday

Chinese quarters estimated the Japanese had about 1,000 troops inside the city. These forces were pursued eastward nine miles along the north bank of the Min river to the outskirts of the small Min estuary port of Mamoi.

Ports Exposed to Bombs

Reports indicated that Wenchow, a port in Chekiang province 225 miles south of Shanghai, also might be evacuated by the Japanese while there were signs that the Japanese at Amoy, 135 miles southwest of Foochow, and at Swatow, 170 miles northeast of Hong Kong, also were preparing to retire to Hong Kong.

These ports are exposed to American bombing from the Philippines and are virtually cut off from Japan and Formosa.

In Hunan province, P-51 Mustang fighter bombers of the United States 14th air force joined Chinese forces pursuing retreating enemy forces toward the Japanese supply base of Shaoyang [Paoching] on the road to the communications city of Hengyang.

American pilots strafed Japanese troops beyond Shanmen, 46 miles northwest of Shaoyang, killing more than 100 enemy soldiers in one attack, an American bulletin said.

TWIN B-29 RAIDS BOMB TOKYO AND INDUSTRIAL CITY

GUAM, May 20 [Sunday]—(AP)—More than 300 Super Fortresses, balked by adverse weather from attacking Tokyo in force, unloaded 2,000 tons of demolition bombs yesterday on the Hamamatsu industrial area of Honshu, 60 miles southeast of Nagoya.

The 21st bomber command said Hamamatsu was a secondary target, hammered because of thick cloud formations over the capital. Radio Tokyo reported that the B-29 crews nonetheless let a few bombs drop on Tokyo.

Japanese broadcasters reported that 30 more Super Forts visited Japan's strategic waters, sowing mines in Wakasada bay and Bungo strait.

150 Planes Bomb Tokyo

The Tokyo attack was reported by the 20th air force at Washington. It said Super Forts, probably upwards of 150, bombed the Japanese capital during daylight.

Bombing was by instrument from a medium altitude thru an undercast, making observation impossible, the bulletin said. There was little fighter opposition and only moderate flak.

Demolition bombs were used in both raids in contrast to the two heavy incendiary strikes against Nagoya, great aircraft production center, earlier this week. In the Nagoya attacks, by 500 Super Forts each time, the Yank bombardiers unloaded more than 2,200,000 six pound fire bombs.

11 Square Miles of Nagoya Hit

Before the war the city of Hamamatsu, with a population of 166,000, was a textile manufacturing center. After hostilities opened, the city's industries were converted to war production, such as plane propellers. The city has four air fields, military bases, and is a railroad center.

Maj. Gen. Curtis Lemay, commander of the 21st bomber command, said four raids on Nagoya had destroyed 11.3 square miles of that third largest Japanese city. That is 22 per cent of Nagoya's area.

Thirty-three specific military targets, including two Mitsubishi aircraft factories, the Mitsubishi Electric Manufacturing company, three Aichi aircraft works, and Atsuta factory of the Nagoya arsenal, were virtually destroyed or heavily damaged in the four raids—March 12 and 19 with demolition bombs; Monday and Thursday with a total of more than 2,000,000 fire bombs.

Lemay also said 59.58 square miles of six of Japan's largest cities, including 17 square miles of Tokyo, have been bombed out or damaged by B-29 attacks.

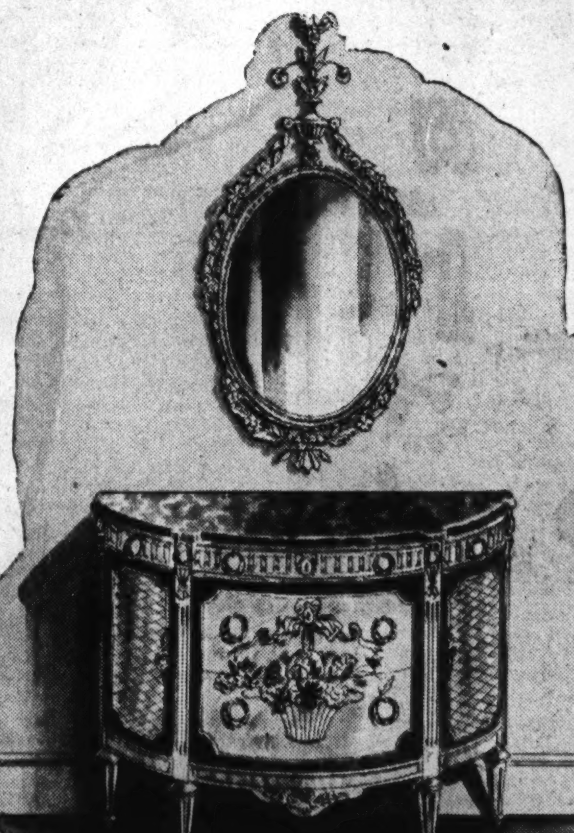
John M. Smyth Company ESTABLISHED 1867 tells you the story behind the furniture

Named for a Lady's Head-Dress
. . . Because It Was So Decorative

That graceful piece of furniture we know as the commode was named for a very elegant feminine coiffure of Louis XIV's time . . . the curls dressed high over a silk-covered wire frame. The commode as furniture came into vogue about this same time, and was so named because it also was very decorative, with rich ormolu mountings, fine marquetry and carving, and those lavish inlays of rare woods, tortoise shell, ivory and various metals named "Boulle work" after their originator. The commode's characteristic curving or bombe shape showed to advantage these rich decorations. Because of the enormous hooped skirts which fashionable beauties of this time wore, wide open spaces in the center of a room were needed for their locomotion. Therefore, furniture such as the commode, which could be placed against the wall, was highly favored.

For Accents of Elegance . . . Choose Fine

Commodes



A commode of lovely French design has a marble top, and exquisite rosewood veneers with satinwood and marquetry inlays. Charmingly accented with ormolu decoration. Five drawers; two cupboards, 43x17x36" $495

The Mirror has a gold finished frame, with an interesting wreath motif. 25x55". $96.00

As richly decorative and useful today as when they first became popular, commodes can play an important role in many a lovely room scheme. In fine woods, often with exquisite inlaid or painted designs, they create a rich play of light and shadow . . . all the more effective because of their gracefully curving shapes. If a balanced arrangement is desired in any room, a pair of charming commodes can achieve it beautifully. Or use just one beneath a harmonious mirror, a good painting or an attractive wall hanging. The deep drawers or shelves in a commode mean convenient storage space. You'll find lovely commodes of French, English, Italian or Early American inspiration, as well as smartly modern examples in the John M. Symth Store's fine collections. All are of excellent quality and design, and they are moderately priced.

YANKS PINNED IN TRENCH WITH JAPS THEY SLEW

Chicagolanders Among Mindanao Heroes

BY WALTER SIMMONS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MINDANAO ISLAND, May 14 [Delayed]—The tired rain-soaked men of an infantry battalion commanded by Maj. Nicholas Sloan of Hoopeston, Ill., came back from the hotly contested Mintal region today for a rest before reëntering the 24th division's roaring battle against the Japanese in the Davao sector.

Pvt. Theodore Majcher, 3811 S. Honore st., Chicago, was credited with killing five Japs in two weeks of fighting. Sgt. Stephen Lazarz, 4721 S. Harding av., Chicago, commander of the squad in which Majcher is first scout, told of one incident.

"He grabbed his tommy gun and jumped into some zig-zag trenches where some Japs still were holding out," Lazarz said. "I saw him get three of them myself. Another time a couple of Japs were stirring up a little trouble around our command post. Majcher went out stalking with his tommy gun and got them both."

Dead Japs Share Trench

One night Sgt. Lazarz' squad killed seven Japs in a trench and then was pinned down and had to spend the night in the same trench with the dead Japs.

Pvt. Joseph Bytnar, 1755 W. 17th st., Chicago, is a light machine gunner with an outfit that was trapped in a coconut grove and surrounded by enemy snipers. Bytnar and the others manned two machine guns which fought a bitter rear guard action, enabling the unit to escape.

Lt. Angelo Buttice, 2628 S. Union av., Chicago, is executive officer of B company in which 2d Lt. Anthony Procento, 423 S. Oakley blvd., is a platoon leader. This company suffered heavily in attempting to cross a river and take a position which a battalion was later required to crush. "Our worst time," said Pvt. Joseph Rutsky, another Chicagoan, "was at night. The Japs were running around in our perimeter like it was a parade ground."

Counter-Attack Broken

Lt. Maurice Fosse of Otto, Ill., commander of a heavy weapons platoon, and Pvt. Cornelius Cronin, 103 S. Kedzie av., Chicago, members of a mortar platoon, were others who returned safely from the bitter fighting.

They told of Maj. Sloan and an artillery observer remaining behind as the battalion pulled out to be replaced by another. The two men stayed until the unit had withdraw directing the shell fire which broke up a heavy Jap counter-attack.

Elsewhere, Corp. Earl Morrison, formerly of Quincy, Ill., now of Eugene, Ore., and Pvt. Frederick Deylitz of Muskegon, Mich., were ambushed while riding in a jeep. Both escaped unhurt tho Corp. Morrison's handkerchief was riddled by mortar fragments which wrecked a cigaret case in his pocket.

Near Cabaguio, north of Davao, L company of one regiment beat off a fanatical night attack by 200 Japs who left 49 dead behind after penetrating to within 25 yards of the company's perimeter center.

Battle in Pouring Rain

Lt. William Paull, Los Angeles, Cal., a company commander, credited 2d Lt. Lowell Hibner of Portage, Wis., with the major share of credit for repelling this attack which cost the Yanks seven men in a 4½ hour battle fought in pouring rain.

"He was everywhere organizing resistance as we slowly pulled our perimeter back," said Lt. Paull. "We used everything in the infantry book—even firing mortars at 75 yards when 200 yards is supposed to be their minimum range.

Pvt. Walter Barnard of Swoyerville, Pa., and Pvt. Glen Stover of Beckley, W. Va., were blown into a hole by a mortar shell but crawled up and resumed their machine gun fire within 15 yards of the enemy. One man beat a Jap to death with a rifle butt and three others killed Japs with captured bayonets.

Lt. Col. Thomas Compere of Highland Park, Ill., the 24th division personnel officer, continued to have adventures. Returning from a trip he became lost on a maze of roads near Davao and just missed striking a land mine by swerving his jeep and running into a bank. He stopped to examine the mine and found it was wired to three others—all large bombs which would have blown his jeep sky high.

First 24 Yanks Leave China Under Point Plan

CHUNKING, China, May 19 (AP)—The Chinese combat command—American liaison and combat advisory organization under Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure—has sent its first shipment of personnel home under the war department's point system. Included were 23 enlisted men and one officer, averaging 68 months' army service. One Illinois man was in the group.

ADVANCED A.T.C. BASE IN CHINA, May 13 [Delayed] — Junior Clenaghan is the air transport command's only tail gunner and only newspaper boy. The jobs are interdependent. Since Junior delivers his papers to the Chinese near enemy lines, he needs protection. Thus, he makes deliveries in a Liberator bomber loaned by the 14th air force and Junior, when not tossing papers out of windows, is available to man the tail gun.

So far Junior hasn't had a bit of trouble from Japs trying to muscle in on his newspaper route.

The paper is a four page sheet. Since it is written in Chinese, Junior hasn't the least idea what he is peddling. But that makes no difference. It would be silly for Junior to shout the headlines from the waist window of a Liberator.

Junior's regulation name is Cpl. Albert Clenaghan. He's from Babylon, Long Island.

For two years Sgt. Michael A. Adaskevich, 3145 N. New England av., Chicago, has been rigging machines and tools to keep A.T.C. planes flying. Inventing machines takes ingenuity, Mike concedes, but it takes much more cleverness to get tools out of passing airplanes. Mike has always had a personal interest in keeping the planes fit because he never knew when one would be piloted by his cousin, Lt. Nick Adaskevich. Nick is on his way home to Chicago.

School teachers. School teachers. school teachers. The life of Lt. Foster Lee, 343 Evans st., Aurora, Ill., is haunted by them. As personnel officer, Lee is supposed to see that, technically speaking, round pegs don't get put in square holes. Lately, it seems all the men Lee interviews were school teachers before getting in the army. "What can you do with school teachers?" Lee wails, assigning them to jobs in the repair shops, the radio room, or the kitchen.

One look at Ursula and you know she's a lady of mystery. Last name is Yu and she's from Hong Kong. In her fascinating Sino-English, she tells how her husband, a teacher, had both legs broken in the Jap bombing of Hong Kong. Being a British subject, he was kept under guard in a hospital. After four months, when his legs healed sufficiently for him to walk, Ursula masqueraded as a nurse and smuggled her husband from the hospital. A boat took them to south China. Coolie-carried chairs took them inland. Now Ursula is secretary for Maj. Robert Lawrence, former Atlanta, Ga., newspaperman who is public relations officer for the China A. T. C. Her husband has joined the British army here. He's a sergeant already.

FORMER CHICAGO COP RUNS DOWN MINDANAO SPIES

BY WALTER SIMMONS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Maj. Hurley

DAVAO, Mindanao, P. I., May 19—The problem of handling captured Jap civilians and weeding out disloyal Filipinos on Mindanao is giving a former Chicago policeman the hardest job of his career.

Maj. Joseph P. Hurley, 4106 Monticello av., Chicago, a police secretary on military leave, has become known as "the sultan of Mindanao."

In other Philippine areas there was not much trouble, as the natives were found to be about 95 per cent loyal. But in the Davao area, which for 25 years has had a heavy Jap population, the figures come close to being reversed. Jap sympathizers have been a tough problem for the army.

Many Jap Informers

Many were undercover informers for the Kempeitai—the Jap Gestapo—which had the civil population organized on the familiar block espionage basis. Hundreds are suspected of still being active spies for the Japs. Thousands took to the hills to help the Japs fight against the Americans, and are still there.

In some cases the Yanks have dealt with the spies out of hand. In the Mintal area a civilian walked into the American lines, looked over the installations, and then took off toward the Jap positions. He was mowed down by machine gun fire.

In Davao the soldiers were ordered to cut every communication wire when the accuracy of Jap artillery proved that there were spotters within the city.

Bodies of 16 Found

But all the civilians are not disloyal. In two days the bodies of 16 Filipinos, tied to logs and with their throats cut, floated down the Davao river.

Among Maj. Hurley's assistants is Sgt. Francis Dillman, 9058 Ada st., Chicago.

One lieutenant in the Philippine army had turned traitor and informed on 30 guerrillas who were publicly decapitated at Davao. The Yanks are looking for this Filipino.

He was commissioned in the air force last March 10. Surviving are his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Chester Ihle; a sister, Jean, a WAVE stationed at New Orleans, and a brother, Pvt. FUROR AROUSED BY CIO HIRING OF LEGISLATORS

Lansing, Mich., May 19 [Special]—State officials were indignant today at disclosure that the CIO state, county, and municipal workers' union has employed Sen. Alvin C. Hampton [D., Negaunee] and Rep. Casper P. Kenny [D., Flint] to help recruit union members among state employes.

Lt. Gov. Vernon J. Brown said it appeared "this is worse than previous comparable situations because these two men are being asked to organize state employes, who might be expected to fear legislative reprisals if they refused to join."

Union spokesmen said any criticism is motivated by anti-labor prejudices and maintained unions have as much right as any one to employ lawmakers at legitimate duties.

Foss O. Baker, secretary-treasurer for the union in Michigan, said Hampton and Kenny are being paid $60 a week.

Civil service commissioners were said to be particularly indignant, because they have clashed with Baker. Baker had sought an $1,800 annual wage for state workers and a 40 hour week with time and a half for overtime. Refusal of the commissioners to accede to these demands brought union threats to instruct members to refuse to work more than 40 hours a week unless paid overtime and to defy a commission ruling against political activity.

ROTARY LEADERS WILL HEAR PLEA AGAINST MOVING

Chicago's future as the headquarters of Rotary International, which has 250,000 members in 3,000 clubs thruout the world, is expected to be decided at a meeting of Rotary's directors here Thursday.

At that time the board, meeting to act officially on a proposal to transfer the headquarters to Denver, Colo., will hear an appeal to retain them in Chicago, the organization's birthplace. Chicago has been Rotary's headquarters since the club's founding in 1910.

A subcommittee of 10, headed by Thomas B. Freeman, chairman of the all-Chicago executive committee for retention of Rotary International headquarters in Chicago, will appear before the board to voice its plea on behalf of Chicago. The committee is comprised of 200 non-Rotarian business executives.

BOMB CRIPPLED U.S. BATTLESHIP FIGHTS 5 DAYS

Tell of New Mexico's Action in Philippines

San Francisco, Cal., May 19 (AP)—The battleship New Mexico, hit by a Japanese aerial bomb on Jan. 6 which killed 30 including her skipper, lived up to her nickname The Queen and continued her pre-invasion bombardment of Lingayen gulf in the Philippines on schedule, the 12th naval district announced today. After repairs at Pearl Harbor she is back in action.

The bomb hit on the navigation bridge killing the commander, Capt. Robert W. Flemming, U. S. N.; Lt. Gen. Herbert, Lumsden, British royal marines observer, and a Time magazine correspondent, William Chickering of Honolulu and Piedmont, Cal.

British Admiral Uninjured

The commander of the British Pacific fleet, Adm. Fraser, was aboard but was uninjured.

Two anti-aircraft guns were knocked out by the bomb but others continued their effective fire on enemy planes.

Repair parties quickly put out the fires and cleared the wreckage and "for the remainder of the day and until the beaches were secured some five days later," the announcement said, "the New Mexico continued her scheduled bombardment."

Ship's First Damage

This was the first damage sustained by the 26 year old, 33,400 ton battleship, once the flagship of the Pacific fleet.

Shortly after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor the New Mexico, which had been in service in the Atlantic, rejoined the Pacific fleet and took part in the Aleutians campaign. Thereafter she participated in the Gilbert Islands, Marshall Islands, Marianas, and Philippines offensives.

IDENTIFIES MAN FREED IN BURMA AS AN OLD FRIEND

A news story cabled to THE TRIBUNE from its Burma correspondent, Alfred Wagg, and printed Friday, is the first news Mrs. D. T. Clark, 5326 Cornell av., has had of an old family friend, Thomas Walker, since the Japs invaded Burma in 1942. Walker was found among natives at the Rangoon airport when it was recaptured recently.

Walker's experiences under Japanese treatment had so clouded his mind that he was under the impression he was an American, Wagg cabled. Mrs. Clark said he is a British subject, a pensioned civil service employe who will be 79 on Nov. 1. The picture of Bob Clark, found in Walker's possession, is that of her husband, who died two years ago.

Mrs. Clark said the last word they had of Walker was in March, 1942, when two of her cousins, Hugh and Nick Rorke, urged Walker to board one of the planes evacuating civilians from Burma ahead of the Jap invasion. Walker refused, she said, insisting that women and children be given first place in the planes.

MANY NATIONS WELL FED AS U. S. SHOPS FOR MEAT

Survey Shows Shortages Here and Abroad

Washington, D. C., May 18 (AP)—The war finally drove home to Americans today that they are no longer the world's best eaters.

Meat stores all over the nation are empty. The steak lover is eating fish. Where butter is available the housewife can't afford the ration points.

It isn't going to get any better for many months. There'll be enough to eat but the diet will be simple.

That is the unvarnished picture for 1945, at least while this nation and its allies are still fighting Japan and helping to avert starvation in war ravaged Europe.

Others to Fare Better

Some other countries, in fact, will eat better than America, a new and paradoxical situation.

The Associated Press surveyed the situation thru local officials in this country, the federal agriculture department and sources abroad, and found:

1. Only a few sections—in the far west—have anything like normal meat suplies. Poultry is disappearing. The strain on the egg supply is being felt. Many places don't even have bologna or lunch meats. Stores are closing.

2. Germany faces possible famine next winter; the French and Belgians are solving their problem pretty well, the Balkans are in dire straits; Holland, Norway, Finland, and Italy must have help if they are to eat; Spain, Egypt, Denmark, Sweden, and Canada are eating well, and in many commodities don't even have to ration.

Situation in America

In this country, says the agriculture department, the outlook for the next six months is:

There will be enough essential foods to maintain good diet but that diet will have to be plain. Reduced supplies of meats, fats, and sugar will lower the energy value of that diet from 5 to 10 per cent. Americans ate 150 pounds of meat per capita in 1944. The supply this year has been at a 115 pound rate but that may go up to 126 in fall. We are eating so many eggs as substitute that a serious shortage of that protein may develop. The calories available daily will be 3,200 compared to 3,500 last year. Only very active men and boys need 3,000 or more. In many areas of Europe it is being held to 1,200 to 1,800.

The sugar situation may be approaching a crisis.

Report to Blame OPA

A source close to the house food committee said the group is drafting a sharply critical report charging the government with mishandling sugar stocks.

The individual asked that his name be withheld. He said the document, which may be filed with the house next week, can be expected to blame OPA, war food administration, and other government agencies for an approaching sugar crisis that may be the worst of the war.

War Mobilization Director Vinson yesterday announced a program for increased subsidies to boost the meat supply but he couldn't promise any immediate effect. Meantime, the government's food experts urged a shift to more of a grain diet.

Chickens in Black Market

Here was the domestic situation at week-end:

MIDWEST—Iowa, leading producer of chickens, said most of the output was going into black market and not even the army was getting its proper share. A freeze order by the army was expected in two weeks. The state may produce 10 million fewer chickens than last year. Chicago couldn't meet the demand for meats and fish and a truck strike didn't help the situation any. St. Louis, Mo., had to depend on eggs and cheese. Kansas City, Mo., had its principal troubles in sugar, tho even lunch meats were growing scarce. Minneapolis, Minn., had butter, little poultry, expected beef to pick up in two or three months. Wisconsin took its own steps. The legislature passed a bill to permit growers to slaughter and sell on their own premises tho OPA warned it would encourage black markets. Biggest cheese producer, Wisconsin didn't have enough aged cheese to go around.

Limit Eggs in Northeast

NEW ENGLAND—OPA officials notified the state government the meat situation could be expected to improve in another month. Boston was without meat or poultry; eggs were being limited to one dozen a customer. A serious shortage was hitting hospitals and schools in Connecticut. Rhode Island hit its lowest meat supply point and local slaughter fell 52 per cent in four weeks.

EAST—In New York hundreds of butcher shops closed. Poultry receipts of 6,000 pounds in one day were an all-time low. The egg demand was terrific and customers streamed into the fish markets; salt water fish is plentiful. The city confiscated 3,500 pounds of black market poultry. New Jersey's poultry men urged a system of government purchase and allocation of poultry. Baltimore, Md., restaurants served seafood almost exclusively; stores went on a five day week. Philadelphia, Pa., hospitals and war plant cafeterias were unable to buy enough meat for more than one meal a week. Plant officials told WPB production is being retarded as a result. A meat industry attorney said it was the shortest meat supply since the Civil war.

Little Meat in South

SOUTH—Atlanta stores had very little meat and saw no immediate improvement. Poultry was almost nonexistent. Birmingham, Ala., packers called it the worst shortage since the war started, without much prospect of change for another year. Two mines in Kentucky shut down with 750 men idle at Pikesville. A union man said they couldn't work without meat. Chattanooga, Tenn., reported a large black market in meat but a great percentage of consumers can't get enough meat. Nashville, Tenn., reported "nothing like it before" and even sausage was scarce but eggs and cheese were plentiful. Knoxville, Tenn., called it "very critical" and said government purchase is leaving nothing for civilians.

WEST—Dallas headquarters for a six state area reported meat very scarce. In San Francisco, dealers started to ration eggs. Montana had a good beef supply and apparently enough poultry and eggs, one of the few bright spots. Colorado was worrying about a farm labor shortage and asking for more war prisoners to help. Utah appeared self-sustaining, too. Omaha creameries said much butter is spoiling because the people don't have the red points. Oregon had some meat. New Mexico called it a "meat famine."

The Situation Abroad

From abroad came this picture:

SPAIN — The Spaniards think they're luckier than others in supply of food but don't like the prohibitive prices. Butter was $1.35 a pound and up; eggs a dollar a dozen, meat ranging up to $2.75 a pound. Restaurants had abundant supply, a meal running from 10 to 50 pesetas. The ordinary Spaniard was being paid only 10 to 15 pesetas a day.

ENGLAND—Britain was striving to maintain a tight ration of 2 ounces of butter a week, 8 ounces of margarine, 24 cents worth of meat. Vegetables were scarce and there was just about a pound of oranges a month available per capita.

CANADA—Shoppers can get what they want if they have the ration coupons for butter, sugar, canned milk, preserves, and the like. Meat, except pork, is plentiful.

Chaos in Germany

GERMANY—The entire economy will be in chaos for months. Land is untended, without workers. Former slave laborers looted well stocked German homes, slaughtered sheep and pigs as they wandered homeward. Russian occupied areas will be hit hard for the Soviet armies lived off the land. Biggest trouble is that there are only women and children to get agriculture started. There are no animals to pull plows, no tractors. The best fed nation in all Europe is going to be the hungriest next winter.

FRANCE—Here the situation isn't critical, for the French have a good start since their liberation. The big problem is transportation and black marketing.

BELGIUM—The industrious Belgians are in no danger of starvation. Almost every available bit of land is being tilled.

HOLLAND—This is one of the worst stricken countries and food must be shipped in.

DENMARK—The dairy country of Europe is well fed despite German plundering. Meat and lard are not even rationed and vegetables are ample. The only things the people miss are coffee, tea, and spices.

Critical in Finland

FINLAND—The situation will be critical until the harvest and then still will be serious.

BALKANS—There is semi-starvation in many areas. The peasants are going back to the farms but relief shipments are needed.

EGYPT—Shops are full of vegetables, meats, fish, sugar, eggs. Prices are high.

AUSTRALIA — Serious shortages of principal foods are expected from a prolonged drouth. Meat production is 150,000 tons off. The grain shortage may cause loss of 15,000,000 head of sheep.

ITALY—Malnutrition is virtually eliminated. Getting the Po valley food machine working will allow reduction of allied shipments of food from 200,000 tons monthly to 125,000.

SWEDEN—This is a land of plenty and the Swedes may be able to help Norway, Holland, and Finland considerably. Already, shipments are starting to strain Swedish stocks.

CHILE — Food is plentiful, meat prices ranging from 25 to 50 cents a pound, eggs 56 cents a dozen, butter 60 cents a pound. There is no rationing.

AIDE ORDERED TO KILL HITLER, SAYS SECRETARY

SS Colonel Told to Hide Body from Reds

announced: "I don't see much reason for me staying here. I'm going south."

As he shook hands with Hitler, Bormann—who had developed a feud with the reichsmarshal—asked sarcastically: "How are you going to get out?"

The Russians at the time were in the suburbs of the Nazi capital.

"I can," Goering replied. "I'll make it by car, all right."

'Not Wish of the English"

There was a strained silence when Goering left the room. It was broken by Hitler—staring at a map showing the advance of the Red army—who said grimly: "Well, if we do go down, one thing is certain—it is not the wish of the English."

The fact that it was Hitler's birthday did not ease the tension at a meeting attended by Keitel, Bormann, Jodl, Gen. Krebs, a Nazi named Burgodorff, and Gen. Winter. These decisions were made: Jodl was to take command in the north, Winter in the south and the headquarters staff in Berlin was to be stripped to essential personnel.

"All women were ordered to leave," Krieger said. "And only two recorders were to remain—Herrgesell and one other."

Events of the next two days were supplied by Hergesell—a cold, sharp eyed man who told of what he described as the dramatic hours in the headquarters hundreds of feet below the bomb and shell pocked pavement of the Wilhelmstrasse.

Hitler Gives No Answer

Doenitz and his staff left on April 21, but night came without any clear cut announcement from Hitler on his plan—whether he intended to remain in Berlin.

"Goebbels came in at noon," Herrgesell related, "and said he had just received a phone call. The Russians were in Prez Lauer Allee—just a 20 minute walk from the reichschancellery. He told Hitler they had the city surrounded."

Hitler went on studying the map as if he did not notice. Goebbels hesitated and left the room.

At 12:30 o'clock, Hitler met with Keitel, Jodl, Bormann, Krebs and Goebbels for an hour. Detailed reports on the battle positions were discussed but the answer to the big question still did not come.

The group was summoned again at 3 p. m. and Hitler told them, Herrgesell said, not once but ten times, "I am going to stay in Berlin. I won't desert now. I will fall here before the chancellery." The words were repeated over and over again as if the fuehrer relished the dismay and anxiety which was written over his colleagues' faces.

Then came a long series of pleadings by Hitler's followers trying to dissuade him from his fateful decision.

Ribbentrop Calls Up

These were climaxed by one from Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop—disclosed today for the first time and the only one which tempted Hitler to change his mind.

"The others whispered that Goebbels got him to do it," Herrgesell said. "Von Ribbentrop telephoned Hitler and told him: 'Mein fuehrer, you must hold on. From one of my agents in Switzerland who has contact with high British military circles, I have just learned that British and Americans are going to fight against Russia. We must hold on.'

"Hitler's face lighted up for a moment, then he wilted and slowly, contemptuously said: 'That's what you say!' and hung up on him."

Keitel and Bormann reminded Hitler of "what you told us months ago—we must fight as long as any of Germany is left. You said you wanted to fight until the last piece of ground was gone and you had been thrice killed."

Urge Fight on Russians

Their voices rose and their words tumbled out in torrents.

"It is stupid to stay here," they said. "We can go north or go south and we can fight on. We can turn the 12th army against the Russians."

Goebbels took up the cry: "Take all the armies from the west and fight the Russians. If we do this we will be faithful to our pledge to go on fighting against boleshvism."

The jangling phone increased the pandemonium. Guensche answered it and handed it to Hitler. It was Doenitz phoning from his headquarters in the north.

"The coastal batteries have been turned from the sea to the land," he said. "I can hold the British for a while."

"Hitler didn't say anything," Herrgesell said. "He just hung up."

The babel was interrupted shortly by another phone call. It was Field Marshal Schoerner, commanding the German troops in Czechoslovakia.

"He wanted to speak to Hitler," Herrgesell said. "He was phoning from Dresden. Hitler said: 'He only wants to ask me to leave,' and would not talk to him."

"I Will Not Retreat"

To all the frantic entreaties Hitler barked stolidly.

"I have killed many generals because they retreated. I will not retreat myself. When I leave Berlin, everything is lost. I will not capitulate in the west."

The fuehrer left the room and the door was scarcely shut when Keitel and Jodl began whispering excitedly.

"We will have to take him away," Keitel said, according to Herrgesell, "even if by force. We will take him out."

Jodl, commencing to be concerned over his own personal welfare, confided to the others in a gutteral breath: "I am not staying in this rat trap any longer. I am leaving."

It was then that Hitler returned to the room and formally ordered all three to leave Berlin — Keitel, Bormann, and Jodl. The protests that came proved too much for the wrought-up fuehrer's patience and he let down his hair.

Tells Loss of Confidence

"I no longer have any confidence in the wehrmacht," Herrgesell said Hitler began. "I have had no confidence in the luftwaffe for two years now — losing four planes to the enemy's one — and now I have lost confidence in the SS."

The words had the effect of a bolt of lighting, Herrgesell said. It was the first time Hitler had spoken so frankly to his military and political leaders.

"The waffen SS in the 6th army," Hitler went on, "was fighting the Hungarians in Russia — I was told I had 75,000 men when really there were only four divisions, more nearly 40,000 men. The attack collopsed in a few days. Dietrich [Gen. Sepp Dietrich] lied to me.

"Fegelein [SS adjutant to Hitler] told me there were 5,000 or 6,000 SS to defend Berlin. They are not SS at all. Just stragglers. Where are they? There are no more than 400 men in the barracks."

REPORT EGYPT PLANS TO BUY ALLIED WAR PLANTS AND SUPPLIES

CAIRO, Egypt, May 19 [Reuters]—With the end of the war in Europe, Egyptian authorities are showing increasing interest in the allies' Middle East war installations and supply dumps, valued at many million dollars.

In these plants and materials, which one day will be unwanted, Egyptians see an opportunity to develop present industries and start others. An Arabic newspaper today reported the Egyptian government had decided to buy all British and American war plants in Egypt.

The newspaper added that the government would sell factories bought from the allies to firms operating now or to be started in Egypt, and retain a profit of 10 per cent. Three Egyptian traders have bought 8th army salvage in the western desert for $200,000 and use war material for the making of a variety of articles, including cigaret lighters.

Army Guards Liberated King from Interviews

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH 7TH ARMY IN AUSTRIA, May 18 [Delayed]—King Leopold of the Belgians and his wife, Princess de Rethy, the former Marie Lilian Baels, and children were "liberated" by American troops on May 8, but every effort of correspondents to interview him on subjects of world interest—not in any way involving military security—has been blocked by the 7th army and SHAEF.

Not that there is any secret about Leopold's whereabouts. He and his children and his morganatic wife are at Strobl, a tiny village in the Austrian Tyrol, 20 miles east of Salzburg. The troops and civilians all thru the army area know that, and many report seeing the king on his walks.

He has been visited by politicians and representatives of various commissions. The sovereign has had as a dinner guest at least one high ranking American officer, Lt. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, who commands the 15th corps, in whose territory Leopold now resides.

Want the Inside Story

There are many questions newspaper men would like to ask the king. Among them are, what was the inside story of the capitulation of Belgium to the Germans in 1940; what were the details of his treatment in German captivity; does he expect to resume his throne, and what is his reaction to the demands of the communist elements in Belgium for his abdication?

Yet the censors at our army press headquarters were informed that they could not pass stories of any interviews with Leopold, and would have to refer such stories to SHAEF where the field correspondents, being so far away, would suffer a "blind" censorship.

Yesterday some correspondents visited Gen. Haislip at the corps command post in Salzburg. The general told of having dined with the king. Asked why we could not see the king, the general said he had heard of no prohibition on that score, intimated he did not know we had been stopped when we approached Leopold's quarters, and said he supposed that if any persons were being kept away from the king they were "people who were looking for jobs."

Always Welcome Before

Today a group of correspondents returned to the corps command post. The general would not even see us, altho he has always welcomed newspaper men in the past, and has been eager for publicity for his corps.

He sent word that the whole matter of Leopold was not in the 7th army's hands. The 7th army was not talking; it has not been talking for 10 days, since we first requested interviews with Leopold.

As one correspondent remarked, "The case of Leopold seems to be on a very high political level."

RITES TUESDAY FOR NAVY PILOT KILLED IN CRASH

Services for Ensign John L. Kodie, 20, of 627 Oakdale av., a dive bomber pilot who was killed in a plane crash in Florida Thursday, will be held Tuesday morning in Holy Name cathedral.

Ensign John L. Kodie

Ensign Kodie, a graduate of Waller High school, was commissioned Feb. 14 after training at Greencastle, Ind., and Corpus Christi, Tex. On the same day he married Roberta Wachendorf. He also is survived by his mother, Mrs. Homer Williams, and two sisters, Dorothy and Geneva Kodie, all of 1243 Wrightwood av.

The army announced yesterday that Tech. Sgt. Gilbert Douglas Laubinger, 25, brother of Mrs. Leora J. Snyder, 2532 N. Sawyer av., was one of eight airmen from Will Rogers field [Okla.] who were killed Tuesday in the crash of a B-25 bomber at Las Vegas, N. M.

GREEK REGENT WILL BE HOST TO U. S. BISHOP

ATHENS, Greece, May 19 (AP) — Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of New York was scheduled to arrive in Athens today. He will be the guest of Archbishop Damaskinos, the Greek regent, during his stay.

Oxnam left Italy for Greece and Egypt after participating in the dedication yesterday of a new chapel for the United States 465th bombardment group in the Foggia area.

The bishop's son, Capt. Philip Oxnam, an air force chaplain, also participated in dedication of the chapel which was a memorial to members of the group killed in air combat over Europe.

ARMY SETS UP TEAMS TO HUNT WAR CRIMINALS

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 19 (AP)—Almost a score of army teams have been organized to help track down axis war criminals in the "biggest and most justifiable man hunt in history," Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer, judge advocate general, said today.

The pursuit and arraignment of "butchers and oppressors" will become a major activity of the judge advocate general's office, he told a graduating class at the judge advocate general school here.

"The trail of the beast is all over stricken Europe and this nation owes a duty to its maimed and tortured dead to track own the terrorists and bring them to justice," he declared. "The same is true in no less degree of the sadists of Japan who have literally raped the Philippines."

PAULEY FAVORS LEAVING NAZIS 'SOME' INDUSTRY

Washington, D. C., May 19 (AP)—Edwin M. Pauley, American member of the allied reparations commission, said today the allies should leave Germany enough light industry to maintain civilian economy. "Otherwise," he told a reporter, "they will be a burden on us unless we want them to starve."

Pauley will leave tomorrow for Europe with his staff members. They will spend two weeks in Germany looking into her economic position before going to Moscow for the first sessions of the commission on which Russia, Great Britain, and France also will be represented.

Isador Lubin, Pauley's associate, will be among those departing tomorrow.

Pauley, self-styled "hard peace" advocate, said that in deindustrializing Germany only enough should be left to provide a bare level of subsistence.

HOUSE IS KEPT IN LINE BY POWER OF RULES GROUP

Pay Hike Made Possible by 'Special' Action

BY LAURENCE BURD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., May 19—The broad powers enjoyed by the house rules committee in controlling legislation and house procedure have been spotlighted by recent devlopments on Capitol hill.

Within the last two weeks house members were able to vote themselves a $2,500 yearly tax exempt expense allowance, equivalent to a $4,000 salary raise, thru courtesy of a special ruling by the rules body. Without the ruling, the expense allotment could have been stricken from the appropriation bill in which it was included on the objection of a single member that it was irrelevant to the bill.

Similarly, the rules group approved special procedure for considering a 1 billion dollar appropriation bill for the department of labor and related agencies, which the house passed last week. One congressman estimated several million dollars could have been stricken from the bill by a single member's objection that certain items were not authorized by previous legislation, if the rules committee had not voted to outlaw such objections.

One Bill Stymied

In another instance of a converse nature, house consideration of an 18 million dollar bill for various surveys and censuses was stymied last week because the rules body postponed approval of the measure for floor debate.

Under normal house procedure, the rules committee has tremendous power over consideration of all legislation, with the exception of appropriation and revenue bills and some minor matters.

The appropriations and tax [ways and means] committees may report proposed legislation directly to the house floor. Nearly all other house committees under usual practice, however, must first obtain a "rule" from the rules body on bills before they go to the house. The rule, if granted, clears the bill for floor consideration, and proposes the length of time for debate, subject to house approval.

Special Rules Necessary

Even on appropriation and revenue bills, if they include new legislation, as distinct from fund-raising and taxing, or matters adjudged irrelevant to the general context of the bill, special action by the rules committee is necessary to insure the portions in question will not be stricken out on the objection of a single member. The rules group may grant a special rule, as in the case of the $2,500 expense allotment, forbidding the striking of any section except by majority vote of the house.

Over ordinary legislation, as distinct from tax and appropriation bills, the power of the rules committee is not final, however.

If the rules body refuses to approve a bill reported by any committee for house consideration, there are certain other means available to get the measure before the membership, but this is often a difficult process.

Can Suspend Rules

The house may take up any bill by unanimous consent of all members present, but one objection will stymie the measure, if no rule has been granted. The house may also call up a bill on its own motion by "suspending the rules," but this requires a two-thirds majority vote.

Similarly, if the rules body refuses to report a bill or delays in reporting it out, it must be taken up by the house if a majority of the entire membership signs a "discharge petition" calling for the bill's consideration. Such a petition is now being circulated on a bill to establish a permanent fair employment practices committee, which has been pending in the rules group for more than a month.

The rules committee has other powers in addition to its function of channeling legislation to the floor, altho the latter has been its major function in recent years.

House Is Final Authority

It is empowered to recommend changes in house rules, and to propose creation of new house committees, but the final decision on these matters rests with the house. Creation of special committees to conduct investigations are referred to the rules group, which may either recommend their creation to the house or vote the proposal down.

The rules group is the only house committee empowered to sit while the house is in session, without special leave from the house itself.

The committee has existed since 1789, but did not obtain its broad powers over consideration of general legislation until 1883.

The body reached the zenith of its power in the early 1900s under the leadership of the famed Joseph G. [Uncle Joe] Cannon, Republican congressman from Illinois, who was house speaker from 1903-'10.

Speaker's Powers Trimmed

In those days the speaker was also chairman of the rules committee and had the power to make all appointments to house committees. Protests against Cannon's alleged abuse of his powers led to a house revolt against "Cannonism." As a result, the speaker was eliminated from a place on the rules committee by vote of the house in 1910, and in 1911 his power to appoint committee members was transferred to the house itself.

The rules group presently consists of 12 members, of whom eight are Democrats and four Republicans. Its chairman is Rep. Sabath [D., Ill.], 79 year old dean of the house, who is now serving his 20th term.

FRENCHMAN ASSERTS U. S. AIR MIGHT WILL BE POTENT PEACE AID

Richard N. Coudenhove-Kalergi

The possibility that America's air supremacy may be as potent a stabilizing influence as Britain's former sea supremacy was suggested yesterday by Richard N. Coudenhove-Kalergi, French internationalist and advocate of a European federation.

The military superiority of peaceful powers must be one of the bases of world security, he said. He explained why he thought the world had little reason to fear that this country might misuse its power.

"America is underpopulated," he said, "and her history, never imperialistic except in one or two minor episodes, assures of peaceful intentions." His mention of underpopulation was a reference to the theory that nations go to war to obtain more land or materials for their people.

Coudenhove-Kalergi, who with his wife, is passing thru Chicago en route from the west coast to New York, said the San Francisco conference as a means of promoting world security is a failure.

KANKAKEE UNIT TOPS MILITIA'S APRIL TURNOUT

Company G, 5th infantry, of Kankakee, led all units of the Illinois Reserve militia, with an average attendance of 94 per cent during April, in the drill attendance contest sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Brig. Gen. Leo M. Boyle, the state adjutant general, reported yesterday. The company stood second for the four month period, January thru April, with an average of 87.1 per cent.

Second for April was Company A, 1st infantry, Chicago, with 91 per cent for the month, and a four month average of 90.9, which puts the unit in first place.

Company G, 8th infantry, Chicago, was third for the four month period with 83.8 per cent.

In the regimental contest, based on the attendance during the first four months, the 1st infantry of Chicago held first place with an average of 72.8 per cent; 8th infantry, Chicago, second, with 69.2, and the 2d infantry, also of Chicago, third, with 63.2.

The drill attendance contest began in January and will continue thru July.

REVEAL DETAILS OF WHITE HOUSE BOMB SHELTER

Built with 9 Foot Ceiling 50 Feet Underground

Washington, D. C., May 19 (AP)—All of Britain's blitz experience went into the construction of an air raid shelter 50 feet under the White House to protect the late President Roosevelt and his family.

Relaxation of censorship restrictions permitted disclosure today of the shelter and a tunnel from the White House to the treasury. The tunnel was constructed as an emergency exit for the President pending completion of the bombproof shelter.

Its designer, Lorenzo Winslow, White House architect, said the shelter is capable of resisting a direct hit from a 500 pound bomb and perhaps a 1,000 pounder. Both it and the tunnel are entered by way of the basement from the east wing of the White House. They are not connected directly.

Crews Work Three Shifts

The shelter was begun Jan. 2, 1942, and was completed in three months by men working in three shifts. The war and navy departments suggested the shelter in the belief the President would be the "number one target" in any enemy air raid, it was said.

Mr. Roosevelt never entered the tunnel or participated in White House air raid drills, long since suspended, but was said today to have inspected the shelter once.

Winslow said the shelter cost nearly $65,000. It is a concrete room 40 feet by 40, with a 9 foot concrete ceiling. Floor and walls are 7 feet thick. The shelter can accommodate 100 persons.

Machine Gunners on Roof

Winslow and White House officials described the elaborate precautions taken to safeguard the President in early stages of the war.

White House employes were provided with gas masks, and machine gunners were placed on the White House roof. Scores of military policemen were distributed around the grounds and outside the iron fence. The soldier guards and gunners were removed, however, months ago.

At Hyde Park, N. Y., the army augmented the customary secret service and state police guard during the war years of Mr. Roosevelt's term. An M. P. battalion was stationed on the adjoining estate of the late Archibald Rogers, oil magnate, and extensive communications facilities were provided.

William Murphy Named G. O. P. Publicity Director

Washington, D. C., May 19 (AP)—Appointment of William C. Murphy Jr. as publicity director of the Republican national committee was announced today by Chairman Brownell. Murphy has been chief of the Washington bureau of the Philadelphia Inquirer since 1937.

3 CONFERENCES TO PRESS UNITY ON HOME FRONT

A university professor, a judge, an alderman, a steel worker, a union official, a housewife, a meat packer, and a clothing worker will be among the speakers at the opening session of the Chicago conference on home front unity May 29 in the city council chambers. The conference, which will have further sessions on June 5 and June 12, is sponsored by the mayor's committee on race relations in coöperation with various community groups.

The general subject of the first session will be "Living Together." Louis Wirth, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago, will discuss the social and cultural makeup of Chicago. Judge George L. Quilici's topic is to be the contributions of the people to the city's economic and cultural life. The other participants, who represent various national and racial groups, will talk on allied subjects in the round table discussion after the introductory speeches.

"Forces That Divide Us" will be the subject of the second session. At the third session, whose general topic will be "Goals for Democratic Living," William H. Spencer, regional director of the war man power commission, will speak. The public will be admitted to the galleries at all sessions, which will open at 2 p. m.

OPA TO QUESTION BORELLI ABOUT 1,480 MILE TRIP

Municipal Judge Francis Borelli will be called before his ration board—40-7 at 1840 E. 71st st.—to explain the 1,480 mile auto trip he took to Hot Springs, Ark., last weekend, office of price administration officials said.

OPA officials said Judge Borelli was issued no special ration coupons for the trip. The judge said he took the trip for his health but would explain no further.

Judge Borelli has been granted extra allowance of gasoline, OPA officials said, to travel from his home at 6800 Bennett av., to room 919 in the city hall where he holds court.

WONDERS OF '33 TO BE RECALLED BY FAIR PEOPLE

Memories of the summers of 1933 and 1934, when A Century of Progress exposition turned three miles of the south side's lake front into a wonder packed city within a city, will be recalled next Sunday when A Century of Progress association marks the 12th anniversary of the fair's opening.

Ceremonies will be held in the Museum of Science and Industry in Jackson park starting at 3 p. m. John Doctoroff's portrait of the late Rufus C. Dawes, president of the exposition, will be unveiled in the new Century of Progress lounge. This will be followed by an informal reunion of officials, exhibitors, concessionaires, contractors, and employes of the exposition.

Singers and other entertainers who appeared at the fair will compete for attention with movies of the Avenue of Flags, the Sky Ride and the principal exhibition buildings. Illuminated photographs of fair scenes will be displayed.

Do YOU Own A "Scratching" Dog?

If you own and are fond of a dog that is continually scratching, digging, rubbing, and biting himself until his skin is raw and sore, don't just feel sorry for him. The dog can't help himself. But you may. He may be clean and flea free and just suffering from an intense itching irritation that has centered in the nerve endings of his skin. Do as thousands of pleased dog owners are doing.

At any good drug store, pet or sport shop get a 25c package of Rex Hunters Dog Powders, and give them once a week. Note the quick improvement. One owner writes: "My female setter on Sept. 29th did not have a handful of hair on her body—all scratched and bitten off. I gave her the powders as directed. By Nov. 10th she was all haired out." Learn what they will do for your dog. Make a 25c test. (Economy size box for only $1.00).

GERMANS FIND CHICAGO ACE TOO HOT TO HANDLE

Downed in Flames, He Refuses to Die

BY JAMES SLOAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

AT U.S. 355TH FIGHTER GROUP HDQ., England, May 13 [Delayed]—Because the Germans captured him, but couldn't hold him, Capt. William J. Cullerton, 21, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville F. Cullerton, 1719 New England av., Chicago, was back safely today at his home fighter plane base.

Last April 8 his wingmates, in a high scoring 355th fighter plane group, saw Cullerton shot down in flames near the air field at Nuernberg, Germany. A few days ago he limped back to them, a bit thinner and paler but still the same jovial "Cully" who had gunned his way to second place on their roster of aces with 20 planes to his credit. This is his story:

His plane's controls shot away, Cullerton had bailed out. He landed with a crash, "like falling off the top of a big hangar," but found himself unwounded by the hail of 20 millimeter shells that had destroyed his plane.

From the Nuernberg air field, only a quarter mile away, the Germans came after him immediately. He hurried into a woods. Unable to find him, the Germans returned with dogs, man hunters trained to kill or maim their quarry. Deeper and deeper into the woods Cullerton raced, but the pack of dogs unerringly clung to his trail.

Catch Him at Last

As the leading dog snapped at his legs, Cullerton, shot it. Again and again he killed his pursuers, but each time the sound of his shot betrayed his position to the 40 soldiers on his trail. Then, when he was bruised and battered, his endurance gave out and they caught him.

The Nazis tied him with ropes and tossed him into a small farm hut but posted only one elderly guard. They left his personal effects on a table in the tiny room and hung his gun on the wall. Soon the guard fell asleep.

After waiting a couple of hours, Cullerton began working at his bonds. First he freed his hands and then his legs. Then he dived for his gun and got it before the baffled guard was completely awake. Not wishing to kill the man, Cullerton forced him to accompany him five miles into the woods. Using his escape kit, compass, handkerchief, and maps to determine the approximate position of the American lines, which he believed to be about 50 miles to the west, Cullerton headed for them.

Eats Bird Uncooked

For five days he sustained himself by nibbling at candy bars and eating potatoes he dug from farm fields. Then he shot a crow. Fearful that a fire would give him away, he ate the stringy bird's legs raw. The meat was tough but edible, he said.

He drank water whenever he found a stream, purifying it first with halazone tablets from his escape gear. To keep awake, he gulped benzedrine tablets.

Rest and sleep were almost out of the question. The nights and even the mornings and evenings were "hellishly cold," he said. Only in the warmth of the afternoons did he risk pausing to doze awhile.

Disguised as Nazi

Frequently he came to towns which he could not avoid passing thru. Then he would steal a hoe or a wheelbarrow from a farm so that he would be mistaken for an army farm laborer. His green flying jacket and suit were so similar to the Nazi uniforms that he escaped without challenge.

His pocket language cards from his escape kit taught him enough German so that he could greet passersby, as seemed required of every one, with "Good morning" or "Good afternoon." Because he knew no other German words he didn't try to beg food in the towns.

On the sixth day of his flight, about three miles from the American lines in the Crailsheim area, 50 miles southwest of Nuernberg, American artillery unleashed a heavy barrage on the railway siding and German guns in the very woods in which Cullerton was hiding.

Shells fell on all sides of him, but he was able to get to another woods, where he holed up in the hope that the American advance would overrun him. Late in the evening he decided to work closer to the Yank troops, and he dared a dash across a road.

Captured and Shot

His dash carried into the arms of three SS [elite guard] troopers and two German soldiers. After a brief pow-wow the Germans pushed him back into the woods and an SS man shot him from a distance of only two feet with Cullerton's own pistol. The bullet entered Cullerton's right side between two ribs, went thru his liver and kidney and out between his ribs again without mushrooming, which would have proved fatal.

Apparently convinced that he was fatally shot, the Germans left him to die. After an hour or so Cullerton regained consciousness. Covered with blood and certain he was dying, he prayed ardently. Later he started crawling toward a town he thought to be about a mile away, desparingly willing to accept any sort of help, tho convinced that as long as he had not died up to then that he was not going to. Frequently he heard retreating German troops but was unable to attract their attention.

Almost on the outskirts of a town he was found by a German civilian and taken to an elderly physician who spoke some English. Knowing he had lost a dangerous amount of blood and feeling he was "whipped," Cullerton asked the doctor if he was going to die. The answer was, "Within five hours."

Asks to Die with Yanks

Cullerton asked that he be taken to the Americans so that he could die with his comrades. The doctor said that the two German soldiers whom he had called to take down Cullerton's name, rank, and serial number would not let him do this. However, after the soldiers left, also apparently convinced there was no hope of saving Cullerton, the doctor said he would take the flyer to another doctor about three hours away.

Cullerton was loaded into a farm cart and the party set out on a jolting journey thru the woods. The bouncing of the cart knocked Cullerton unconscious so that he had a short respite from the pain tho it also started his deep wound bleeding dangerously again.

At last the cart arrived in the town of Feuchtwangen between Ulm and Crailsheim. There Cullerton was put into an improvised hospital which was handling both German army and civilian cases. He was the only American.

He was examined by another doctor who spoke a little English and was told he shouldn't have lived as long as he did but that if he lived thru the night—it was then 2 a. m.—he would survive. The doctor had virtually no facilities with which to operate and admitted that if he attempted to do so Cullerton's chance would be one in a hundred.

Unconscious Two Days

After the Germans had bandaged the youth's wounds, Cullerton requested that if he became unconscious again the doctor should operate. Then he lost consciousness for about two days. When he came to, the doctor told him his fever had broken and that he would be all right.

Then he was taken to the prisoner ward for questioning by the military commander of the hospital, a Prussian officer. Cullerton refused to discuss anything except surrender terms for the town.

"I don't know what I would have done with the town if the Nazi officer had surrendered it," Cullerton admitted, "but anyway, it would have been all mine."

During the time he was a prisoner in the hospital, Cullerton was treated reasonably well, he said. His diet included potato and beet soup and small portions of horse meat. Some relief from this fare was provided by a Dutch boy, a refugee from Rotterdam, who, almost nightly, slipped a handful of almonds under Cullerton's blankets.

Escapes from Hospital

On Cullerton's sixth day in the hospital the German officer ordered that he be prepared to move to a prison camp. Cullerton's belongings had again been left in his room, however, and he decided if he had to move he would do it on his own.

When night came he slipped out of the hospital into the near-by woods. All night he crept west thru underbrush over eight miles of rolling hills, walking slowly past Germans making a disorderly retreat in front of an American spearhead. Just after dawn, April 24, as he recalls it, he ran into the American 12th army division, whose medical aid men immediately gave him rum, half a dozen scrambled eggs, slices of canned American bacon, a canteenful of hot coffee, and a cigaret.

Cullerton was placed in an evacuation hospital for two days and then transferred to a general hospital in Reims, France. There it was discovered that no operation was necessary.

Getting Well Again

Cullerton later returned to England and now is convalescing.

One of his treasured possessions is his dark green officer's shirt with the bullet holes in front and back where death brushed him but could not quite get a firm hold.

Upon visiting this base he learned he had been promoted from a lieutenant to a captain and had a new insignia to pin on the bullet torn shirt which already sported a silver star he had won for destroying seven nazi planes on the ground in a single attack last September.

That feat he had exceeded two months later by shooting down two planes and destroying six by strafing on one mission.

10,000TH CHICAGO CADET

In September, 1942, Cullerton was a 19 year old boy who kept Mayor Kelly and a group of dignitaries waiting at a La Salle st. ceremony designed to honor him as the 10,000th aviation cadet enlisted in Chicago. Last January he was hailed as Chicago's leading army air ace with 18 planes to his credit. Since then he has added two more.

Texan, 20, Held to Jury on 6 Bogus Check Charges

Judge Harold P. O'Connell yesterday ordered Marvin C. Hodge, 20, of 836 S. Wabash av., held to the grand jury under $3,000 bond on six charges of obtaining money under false pretenses. Hodge, who said he was a discharged marine, admitted cashing bogus checks amounting to $400 during the last month at various currency exchanges in Chicago. Hodge was paroled at Dallas, Tex., after serving 13 months on a similar charge.

PRICES THEN AND NOW

In the Voice of the People today we publish a letter from Rae E. Walters, regional head of OPA, in which he takes exception to our editorial of May 6, entitled "Black Market Prices."

Mr. Walters said that the editorial "ran counter to sound principles and facts." Laying aside the principles for a moment, let us look at the facts. He uses the index number of the Bureau of Labor Statistics for his claim that OPA has minimized the rise in total living costs, altho the labor bureau warns that its index does not measure changes "in the total amount families spend for living." No one knows better than the labor bureau itself how its index is compiled, and if it says it cannot be used in this way we'll have to accept it.

But even granting that the labor bureau's index is what its authors say it is not, does not help Mr. Walters. The cost of living by this test now stands at 126.8 on the base of 1935-'39 as 100. The highest point reached in the last war was about the time of the armistice. The reading then was the equivalent of 118. By the guide relied upon by OPA to prove its case, living costs are now higher than at any time during the last war.

But Mr. Walters says that the peak was in 1920. It was—in June, 1920, as a matter of fact. That was more than a year and a half after the war was over. Our editorial dealt with prices in war time. Actually, the peak in the crazy post-war period was only 18 per cent above present levels. After the armistice in 1918 prices actually started to tumble. It was four months before the upward pressure began to be applied. That came from money loaned to our allies after the war, or guarantees of their exchanges. The cost of living went up then because exports drained the country of goods at a time when the American people sought to buy the things they had done without in war time.

Europeans bought without limit of price or quantity, with money borrowed from the American treasury and never repaid. The collapse came when the pipe line to the American treasury was plugged. The post-war boom and the succeeding collapse won't happen again unless we accept the Bretton Woods plan, which would open up the treasury to the Europeans all over again. If Bretton Woods is approved, OPA won't help.

Mr. Walters compares the present war time rise with that which took place over the whole period from 1914 to 1920. He fails to take account of the fact that when the war started in 1939 our government had been engaged for six years in artificially boosting prices, by means of payments to cut down production, subsidies for holding goods off the market and dumping them abroad, deficit spending and dollar devaluation. Prices were already far advanced by government manipulation when the war began. The subsequent advance was consequently smaller.

Turning now to principles, what is most disappointing about Mr. Walters' communication is the revelation it makes of his lack of understanding of the function of prices. Price increases are temporary and highly useful. They are the result of scarcity, and by inducing more output they have the effect of curing themselves. They divert buying from scarce goods to goods that are plentiful. They bring about transfers of labor from less important work to more important work. With OPA, the burocrats ration the people, and those who want more than their allotment turn to the black market. With free markets the people ration themselves, save the cost of OPA, and eliminate the black market.

If Mr. Walters doesn't know that his organization has failed miserably, let him ask any butcher or any housewife. With the greatest crops the country has ever seen, the country is experiencing the only real food scarcity it has ever known. Half of the butcher shops in New York City have been forced to close, according to a story in Thursday's TRIBUNE. With more hog feed on the farms than ever at this time of year the receipts at Chicago stock yards are the smallest since records were first kept three-quarters of a century ago. There isn't enough sugar to go around. Ration points on shortening have been raised. Price control has truly hurt the war effort by reducing supplies of basic foods. The people are willing to make any sacrifice that is necessary in war time. OPA makes us all to suffer when it is unnecessary.

THE CONTEMPLATION OF A FEW MEDALS

Not nearly enough attention has been drawn to the Morgenroth collection of Renaissance medals and plaquettes, now on display at the Art institute. Here is one of the most remarkable art exhibitions we have had in many a year, remarkable for the brilliance of the work and remarkable, also, for the fact that nothing like it has been seen here before.

It is not our purpose to belabor anybody into visiting the exhibition. It's very pleasant as it is, with only three or four people in the room at a time. All we wish to point out is that these sculptures, in all their variety of subject, mood, and style, are an authentic flowering of the Renaissance genius in a form that most of us didn't know existed.

Start with the portrait medals and in two minutes you'll know whether this is your dish. If it is, you will discover that tho these portraits are miniatures, seldom more than a couple of inches over-all, they are big works in every other sense, big in subject matter and in presentation. They aren't delicate or cute, as painted miniatures generally are.

An unusually fine catalog of the exhibition, the work of Prof. Ulrich Middeldorf of the University of Chicago and Dr. Oswald Goetz of the Art institute, has been published by the Art institute. It helps, but it isn't needed. These works speak for themselves, with all the eloquence of the Renaissance.

The catalog quotes Goethe's observation that "a daily habitude, worthy of man's adoption, would be some reading of the Scripture or Homer, the hearing of a little good music, and the contemplation of a few medals." It is good advice.

SEC. ICKES SHILLS FOR SEWELL AVERY

The house was informed of a very curious situation the other day, in which it appears that Secretary of the Interior Ickes, a great one for bellowing about princes of privilege, is out pushing doorbells to get business for Montgomery Ward & Co., the mail order house run by Harold's old pal, Sewell Avery.

The bureau of mines, a division of the interior department, has jurisdiction in the issuance of licenses under the federal explosives act. Anybody who is licensed to keep explosives has to buy a special padlock to protect them. The house was startled to learn that Ickes' bureau was writing licensees, requiring them to buy the locks from Montgomery Ward in Chicago, price $1, or 90 cents in lots of more than 12.

Rep. Taber of New York did not credit Honest Harold with entertaining any concern lest Mr. Avery should not be doing a sufficient volume of business since the army has moved in and taken over the operation of his business. Mr. Taber was inclined to the view that this was "a deliberate and direct attempt on the part of Mr. Ickes to put the local hardware dealers out of business." He added that Mr. Ickes had a market for 500,000 padlocks. Sales in this volume would enhance the reputation of the government's uniformed retailers, who are not particularly noted for their ability to overcome sales resistance by their own unaided efforts.

This is one view of the matter. Another would be that Mr. Ickes is a little uncertain about his cabinet tenure since changes have been made in Washington. If he builds up Montgomery Ward sales he may come to the favorable attention of Mr. Avery and perhaps promote himself a job as chief of plant police. If, on the other hand, the army clings to the mail order house, despite Judge Philip Sullivan's clear intimation that it is interloping, it may be necessary to commission Honest Harold a shavetail in order to qualify him for work in private industry.

ENGLAND'S WARS

Mr. Churchill in his victory broadcast last Sunday found room for some historical references and a suggestion to his English listeners to take pride in their past. Mr. Churchill not only is a master hand at writing history, he also knows his own part in it, with appropriate modesty. His references included the Spanish armada, the wars against Louis XIV., and the wars against Napoleon. The occasion seemed to call for some recollection of other times when Britain had celebrated the downfall of a military power on the continent of Europe.

If this was an indiscretion it has escaped notice as such. British troops were fighting on the Danube when Prussia first emerged from the German political complex as a kingdom. Mr. Churchill does not observe the war against Nazi Germany as one of two world wars. It is one in a long succession of wars in which Britain has had nearly every sizable country in Europe as an ally on one occasion and an enemy on another.

Mr. Churchill spoke as another servant of the crown who, when the need was greatest, found allies and support needed to defeat a dangerous military power which threatened the island fortress. A cautious adviser might have suggested to the prime minister that these repetitions of history might have a cooling effect on enthusiasms for the new era of peace. England entered these wars when the English archer was famous. Weapons have changed but methods have the same countenance.

The genius of such diplomacy must be regarded with something like awe. In our own instance it broke down a strong antipathy which prevailed in spite of Anglophile influences along the eastern seaboard. Mr. Churchill, even as he spoke of the emergence of the island and the empire from the most recent of their dangers, cast a suspicious eye in the direction of another great military power in Europe which, altho his ally, is giving him concern.

"There would be little use in punishing the Hitlerites for their crimes," said the prime minister, "if law and justice did not rule and if totalitarian or police governments were to take the place of the German invaders." Mr. Churchill can now recognize that Russia has a police government; that it is a dictatorship; and that it demands a conformity intolerable to people accustomed to freedom from inquisitorial rule. One of the many pretenses regarded as necessary for the conduct of the war was the fiction that our eastern European companion in arms was governed by ideas similar to our own.

Mr. Churchill has a twenty year treaty with Russia for the management of European affairs, but his ally gives him trouble. Russia to Britain has been alternately an enemy and an ally. It seems now in a way to be both at one and the same time. Its armies are deep in central Europe and its partisans are seeking control in areas close to Britain's ancient self-interest, in the Low Countries, and in the Mediterranean. The United States and Great Britain have another war on their hands and Russia is not committed to it.

Mr. Churchill may now be speculating whether or not the government which is still his is again confronted, so soon after one release, with the centuries old problem of a dominating military power on the continent. To have overcome Spain, France twice, and Germany twice, only to be faced by another power threatening to expand in one way or another to the water's edge, might make even a younger man feel weary. The Russians are acting badly. Some of the things they do seem to lack common sense. Their acts can be explained only by the theory that they expect trouble with the nations which kept Hitler out of Moscow and the valley of the Volga and are paving the way for it.

HISTORIC WORLD EMPIRES

[Following is an address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, and broadcast on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK

With the Italians and Yugoslavs quarreling over the ownership of Trieste, and with an American garrison in the middle, I have looked up the history of the disputed territory.

The Italian claim is based on the conquest of Trieste by Venice at the beginning of the 13th century. Thereafter Trieste carried on a series of rebellions against Venetian rule for 180 years. She secured her independence from Venice in 1382 by calling in Leopold III. of Austria as overlord. She was gradually incorporated into the Austrian empire on especially favorable terms, being given complete self-government and representation in the Austrian parliament when it was created. As the only seaport of the Austro-Hungarian empire, the city was extremely prosperous. Excepting for a brief occupation by Napoleon, it remained an Austrian port until 1918, when the city was turned over to Italy in the treaty of Versailles. Neither Italy nor Yugoslavia has any historical right to it, nor is there any indication that the city wants to belong to either of them.

In looking up the above history I ran continuously into the term "empire." I found the Austrian empire, Turkish empire, Napoleonic empire, the German empire, and the empire of Charlemagne, while the destruction of the Roman empire was mentioned. The definitions of "empire" in the dictionaries embrace two ideas: large size and rule imposed by force on unwilling peoples.

There appear to be two kinds of empires—large, cohesive territories won and ruled by armies, and empires of scattered cities and islands controled by navies.

At one time the Athenian empire dominated the Mediterranean sea, and both before and after the Athenian empire the Greek cities controled the commerce of the Mediterranean and Black seas and the seaports, thus controling the trade of the back countries.

Only the Roman empire has ever been entirely dominant on land and sea, and even this empire at its edges became a naval empire, holding only fortified cities that controled the commerce of the back country.

All the peoples and nations of Europe inherited from Rome the desire for empire. Charlemagne reëstablished it for a brief period, and thereafter the idea was carried on with diminishing success in the Holy Roman empire.

Venice at the height of her power had an empire consisting of most of the islands of the eastern Mediterranean and some 20 cities in those parts, including such great ones as Constantinople, Alexandria, and Damascus, with the cities of Tana and Kaffa at the north side of the Black sea for the slave trade. Genoa had as large an empire in the western Mediterranean.

In the 14th century the Hanseatic league was a kind of empire. This interesting organization is worth looking up in one of the encyclopedias. Among its possessions were colonies in England and in Russia. At one time it overthrew the king of Denmark. Finally it fell before the advance of absolute monarchies.

Charles V. of Spain, in the middle of the 16th century, combining the elective title of emperor of the Holy Roman empire with his enormous inherited kingdoms, nearly reëstablished it, and at the same time ruled Central and South America, but it fell apart under his son, Philip II.

A century later the Ottoman empire controled all of North Africa and Europe to the gates of Vienna.

Louis XIV. of France made extensive conquests, but fell far short of the goal. The French revolution, turning into the military dictatorship of Napoleon, achieved empire over Europe for a brief period, only to fall, principally to the power of Russia, which, in turn, became an empire.

It is interesting to note that in order to build up a power to confront France, the Prussian monarchy was greatly enlarged by the victors—Russia, Austria, Prussia, and Britain.

Then there arose the empire of the Holy alliance, originally consisting of Russia, Austria, and Prussia; later France, Spain, and Naples joined. The object of this alliance, according to its terms, was little less than to re-create the kingdom of heaven on earth, but in practice it was more bloodthirsty and tyrannous than any single country had ever been. Nations, like people in crowds, will do atrocious things from which as individuals they would draw back. As you know, it was kept out of the Americas by the Monroe Doctrine and later fell when France and England turned against it to create the kingdom of Belgium.

Hitler's effort at a European empire has just met its doom. Japan's attempt has been smashed by the American army and navy.

There remain two European empires or, rather, one European-Asiatic empire and one world empire—the Russian empire, which now extends from the Pacific to the Mediterranean, to the Baltic and the Elbe river, a purely army empire—and the British empire, preponderantly a navy empire, with satellite nations in North America, South Africa, and the West Pacific, and with an army empire in India and Africa.

These empires owe their present high positions to the million American boys killed and wounded in the war and the hundreds of billions of dollars spent in their behalf. I hope their coming conduct will justify these sacrifices.

Editorial of the Day

BRETTON WOODS IN THE PULPIT

[Wall Street Journal]

A special dispatch from this newspaper's Washington bureau opened with the words: "Bretton Woods will be preached from the pulpit" and proceeded to state that the treasury department was conducting "educational" sessions for clergymen on the subject of the Bretton Woods agreements, with the idea that they should in turn educate their congregations concerning the merits of these proposals and the importance of their ratification by the congress. These sessions were held "off the record" in federal offices—among others, in the state department building and the senate public lands committee room—and no official reports of their proceedings have been available. Our correspondent describes it as part of the general effort of the treasury to "build a fire under congress," and hasten its affirmative action.

Assuming the facts to be as reported [we have no doubts on the point] this sort of thing almost beggars comment. It is hard to decide whether effrontery or stupidity is the main characteristic of the idea of harnessing church pulpits to advocacy of a highly complex matter of international finance, upon which expert opinions differ widely and sharply, in order to influence the actions of congress.

It is not that church pulpits have not been often used in the past for political propaganda. A few church preachers have always been found willing so to use them. But to the best of this newspaper's recollection, covering some two generations of time, this is the first time that a department of our government has ever sought to bend them to its purposes. If individual churchmen are willing to misuse their office that is their own private affair for them to settle with their own consciences and their congregations. Not so when an arm of the state attempts it.

Who started this thing this newspaper does not know. It might interest congress to find out. But that it should stop is clear. It can do nothing but harm to both church and state.

IS YOUR NOSE SHINY?

HOW many of us have that "schoolgirl" complexion is difficult to say. Too often we are led to believe that our skin is either dry or greasy and that no middle road exists. Those with minor changes are often disturbed unnecessarily and seek remedies for correction.

Excessive oiliness [seborrhea] is due to overactivity of the sebaceous glands. These tiny structures, located near the hair follicles, are numerous about the face, scalp, and middle portions of the chest and back. The condition is common in certain families and faces, and may develop at any age but generally appears at puberty.

The secretion from these structures is a butterlike material, called "sebum." The amount formed is increased slightly by eating fat and applying heat but is not influenced by the fluid intake. Lack of water may lessen sweating but not the quantity of oil.

Unlike the output of other glands, sebum does not escape from the tiny openings quickly. It is a slow process and stagnation is the rule. If it turns rancid, a characteristic odor is noted. Normally, the substance is light yellow in color but that near the surface may mix with dirt and result in blackheads. Because the skin is thus prevented from cleansing and disinfecting itself, infection or unsightly blemishes are invited. The staph germ finds this material nutritive, causing inflammation and pimple formation. The combination of these disturbances is referred to as "acne."

On touching the face, the fingers become greasy. The skin is shiny. When the scalp is involved, dandruff develops. It may be so abundant that on falling, greasy scales cover the clothing on the shoulders.

Prevention is aided by cleanliness. Moderately warm or hot water should be used, as the loosening action is greatly increased at higher temperatures. Plenty of soap, worked up into a good lather, will do no harm and provides an excellent means of removing the debris. The application of a mud pack and steaming is an effective treatment but at no time should it be so vigorous as to irritate.

Special attention must be given to the hair. Frequent washings with an alkaline shampoo are demanded. In severe cases, this must be done daily for men and once a week for women. Lemon or vinegar rinses, so popular with these with parched skins, are not recommended because they neutralize the alkalinity of the soap. Ointments or brilliantines should not be applied to a head already overburdened with natural oil.

The soap and water method of cosmetic care is worth the effort and should not be ignored because of propaganda to the contrary. Vanishing creams may be substituted, particularly in regions where soft water is not obtainable. Cleansing lotions are of value. These usually contain substances, such as alcohol, glycerine, or witch hazel, which help to erase the fatty exudate.

GOOSEFLESH

E. W. writes: Is gooseflesh recognized as a medical condition?

REPLY

Yes. It is called "cutis anserina" and "horripilation." Chilling or shock may contract certain tiny muscles, causing the hair to stand on end.

PENICILLIN

W. R. writes: Can a person be allergic to penicillin?

REPLY

To the best of our knowledge, such reactions are rare. One of our readers wrote us about his sensitivity. He could not tolerate one drop in his eye without discomfort.

NEEDS GLASSES

Mrs. R. writes: What would happen if a person with astigmatism did not wear glasses?

REPLY

Eyestrain may result, with all its complications. Good vision should be cherished not abused. If aids are available, take advantage of them.

TWISTED OR SQUEEZED

A. B. S. writes: Is there any difference between a kinked and a spastic colon?

REPLY

In the former, the structure actually twists. Spasm means merely a tightening.

BRONCHIAL TROUBLE

A. F. writes: What kind of an ailment is bronchiectasis?

REPLY

A permanent enlargement or dilatation of small bronchial tubes.

PAIN IN NERVE ENDINGS

D. D. writes: I have chronic peripheral neuritis in the arms and legs. What treatment would you advise?

REPLY

Neuritis may result from many different conditions including infections and vitamin deficiencies.

MEATLESS SUNDAY

Mrs. T. writes: Because we can't get meat, my husband eats 10 eggs on Sunday. Is he getting too much albumen?

REPLY

If he has healthy kidneys, any excess can be eliminated. Don't worry about your husband. Pity the poor chickens.

REMOVING BIRTHMARK

W. H. writes: How can a birthmark be removed?

REPLY

Treatment depends on the type. Carbon dioxide snow, radium, X-ray, and surgery are the best methods.

MEAT O. K.

T. R. writes: How does the eating of meat affect a rheumatic person?

REPLY

Beneficially, if he can get it. The cardinal exception is gout, which often resembles rheumatic disorders.

MR. WALTERS REPLIES

Chicago, May 11—In your recent editorial on "Black Market Prices" you urge that one of the first steps should be "the dismissal of the price fixers." Certain of your arguments were misleading and in other respects the editorial ran counter to sound principles and facts.

The greater part of the editorial was devoted to an attempt to prove that "price controls have not prevented prices in the white market, on the average, from going higher than they did without control in the last war." Furthermore, you cited the statement of the bureau of labor statistics that its index "does not show the full war time effect on the cost of living" and mentioned black market prices for the purpose of creating the impression that the bureau's index grossly understates the real increase in the cost of living. You accuse OPA's price control efforts of impeding the war effort, cutting supply, and bringing on bootlegging "on a scale not approached in prohibition days."

First, the conclusions which you attempted to draw from the BLS index figures were wrong because your use of the figures was wrong. You state that the peak in prices in the last war was in December, 1918, when the index was 118 [based on the 1935-'39 average as 100]. That was not the highest price level reached. The peak was in 1920, when the index stood at 149.4. Moreover, the general level of prices was 38 per cent higher at the beginning of World War II. than at the beginning of World War I. By December, 1918, a date comparable to January, 1943, in this war, prices had risen 62 per cent. Actually, the index of prices in the spring of 1920 as compared with July, 1914, had more than doubled.

The bureau's index had the same limitations in 1914-'20 as now so far as measuring such factors as lowered quality, disappearance of low priced goods, forced changes in housing, and eating away from home.

Pressures against prices during this war have been far, far greater than last time. Nevertheless, prices have been held in check and have increased by considerably less than half as compared with the experience in the last war and the months after the armistice.

You concede that without controls "some prices might have gone considerably higher." What some people are willing to pay in the black market for chickens gives some indication as to how high prices of extremely short commodities might have gone. Moreover, such a price increase is only the first. Price increases breed other price increases and wage and salary increases, which in turn, being costs, breed further price increases and so on into the spiral of inflation. Is that what we want?

If the only prices which went up were those where we needed additional production and at the same time the costs of the producers remained stable, eventually we might get the additional production. Quite aside from the fact that it doesn't always work that way even in peace time, it simply will not work during war time. Therefore, business and government are agreed that stimulating production by giving free reign to prices is totally unacceptable as a solution. The same reasoning applies to agriculture.

I regret that we have black markets. I should like to see them eliminated. The efforts of the agency at present are being devoted more and more to this end. Removal of controls is not the answer. That would not bring about a "free" market where every citizen has equal opportunity, because those with money would be able to divert goods their way.

OLD LEASE BINDS NEW OWNER

Chicago, May 15—Six months ago we purchased a two flat building and agreed to let the seller remain in his flat. The tenants had an old lease which had not been renewed for years. The OPA gave us permission to evict them, but the tenants sued and won the case because the former landlord had continued to accept rent after expiration of the original lease. The lease thus had renewed itself automatically. Isn't there some provision made by statute to permit the breaking of such a lease when a buyer wants to occupy a flat in the building he has purchased?

G. J.

No. If the facts are such that there was a renewal by implication, this would be binding upon you. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT

THOSE BOYS SHOULD RUN LEND-LEASE

Chicago, May 14—Lend-lease is a wonderful thing for those in foreign countries, but it is not practiced in America.

I am a married man with three children and a grand wife, trying to start a home, and a new job. I went to several loan companies and told them my story, that I need some money and these are the answers I got: "What is the money to be used for? Not on the job long enough. Can somebody sign for you? Have you any credit references? What is your draft classification? I am sorry, you're a poor risk." Then I went to friends and told them my story. They said they were sorry, but with the high cost of living, bonds, taxes, old age pensions, social security and union dues, they were just getting by themselves.

Incidentally, would some true American give me $1,000 cash without any questions asked pertaining to character, stability, or honesty, without security or expectations of getting it back?

A WAR WORKER

IT WAS CHURCHILL OR NO RADIO

Chicago, May 15—The Washington regulators of our lives keep closing in.

Sunday I turned on my radio to hear the regular broadcast of the Philharmonic, but heard instead the voice of Winston Churchill. I swept the dial, found him on most stations that are network outlets. So I turned to FM, and in the concert I heard there found a welcome relief from propaganda.

There are a number of radio stations in Germany. After 1933, when Hitler or any of his close cohorts spoke, all stations carried his words. All Germans were forbidden to listen to other stations, and it was a grim "must" that they keep their radios turned on and tuned to the Fuehrer's voice.

The United States is served by four major radio networks. Yet millions of people, in rural areas without local service, had their choice of listening to Churchill or turning off their radios. The privilege of four networks should be granted only to the President of the United States.

This trend toward monopolizing all networks began with Presidential talks during real emergencies. It has degenerated to a method of drowning us in propaganda.

TAXES AND DELINQUENCY

Chicago, May 3—From the looks of things and from what I hear, juvenile delinquency will flourish this summer as never before, and it will be primarily the fault of the government. Many high school boys and girls are working after school and Saturdays. They earn anywhere from $10 to $20 a week. All must pay income tax, and it follows that if a lad earns $17 a week, at the end of the year he pays an income tax of $69.

Of course, we could lay around like a lot of other kids and do nothing. As it is, most of us have to pay for our clothes, school tuition, carfare, and lunch, besides giving a few dollars home. Our parents lose a $500 deduction on their income tax because we work. Most of the youngsters I know are planning on quitting just as soon as they reach the $549 minimum wage exemption, which will be during the summer months.

RED POINTS FOR FURLOUGHED FIGHTERS

Chicago, May 9—I have four sons in the service, all in the Pacific; one overseas three years, one six months, and two marines who fought in Bougainville, Guam, and Iwo Jima. The two marines returned last Friday after 26 months overseas, haggard, thin, and nervous. My ration board allowed each boy just 60 red points for the 90 meals each will eat at home. If we need more red points, the boys must have a doctor's affidavit that they are under his care and need a special diet. My boys are not under a doctor's care, but do like to eat.

THE DIVINE RIGHT OF EUROPE

Chicago, May 15—In France's darkest hour, just before the capitulation of Paris, Premier Paul Reynaud broadcast an appeal to the United States. "We have a claim on you," he declared, ". . . send us a cloud of airplanes."

Today at San Francisco, the picture changes; yet in keeping with the Gallic proverb, the more it changes, the more it is the same thing. France will grant us an unlimited responsibility for the preservation of French overseas interests on the basis of what amounts to a day-to-day occupancy of the letter box slot in the front door. We may have a tenuous and immediately terminable lease at Dakar and Camranh bay, for instance, which will fix our responsibility for the security of Indo-China and French Africa, but we may not exercise the provisions of the lease, in any given circumstance and to any degree, without express permission from the Quai d'Orsay.

This attitude is not peculiar to France.

Since the 17th century the dogma of the divine right of kings has largely disappeared from the articles of political faith of the world, but in its place has come a doctrine which in too many quarters approaches the acceptance reserved for basic truth. Politically ramshackle areas of the world, solely because of their traditional, historic, and geographical position, are self-endowed with the benison of divine appointment in human governance.

It is bad enough that the nations of Europe so regard themselves, but it is a crime against both world security and national self-respect when the rest of the world subscribes to or acquiesces in this delusion.

The divine right of Europe to govern or embroil the rest of the world has always been based upon economic considerations, in spite of the window dressing of "the boast of heraldry" and "the pomp of power," but in many cases, long after the economic basis has ceased to exist, the divine appointment expressed in terms of national pride in empire has perpetuated a spurious and swashbuckling counterfeit of sovereignty.

To state the case in stark simplicity, Europe is merely an expensive and inaccessible processing plant for raw materials gathered from the rest of the world, and in large measure sent back, as finished products, whence they came. Nothing much can be done about this. A preponderantly industrial Europe must live.

But when we are called upon, with the rest of the non-European world to protect Europe's overseas fields and mines and markets as well as her worthless baubles of empire, let that protection be based upon fact, not fancy, need, not nostalgia, honesty, not diplomatic double talk.

The general policy of the army is that discharge of an enlisted man for physical reasons because he is below the current physical standards for induction is prohibited if the man has experience and demonstrated ability to perform service in his specific job. Men serving in physically exacting jobs will be retained and given appropriate assignments even tho below minimum physical standards. Men sent overseas must be fully qualified physically to perform their duties under field conditions.

B. A. writes: "Two weeks after my discharge from the service in April I accepted a job which I left after three weeks. I have notified my former employer that I wish to return, but he says I lost my rights by taking the other job. Is this true?

No. The law grants you 90 days to apply for your former job and you may work wherever you please during that period.

SHE'S HEADED FOR THE TOWER

or, how we became the inquiring importer

YESTERDAY—She just wasn't seeing the sights—and that's why our importing service began. It was back in 1871, before any other store had even thought of an importing office in Europe, that Joseph Field noticed that Chicago tourists, busy buying in London shops, just weren't seeing the things the "compleat tourist" really ought to see. So, when Chicagoans arrived in England, Mr. Field sent a "clark" from his office to inquire: "Madame," he'd say, "wouldn't you rather see the Tower of London—and let us keep 'lavender' or woolens on hand for you back in Chicago?" or, "Madame," he'd ask, "wouldn't you like to spend your trip abroad sight-seeing as a tourist really ought to do?" So Joseph Field shipped home to his brother, Marshall, at Marshall Field & Company, the very things Chicagoans were seeking. America's first retail-store foreign buying office was opened—and our importing service grew . . .

TODAY—we are one of the greatest retail-store importers of the world—even now we are able to bring you treasures out of this world—as ballast on returning freighters. Rugs from the Orient, from Persia, Turkey; linens from Ireland; woolens and china and antique furniture, silver and glass from England—the finest goods from all over the world brought to you at Marshall Field & Company.

TOMORROW—holds our promise! We've answered your needs in the '90's—in a difficult today—and we intend to have the answers in the complicated postwar world ahead! That's our job, our responsibility, our promise—to you who made us what we are today. (Chapter VII of the story "Marshall Field & Company and Early Chicago.")

OUTLINES PLAN TO INCREASE GI HOME BUILDING

Million Yearly Goal Set by Chicago Builder

BY AL CHASE

[Real Estate Editor]

J. E. Merrion

Joseph E. Merrion, head of J. E. Merrion & Co., Chicago builder, and new president of the National Association of Home Builders of the United States, yesterday outlined a plan which he said would assure the construction of 2 million homes in the first two years after the war. His proposal was based on a nation wide tour just completed, after which he reported the home building program of the GI Bill of Rights was not operating as had been expected.

Altho more than a million veterans have returned, less than 3,000 GI loans have been approved, he said the Veterans administration reports. Of these only 200 were new homes to be built by builders.

The home building industry had prepared to supply homes at the rate of one million a year, he said.

Catastrophe Held Possible

"It's a shock to us to begin to realize that a combination of lack of understanding, burocratic red tape, paternalistic smothering, and deliberate sabotage by the social housing group may well pile up our entire effort," said Merrion. "The results may be catastrophic. The need for straight thinking and decisive action is overwhelming."

Merrion's plan to stimulate the building of homes is to write into the national housing act a new title 7. It would replace title 6, designed solely for war homes, and obsolete as need for war worker's dwellings disappears.

"This new title 7 would enable the veteran to purchase a new home at current cost," he said. "It would enable the builder on definite commitments to have a supply of such houses ready for the veteran upon his return, built not to individual contract in a tedious and costly operation, but built efficiently with all the aids and improvements in material and technique that we can develop.

Insure Vet Against Loss

"The reasonable normal value clause of the GI bill which leaves so much to the caprice of an administrator would be eliminated, and a special insuring fund could be allowed to insure not only the principal and interest of the first loan to the lender, but to insure the veteran himself against sharp or unfair loss caused by post-war deflation of prices. Sufficient protection could be written into the law without nullifying it."

The supply of houses developed under this system would not only insure jobs and bring prosperity to the construction industry, but it would cure overcrowding of cities and go a long way to cure the problem of blight and slums which is caused primarily by lack of homes.

Arthur E. Fossier, president of the Chicago Metropolitan Home Builders association, an affiliate of NAHB, said that the present $8,000 ceiling on H-2 [civilian nonwar housing] construction will be lifted to $10,000, with a possibility that it may be raised to $12,000.

To enable builders to take advantage of this higher price ceiling on new homes the national housing agency is expected to announce soon acceptance by the area production urgency committee of a recommendation by William C. Divers, NHA regional head, that Chicago be alloted priorities for 5,000 H-2 homes.

Fossier also reported that the present limitations of $200 on residential construction [alterations, additions, etc., to present homes], $1,000 on commercial, and $5,000 on industrial, are to be raised five times to $1,000, $5,000, and $25,000 respectively. Probably about July 1 an additional substantial increase beyond these ceilings will be permitted, he said.

DEBUNKS BRITISH ANNOUNCEMENT ON U.S. FLIGHTS

William Van Dusen, public relations director for Pan American Airways in New York City, yesterday characterized as a "publicity stunt" an announcement from London by the British Overseas Airways corporation that it has begun a summer service of four flights weekly between England and the United States.

The statement, attributed in a news dispatch to the BOAC, said that government controled British air service planned to use 40 ton flying boats, described as the largest in the world, on the 3,724 mile, 30 hour trip to Baltimore, with a refueling stop in Newfoundland.

It added that BOAC also planned to introduce on the same schedule a 58 ton 70 passenger air cruiser with two decks, a promenade, and a cocktail bar in the British race to capture a share of the rich trans-Atlantic air traffic.

Publicity for Big Cruiser

Van Dusen said that in aviation circles the BOAC announcement was regarded as an attempt to gain free publicity for the contemplated new type British cruiser which has a 110 foot hull and was described in the news story from London as being "not quite so big but faster" than the American air Goliath, the Martin Mars, now in war transport service.

Van Dusen said there was nothing new about the British trans-Atlantic service. He asserted that BOAC thruout the war has been operating the same flights out of Baltimore under priority regulations supervised by the British embassy at Washington, D. C.

American lines flying to Europe do not touch at London, he said, but fly to Foynes, Ireland, from which point they serve the European continent.

3 Pan American Flights

His own company, Van Dusen said, now has three weekly flights to Foynes by way of Newfoundland and one to Lisbon, Portugal, by way of the Azores in the middle Atlantic. These flights, he said, were maintained all during the war, but until last January could carry only high military priority passengers.

Regulations now have been somewhat relaxed, he said, to permit the transportation on each ship of approximately four passengers possessing lower ratings which are known as national interest priorities.

Three gunmen yesterday robbed Mrs. Victoria Gaura of $65 in her tavern at 4535 S. Kedzie av., then took $8 from Stanley Rykos, 4630 S. Sawyer av., and $37 from Mrs. William Berryman, 315 W. 47th st., both customers.

100,000 CROWD LOOP CENTER IN '7TH' BOND RALLY

Nearly 100,000 persons jammed the loop yesterday to witness a war bond rally held on the "Mighty 7th Center" platform at State and Madison sts. as part of the 7th war loan campaign. Traffic was stopped for blocks around the area and sales clerks in department stores joined their customers in leaning from store windows to watch the proceedings.

Iwo Flag Raisers Speak

Mrs. Harold Hirsh, 3400 Lake Shore dr., purchased $75,000 in war bonds and won a gold brooch which was auctioned off by Miss Ida Lupino, motion picture star, to the purchaser of the greatest amount of bonds. Second high bidder was Willard W. Cole, president of the State st. council, who offered to buy $70,000 in war bonds.

The three survivors of the historic flag raising over Mount Suribachi on Iwo Jima told the crowd of their experiences and urged that men and women at home buy as many bonds as they can to help win the war in the Pacific. The survivors are Pvt. Ira Hayes of Bapehul, Ariz., a full blooded Pima Indian; Pvt. Rene A. Gagnon of Manchester, N. H., and Pharmacist's Mate 2d Class John H. Bradley of Appleton, Wis.

Sgt. Neil P. Iovino, 39 S. 6th av., Maywood, recently liberated after three years in Cabanatuan prison camp in the Philippines, and Tech. Sgt. Keyes Beech of Akron, O., a hero of the Iwo Jima campaign, also spoke.

Music for the rally was furnished by the only Negro women's band in the services. WAC Staff Sgt. Leonora J. Brown of Jacksonville, Fla., directed the band, which came from Fort Des Moines, Ia., for the rally.

Medical Protection Is Available at United Medical Service

The rainy, chilly days of spring present serious dangers to health. Persons who are physically fit will suffer least, but those whose body resistance is lowered may face a serious illness through exposure to these conditions. Such a possibility can be largely prevented if the following precautions are taken now. Have a thorough physical examination, especially if you are past forty years of age. Conditions often exist in the body which, if neglected or aggravated by frequent colds and other respiratory disease, can lead to heart disease, cancer, tuberculosis, kidney trouble, diabetes or other serious ailments. With the aid of the X-ray and clinical laboratory procedures the examining physicians can make an early diagnosis of these beginning disease conditions when they can be more easily controlled. Therefore to be fully protective these examinations must include X-ray studies and pictures of the heart, lungs, teeth and other vital organs of the body, as well as an electrocardiogram of the heart and laboratory examinations. Every spring at this time hundreds of persons come to United Medical Service for these protective examinations and care. This spring even greater numbers are expected because of the many physicians now serving the armed forces. Here you will find an efficient staff of competent physicians representing all departments of medicine, ably supported by extensive X-ray, clinical laboratory and other necessary medical facilities. Appointments are not necessary. Come when most convenient for you. Our offices are centrally located and readily accessible by means of street cars, buses, elevated, subway and railroad trains and automobiles. Information furnished upon request. Write for booklet.

This group of medical procedures will disclose hidden infection or beginning disease in its earliest stages when treatment is most effective. A complete physical check-up by the physician, an X-ray of the chest showing condition of heart and lungs, and electrocardiogram of heart, blood pressure, a basal metabolism test, a full mouth X-ray of the teeth (14 films), a urological or gynecological examination, and laboratory tests of the blood, urine and other secretions. These combined services.................... $18.50

Women who have such ailments as headache, nervousness, pains in the abdomen, irregular menstruation, frequent or painful urination, need medical attention. Such conditions rarely correct themselves, especially if you are past 40 years of age, when cancer invasion is possible. Many thousands of patients have been examined and successfully treated here during the past 12 years. A regional examination, including the use of the colposcope, Schiller's test, microscopic study of secretions and discharges, urinalysis and blood tests, is................ $4.50

Older Men In older men such symptoms as fear, nervousness, frequent or painful urination, blood in the urine, discharges, or pain and discomfort of any kind call for a thorough physical check-up. To be fully protective, the clinical examination by the physician must include microscopic examination of all secretions and discharges, blood and serological tests. Examining fee is $4.50

Teeth X-Rayed
Under Medical Direction

When the teeth start to decay there is grave danger to health unless they are treated promptly. An X-ray of all the teeth at regular intervals will disclose their condition before serious damage has occurred. It is the only way to save your teeth and protect your health. Skin Disease

Only persons who have suffered from a skin disorder at some period in their lives can fully appreciate the pain and suffering involved. Many afflictions of the skin are only temporary conditions which proper medical care will quickly heal. Others, however, require the most expert medical knowledge and skill to bring under control. Therefore, if you have a skin disorder it should be accurately diagnosed and competently treated. Competent skin therapy is available here by physicians who have adequate knowledge and experience and the support of complete treatment facilities. Examination includes urinalysis, blood and serological tests. The fee is............. $4.50

Rectal Ailments
Diagnosed and Treated Without Pain or Loss of Time from Work

Rectal disorders are more dangerous than the average individual thinks possible. Medical authorities consider them a major disease problem. The most common or beginning type of rectal disorders are small blood tumors or varicose veins, called piles or hemorrhoids. Unless properly and promptly treated a simple hemorrhoid or pile can develop into a

Fistula or Rectal Abscess

When this occurs the physician's problem becomes more difficult and the patient's condition more serious. As soon as the abscess is opened by the physician most of the pain will cease. If it is delayed too long, however, pus may burrow into surrounding tissue, causing more abscesses and fistula tracts to form. Proper medical attention can prevent this constant menace to health. Examinations made here include the services of a competent and experienced physician as well as urinalysis, blood and serological tests. The examing fee is...... $4.50

Glasses Fitted Eyes Examined
Under Medical Direction

Such symptoms as persistent headache, dizzy spells, nervousness, etc., should call for a medical examination of the eyes without delay. These symptoms can be due to disease in the eyes or to ailments in other parts of the body. In any case treatment should begin at once. When vision is impaired and glasses are needed it is especially important to have them fitted correctly. Improperly fitted glasses can cause serious damage. Glasses fitted under medical direction provide greater protection to your eyes. This protective optical service is available here. In addition you can make your selection from beautifully engraved fulvue, gold filled mountings with excellent quality lenses for near and far vision. Stomach Disorders

While many stomach complaints are the result of abuse and wrong eating habits, persistent cases often indicate a more serious condition. The stomach often produces the first symptoms of beginning disease, such as kidney and liver complaints, gall bladder trouble, and other serious ailments, including cancer. Therefore, never neglect a chronic stomach ailment, particularly if you are past 40 years of age. Diagnosis requires a special gastro-intestinal examination, including a physical check-up by trained physicians, blood pressure, urinalysis, a blood examination and serological tests. The fee is...... $4.50

Ear, Nose Throat

These three organs are so closely related through connecting sinuses that one is rarely affected without involving all three. That is why severe colds will cause sore throat, inflammation, and infection in tonsils, adenoids, discharge from ears and other serious conditions. Lowered body resistance may account for recurring colds or they may be the result of more serious acute or chronic ailments. Our ear, nose, and throat physicians have the medical knowledge, experience, and facilities to diagnose and successfully treat these conditions. Public Invitation
For Proposals for the Purchase of Lands Surrounding
THE LAKE OF THE OZARKS

UNION ELECTRIC Land and Development Company invites proposals for the purchase of its entire real estate holdings, which consist of approximately 40,000 acres of resort and recreational lands located on the Lake of the Ozarks, including undeveloped Shawnee Bend (4340 acres), Horseshoe Bend (5524 acres) and other large restricted blocks, a luxurious lodge and miscellaneous improvements and equipment at the Lake; and a number of industrial and commercial tracts located in the City of St. Louis and St. Louis County. Written proposals will be received by the Company up to July 15th, 1945, in accordance with the Statement referred to below.

The Lake of the Ozarks, covering an area of 65,000 acres and having a 1300 mile shoreline, is located near the geographical center of the State of Missouri, in the colorful hill country of the Ozark highlands, near well-traveled transcontinental highways 40 and 66, and is traversed by paved U. S. Routes 54 and 65 and many improved state and county roads. The Lake is within one day's drive of thirty million people, and its popularity has been proven by the recurring patronage of residents of Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Iowa and Oklahoma.

Four-fifths of the desirable recreational lands surrounding the Lake of the Ozarks remain undeveloped, and the Company owns approximately ninety per cent of such undeveloped lands. Despite wartime restrictions, and in the absence of a current advertising and publicity campaign, the Company has sold, during 1944 and 1945 to date, 117 separate parcels, involving 3900 acres, for an aggregate consideration of $165,000.

Upon request, a statement of the terms and conditions relating to proposals, together with detailed information concerning the nature and location of the Company's holdings and illustrated description of the Lake region and its possibilities, will be furnished by the Company's Real Estate and Tax Officer in St. Louis, Missouri. Inspection trips may also be arranged through such Officer.

'AMERICAN DAY' WELCOMES NEW CITIZENS TODAY

Honor Heroes as 300 Take Oath at Soldiers' Field

Event—I Am An American day.
Place—Soldiers' field.
Time—2 p. m.; admission free.
How to get there—Bus, trolley, Illinois Central, and automobile. Ample parking facilities.

Chicagoans will have an opportunity for their first organized mass celebration of V-E day today at "I Am an American" day festivities in Soldiers' field. It will be the fifth observance of the day designated for welcome to those who have become citizens during the year.

A highlight of the program, which will start at 2 p. m., will be the posthumous presentation of the country's highest award, the congressional medal of honor, to Pvt. Frank P. Witek of the marines. Pvt. Witek, 22, son of Mrs. Nora Witek, 52, of 1731 N. Harding av., won the award for outstanding bravery in attacking an entrenched enemy machine gun position on Guam, where he was killed Aug. 3, 1944. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, marine corps commandant, will present the medal to Pvt. Witek's mother.

Suribachi Flag Raising

Gen. Vandegrift also will discuss plans for the Pacific war.

A replica of part of Mount Suribachi on Iwo Island has been erected in the field for a reënactment of the famous flag raising there. Three survivors of the original six who participated in the battle for Iwo and raised the American flag on top of the mountain afterward will take part.

Celebrities of movies, stage, and radio will appear, with Pat O'Brien, screen star, as master of ceremonies. He will introduce Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Sonny Tufts, Sophie Tucker, George Olsen, Jack Owens, Judith Blair, Henny Youngman, and others.

300 New Citizens

Addresses by Mayor Kelly, Gov. Green, and the Most Rev. Samuel A. Stritch, archbishop of Chicago, are scheduled. Judge Philip L. Sullivan of federal District court will administer the oath of citizenship to 300 new American citizens. Numerous nationality groups, veteran and patriotic organizations, massed bands, and other groups will participate. An hour long musical program, including American Legion, coast guard, and WAC bands, will precede the main program.

Probably the most spectacular event on the program will be a "parade of nations" and the formation of a "V" in the center of the field, with approximately 5,000 persons taking part and including veteran's units, 30 nationality groups, and others. Admission is free. Gates will open at 11 a. m.

TAXPAYER UNIT TURNS GUNS ON POST-WAR PLAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Springfield, Ill., May 19—The Taxpayers' Federation of Illinois, a nonpartisan agency, today turned its big guns from the state operating budget to the proposed post-war budget of 127 million dollars.

Little hope appears for reducing the operating budget of 604 million dollars, the federation said in a bulletin to taxpayers, because of the past week's record. Economy attempts were beaten down by "a group of Republican senators supported almost solidly by the Democratic minority," it said. A majority of the G. O. P. senators were on the losing side.

"The coalition unquestionably cost taxpayers of the state millions of dollars," the federation said. "The governor wins. The taxpayers lose."

But the bulk of the post-war budget, in a single omnibus bill totaling $99,719,034, still offers a target for taxpayers determined to smash the spending spree somewhere along the line, the bulletin said.

THEATER OF AIR STAGES TUNEFUL 'VAGABOND KING'

Audience Taken Back to 15th Century

BY EDWARD BARRY

The Chicago Theater of the Air last night transported its listeners back to 15th century France and recounted for them the story of the ragamuffin poet who became king for a day and who won the love of the kingdom's fairest woman.

The piece was "The Vagabond King," which despite the fact that it has been a radio favorite for decades, still can delight an audience when it is given an enthusiastic performance. Musical forces headed by Henry Weber, Marion Claire, Bruce Foote, and Ruth Slater succeeded in regilding some of the most worn of the Friml tunes.

"Some Day" Popular

"Some Day" became genuinely ingratiating in Miss Claire's performance. Even the "Song of the Vagabonds" recaptured some of its old pulse stirring power when Foote and the chorus flung its militant rhythms over the footlights.

A huge Medinah temple audience applauded warmly. The even larger audiences of W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system hardly could have failed to share the enthusiasm of their visible representatives.

Conductor Weber marshalled his forces skilfully and drew some especially expressive effects from the orchestra. To Miss Slater went the little Huguette waltz which contrasted so vividly with the rousing crowd song that followed.

Story Easy to Follow

The operetta's story, intricate in that it involves characters woh disguise themselves and who seek one another out in unexpected circumstances, was lucid and easy to follow in Jack La Frandre's production. This lucidity was due partly to the use of a generous sized speaking cast in addition to the singing.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, spoke on empires of the past and present. Text of his address will be found on the editorial page.

ROCKET TESTS AT ARMY AIR FIELD DISCLOSED

Dover, Del., May 19 (AP)—The army air field here today disclosed it has been experimenting with air borne rockets—fired from launches attached to airplanes.

A spokesman for the army public relations office in Philadelphia, Pa., said "an air borne rocket is one launched from a rocket launcher affixed to the wings or part of the body of an airplane."

A spokesman at the Dover air base said the rocket's effectiveness is considered comparable to that of a five inch artillery shell. A 3.5 inch air borne rocket and a 5 inch unit were among types tested with every available kind of launching ramp, the spokesman said.

Champaign, Ill., May 19 [Special]—Oak Park nipped New Trier at the tape in the last event, the 880 yard relay, today and thereby won the 51st state high school track championship by three-fourths of a point.

Oak Park's final total was 27¾ points, New Trier's 27. Going into the relay New Trier led by one-fourth point, 23 to 22¾.

These teams, picked from the start to battle for the title, put on the most spectacular finish in the history of the meet. Few previous meets have found the two leading teams so evenly matched, and none before has carried the suspense right up to the last fifth of a second of the program. It was not alone that Oak Park beat New Trier on the last event, but the champions did it on the last lap and in the last stride.

Holsinger, Collins Duel

When Campbell [Buzz] Collins of New Trier and Chet Holsinger of Oak Park accepted their batons for the last leg of the relay, they were even. They stayed that way for most of 215 yards, sprinting stride for stride around the south curve of Illinois Memorial stadium and into the straightaway. Somewhere in the last five yards, Holsinger pulled out the extra burst which sent him to the tape a half stride in front of Collins.

From the opening event today, which left the teams tied with six points apiece, 2,354 spectators followed the two team fight for the state championship. First Oak Park, then New Trier took the lead. With two events left, New Trier had 23 points and Oak Park 18¾. When Oak Park's Joe Angner won a second place in the half mile run, he pulled his team within a fourth of a point of the 1944 champions, set the stage for the climactic event—the relay.

Only One Record Broken

Only one record fell in the two day carnival. The shot put record of 54 feet 6 inches which Warren Ely of New Trier had set in yesterday's preliminaries was unmolested today.

Times in today's events were considerably slower than yesterday's preliminaries because of a south wind which blew into the runners' faces at four miles an hour. Thus, Jim Fuchs of Hyde Park, who had set a spectacular pace of :09.9 in his 100 yard dash trials yesterday, had to be content with a mediocre :10.4 in winning today.

Other champions made marks correspondingly slower than their preliminary heats. Chuck Peters of Blue Island won the 220 yard dash in :22.7, Tom Callinan of Wheaton the 880 in 1:59.5, Bill Mack of Argo the mile in 4:31.8, and Dick Warfield of New Trier both hurdles, in :15 for the high and :23 for the lows.

Ivy Only Downstate Victor

Joe Ivy of Sumner, a Negro high school in Cairo gave downstate its only running triumph as he won the quarter mile in :52.3.

The high jump went to Frank Strand of Blue Island at 6 feet; the pole vault to Ed Ulvestad of Oak Park at 12 feet, 4 inches; the broad jump to Bob Menary of Evanston, 22 feet, 1 inch, and the discus throw to Bob Williams of Galesburg, 147 feet, 8½ inches.

The pattern of today's duel for the championship had been forecast by last week's district trials. Oak Park's victory, therefore, was a team triumph over New Trier's individual stars.

Ten Score for Oak Park

Ten boys shared in the Oak Park scoring. The relay team comprised

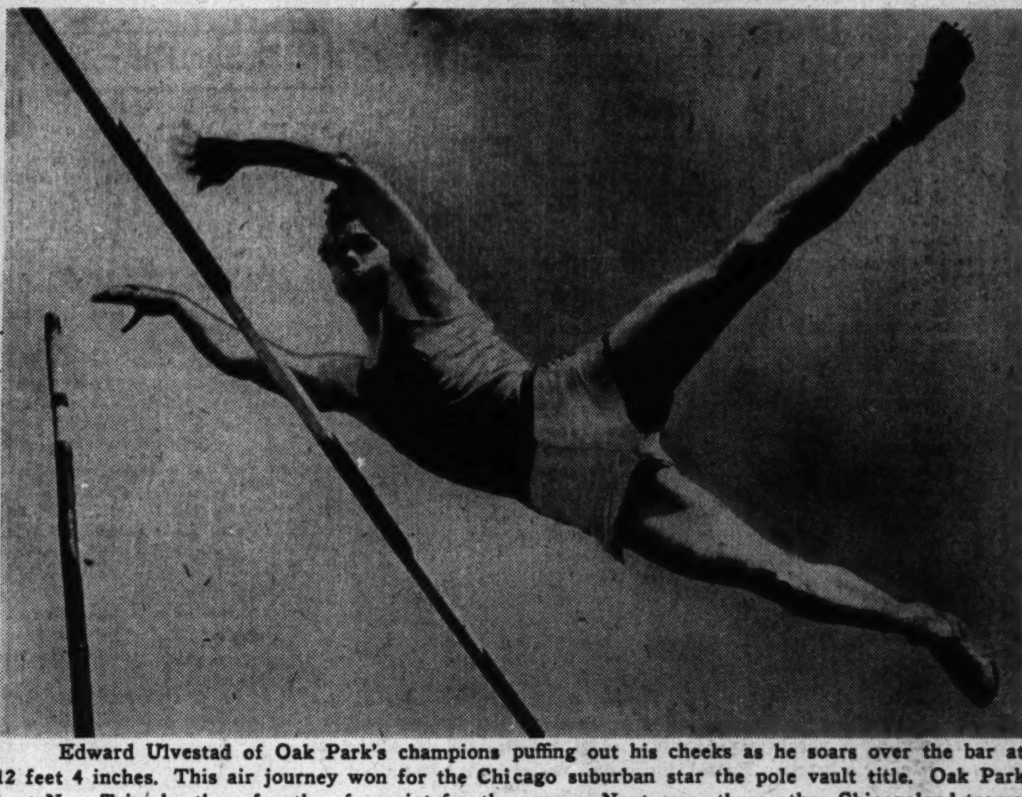
CHICAGOLAND FLAVOR IN STATE PREP TRACK MEET

Dick Warfield (arrow) of New Trier, moving in front of the field after taking the first barrier in the 120 yard high hurdles in yesterday's state high school track meet at the University of Illinois. He also won the low hurdles, but New Trier was beaten out for the team title by Oak Park.



Edward Ulvestad of Oak Park's champions puffing out his cheeks as he soars over the bar at 12 feet 4 inches. This air journey won for the Chicago suburban star the pole vault title. Oak Park beat New Trier by three-fourths of a point for the crown. Next came three other Chicagoland teams.

LANDIN STATE TENNIS CHAMPION; ROCKFORD EAST TOPS GOLF FIELD

Champaign, Ill., May 19 [Special]—Bill Landin of Evanston won the state high school tennis championship here today by defeating Bob David of Senn, 6-4, 8-6.

Landin thus repeated the victory he had scored over David last year in the semi-finals. Landin then lost to Dick Randall of Oak Park in the finals. Landin has one more year of high school competition and a chance to join the ranks of those who have won the interscholastic crown twice. This group includes George Lott, Frankie Parker, Seymour Greenberg, and Charles Shostrum.

In the doubles, 1944's runners-up triumphed again as Jim Moses and Wilson Besant of Pekin ascended to first place. They defeated Art Holman and Dick Gnaedinger of Oak Park, 6-4, 6-4. This gave Moses and Besant a record of 25 consecutive victories since they lost in last year's finals.

Oak Park won the team championship with 13 points. Evanston took second with seven followed by Pekin and Moline, tied with six. The team title was determined by a point for each match won. Three Oak Park entries reached the semi-finals in doubles and singles.

Urbana, Ill., May 19 [Special]—Howard Whiteway of Glenbard today won the individual championship, and Rockford East triumphed for the fourth straight year in the team championship in the state high school golf tournament.

Whiteway shot 79 for a two day total of 160. Chuck Lindgren of Rockford East for the second straight year, finished as runner-up. His 36 hole score of 161 tied Lyle Licht of Urbana, and he beat Licht in a 9 hole play-off, 42-45.

Pete Fletcher of Champaign won fourth place in a sudden death, two hole play-off with Hiram Loveland, Rockford East, after they had tied at 162.

Rockford East's team aggregate of 655 was 21 strokes better than Glenbard's 676 for second place. Moline and New Trier tied for third with 681. New Trier won in a play-off.

FOOTBALL STAR JOKES AS MINE BLOWS OFF LEGS

Denver, Colo., May 19 (AP)—The heroic attitude with which Lt. Jack Loomis, former New York Giants football player from Texas, accepted loss of both legs on Iwo Jima was described today by a buddy.

"We had been under artillery fire for 36 hours," related Capt. Donald H. O'Rourke, home in Denver on leave, "and were just about to move out when Loomis stepped on a land mine. Both his legs were blown off.

"They got him on a stretcher and as they started back with him he smiled at me and said:

"'The Giants sure are losing a mighty good football player.'"

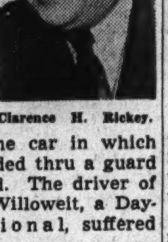
Auto Accident Proves Fatal to C. H. Rickey



Clarence H. Rickey.

Clarence H. Rickey, long one of the most energetic officials in the manufacture of sports equipment, died yesterday in the Springfield, O., city hospital, it was learned here last night. Rickey, who was 48 years old, died of injuries received in an automobile accident near Springfield Thursday, when the car in which he was riding skidded thru a guard rail and overturned. The driver of the car, Oscar G. Willoweit, a Dayton, O., professional, suffered bruises and shock.

Rickey, who was president of MacGregor Golf, Inc., of Dayton, only recently recovered from injuries suffered in another auto accident near Cincinnati last Dec. 19. He is survived by his widow, Alice; a son, Robert, and a brother, Clifford. Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

Rickey was a leading figure in Chicago golf for many years. A native of Mount Sterling, Ill., he was a director and golf chairman at the Medinah Country club here. He was instrumental in encouraging such golfers as Tommy Armour, Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan, Harold McSpaden, and Tony Penna.

Vain Prince Triumphs at Santa Anita

Santa Anita Park, Cal., May 19—[Special] — Clyde Phillips' Vain Prince scored a two-length triumph in the six furlong San Gabriel handicap today before a crowd of 43,400.

The $25,000 pot was the richest ever offered for aged sprinters on the turf, and as 2 to 1 favorite Vain Prince collected $19,890 for his owner. Orion was second, Phar Rong third and Happy Issue, winner of the Hollywood gold cup, fourth. The time in the San Gabriel was 11:11 2-5.

Vain Prince Closes Radiply

Gold Mike, Orion, and Civil Code set the early pace, but Vain Prince came strongly after leaving the back stretch and closed rapidly to take command in the last eighth. Orion hung on well, but Civil Code dropped back and las last in the 10 horse field, bleeding during the race.

Phar Rong was also outrun early but finished well to take the show. Happy Issue was next to last in the run down the back side and yas bothered in the stretch when forced to come between Bizerte and Pari Brazen but closed a big gap to finish fourth.

Record of $2,216,494 Handle

Vain Prince paid $6.50, $4.00, and $3.10 across the board. Orion paid $10.80 and $6.50; Phar Rong, $7.50.

Seven straight favorites paraded to the winner's circle, making a record handle of $2,216,494—$362,180 on the feature race alone.

ANDERSON WINS HOOSIER PREP TRACK CROWN

Indianpalis, Ind., May 19 [Special]—Anderson High school, scoring in eight of the 13 events, piled up 41½ points on Tech field today to win the 41st annual state track meet. The Indiana, winning its first track title, replaced Hammond which was second with 32 points. Gary Roosevelt placed third with 26½ points. Other team scores included:

Lafayette, 23; Muncie Central, 15 3-5; Ambia and Elkhart, 14 each; Evansville Reitz, 11½; South Bend John Adams, 11; and New Albany, 9 1-5.

John Goldsberry of South Bend Adams set the only record when he tossed the shot 53 feet, 9¾ inches, shattering the mark of 52 feet, 11½ inches set by Don Elser of Gary Horace Mann in 1931.

Maynard De Witt, lone entrant from Ambia High, was the individual star, scoring all of his school's 14 points by winning the broad jump, the 100 yard dash, and taking second in the 220 yard dash.

SPORTSMAN'S BIGGEST '45 CROWD WAGERS $839,407; QUIZZLE WINS

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN

After a rather lethargic six days at the mutuel windows, followers of the thorobreds at Sportsman's Park swung into their 1944 record breaking form yesterday and kept the clerks on their toes thruout an eight race program.

Perhaps it was the publicized appearance of Hollywood film stars, Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Pat O'Brien, Ida Lupino, and the veteran trouper, Sophie Tucker, only two of whom showed up—O'Brien and Miss Tucker—or it may have been the Seventh War Loan bond drive of the Illinois Racing board and the track management that drew a crowd of 15,093, best of the meeting.

In either event, business was so good that the opening day's wagering total of $684,384 was topped after only seven races. The total handle for the day was $839,407. The high mark for last spring's meeting was $824,054 and the track's record of $975,766 was set on the final day of The Chicago Tribune charity meeting last fall.

Quizzle Wins Handicap

Another attraction, of course, was the $2,500 Pat O'Brien handicap which went to A. S. Higgins' Quizzle, ridden by Paul Glidewell. The 7 year old son of Milkman-Question was established a 4 to 5 favorite and took the event by six lengths from J. M. Hutchins' Valdina Malden, piloted by Apprentice Billy Nichols, leading jockey of the meeting. It was Nichols' fifth straight second of the afternoon. Mrs. Joseph Hoaglin's Amalka saved the show. The winner paid $3.60.

The war bond drive, headed by Frank E. Mandel, a member of the racing board, netted sales totaling $351,000. President John L. Keeshin's private box went for $200,000 to Fred H. Klein, a New York textile manufacturer. The National Jockey club, operators of the Sportsman's Park, bought $100,000 worth of bonds for Charles W. Bidwill's box. The racing board members purchased the James B. Bowler seats for $16,000. Richard M. Lawless took the racing board's box for $25,000. Jack Levin bought Sam Ruby's accommodations for $5,000 and Albert Schultz purchased the same amount for Al Horan's reservation.

Double Pays $16.60

Miola, a 7 year old son of Misstep, owned by the S. and S. stable and ridden by Joe Cavens, whipped the favorite, Happy Hour farm's Ambranded, in the opening event. Then W. H. Bishop's Bashful Duck, the 4 to 5 choice, walked away with the second and the daily double was worth only $16.60.

HARFORD PAYS $99.20

Baltimore, Md., May 19 (AP)—A crowd of 21,039 today saw Miss Ruth McClanghan's Harford, an outsider, capture the $5,000 Rowe Memorial at Pimlico from Quien Es, the favorite, in a photo finish. The winner paid $99.20, $20.70, and $7.60 across the board.

New Moon Finishes Third

The 5 year old Harford, son of Chance Play-Norado, was last in a field of seven at the half and Jockey Carson Kirk didn't begin his bid until reaching the far turn. The big chestnut gelding swept around the field at the head of the homestretch, gradually wearing down all but Morris Wexler's Quien Es, which he caught at the wire.

Pawtuckett, R. I., May 19 (AP)—The second million dollar racing day of the New England season was recorded today at Narragansett Park when the mutuel machines tabulated a total of $1,299,853.

Max Marmorstein's Castleman, favorite of the crowd of 21,000, won the $5,000 Spring handicap. Kept back of the early leaders by Jockey Gigi Moore, the [illegible] year old son of Chance Sun won by half a length from Mrs. Lottie Wolf's Good Going.

Castleman's time for six furlongs over a heavy track was 1:16 2/5. He earned $4,250 for his owner and paid his backers $5.80, $3,80, $2.80.

Good Going returned $6.80 and $4.80 after finishing three and a half lengths in front of Mrs. M. J. Wolfson's Smart Bet. The latter paid $3.20 show.

The daily double returned $43.20 to holders of 1,283 tickets combining the J and G stable's Spread Eagle, winner of the first, with Lyle Whiting's Chance Sord, which took the second event.

Cubs, Dodgers Rained Out; to Play 2 Today

BY EDWARD BURNS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 19—Paul Derringer and Hank Wyse, only winning Cub pitchers since April 25, the gents who have won seven of the 10 Chicago victories this season, will be sent against the Dodgers in tomorrow's double header.

Derringer, slated to pitch today until the game had been called off because of rain, will be making his third try for his fifth victory in the first game. Big Paul also will be seeking to end the Cub losing streak, which last night mounted to six straight when the Cubs came out second best in a 15 to 12 slugging match in the opener here.

Wyse Seeks Fourth

Wyse, winning pitcher over the Phillies a week ago yesterday and over the Braves as a reliever a week ago today, will be making his second try for his fourth victory. He was knocked out after Mel Ott, Phil Weintraub, and Ernie Lombardi hit homers in the seventh inning of Wednesday night's game in New York.

The second place Dodgers were reluctant to let the Cubs get away from their clutches this afternoon. The management insisted upon the players coming over the bridge from their Manhattan headquarters tho there was constant rain all day. It was not postponed until an hour before game time.

The Dodgers have won 12 of their last 13 games and couldn't be blamed much for wanting a full card of chances at the floundering Chicagoans, who have collapsed in 11 of their last 14 diamond appearances.

Games End Eastern Trip

Tomorrow's double header will be the windup of the Cubs' sorry first invasion of the east. Next Wednesday the woeful Chicagoans will receive the Phillies in Wrigley field.

An important aspect of the return home will be that facilities will be available to get some of the Cub pitchers in physical shape to make professional public appearances.

CONCORDIA GETS 8 IN FIRST, BEATS ELMHURST, 16-3

Concordia defeated Elmhurst college, 16 to 3, at Concordia yesterday. Art Teschke hit a home run in the eighth inning scoring for the winners in the first inning.

Rube Stokes, who started on the mound for Concordia, struck out nine in three innings:

As additional proof that there is no end to the magic of James Dykes, the White Sox introduced John Humphries in his maiden 1945 start yesterday and nothing happened to disturb the first place role in which the South Siders are enjoying first place luxury. Humphries wasn't present at the finish, having to seek aid during a turbulent ninth, but Frank Papish, a youth of left handed attainments, took over and quickly fastened down a 3 to 2 success over Boston's Red Sox.

All that was worth while in the Chicagoans' attack occurred in the first inning when, with a batch of five hits, they registered what proved their run total for the day, the enemy operator at the time being one Jim Wilson, who wasn't around for long.

Hockett, Schalk Hit Doubles

Altho the first three Chicago boys to bat produced hits in the opening inning, there were two out before any worthwhile results were attained. Guy Curtright started it with a single and died stealing. Oris Hockett and John Dickshot followed with singles and while Bill Nagel's intentions were good, he could produce nothing more potent than a pop foul. Tony Cuccinello did better by doubling over third, Hockett scoring. Ray Schalk also doubled, Dickshot and Cuccinello counting.

Wilson had to get out of the place in the second but there was no scoring at the time, the fans having to wait for a run-getting exhibition until Boston did it, with help in the fourth. Schalk invited the visitors into the run column by tossing wild to Nagel on Ben Steiner's grounder at the start of the inning. After two were out, Pete Fox and Jack Tobin singled and Steiner crossed the plate.

Errors Help Boston's Cause

A single and an error, the latter charged against Humphries for his failure to pick up Steiner's easy grounder, gave Boston an opening in the fifth but it was overlooked. However, they were on the job when another blunder occurred in the sixth. Fox singled with one out and stole second as Tobin fanned for the second out. Tom McBride hoisted a fly into right field which was under the guard of Curtright. The latter let the ball drop, Fox scoring the Red Sox's second run. The Boston storm in the ninth began with a double by McBride and a pop single by John Lazor who batted for Bob Garbark. Leon Culberson came forth to do McBride's running and Mike Ryba provided the next item by sacrificing.

Joe Bowman batted for Newsome and was purposely passed, filling the bases. Eddie Lake ran for Bowman, Papish came to Humphries' rescue and Lloyd Christopher batted for Steiner. Papish fanned him and then Nick Polly, who batted for George Metkovich, popped up a foul that Mike Tresh grabbed to conclude the show.

MICHIGAN ROUTS PURDUE; SETS 4 TRACK RECORDS

Wolverines Win, 97-25, in Dual Meet

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 19 [Special] — Four meet records were broken and a fifth was tied this afternoon as Michigan scored a 97 to 25 victory over Purdue in a dual track meet.

New meet marks were set by Michigan's Dick Forrestell, who ran the 440 yard dash in :49.8 seconds to eclipse Bill Belle's mark of 50.1 seconds set in 1940; Michigan's Archie Parsons who ran the half mile in 1:55.3 to better the old record by two and two-tenths seconds; Michigan's Charles Birdsall who was timed at 9:53.4 in the two mile to break his own mark of 10:06.6, and Purdue's Dick Kilpatrick who went 6 feet 3 inches in the high jump to break by two inches his own record.

The pole vault meet record of 12 feet made by Michigan's Gene Moody last year was equalled by Warren Bentz and Lawrence Scheer, both of Michigan.

The Wolverines, preparing for defense of their western conference title in Champaign next week, slammed the mile run, the half mile, the low hurdles, the broad jump, and the shotput.

OAK PARK WINS STATE CROWN IN FINAL RACE

Jim Fitzpatrick, Bob Eilert, Bill Little, and Holsinger. Ulvestad won the pole vault. Angner in the 880, Don Brandeau in the high hurdles, and Holsinger in the low hurdles were second. Al Wahl claimed a surprise third in the shot with the longest put of his career, 50 feet. Don Hoover ran fourth in the high hurdles, and Pierre Peloquin tied for fourth in the pole vault.

New Trier made more spectacular performers but fewer of them. Its roster included the only record breaker, the 6 foot, 3¼ inch, 215 pound Ely, and the individual scoring leader, Warfield. The latter was the only double winner. Added to his hurdle victories was his share in the second place relay finish.

Other New Trier scorers were Jim Smith, third in the low hurdles; Littrell Clark, third in the 220 yard dash; Ely, fifth in the discus, and Dick Kearney, fifth in the 440. Bill Bowler and Collins joined with Clark and Warfield to run on the relay team, making a total of seven boys who participated in New Trier's scoring.

Holsinger Key to Triumph

Bill Augustine of Aurora East, who lost his 880 yard championship in yesterday's trials, may find consolation today in the fact another defending champion fell. Kendall Freeman of Sterling stopped at 11 feet 6 inches in the pole vault and Ulvestad, who had been second to Freeman last year, went on to win with 12 feet 4 inches. Freeman shared second with his team mate, Kenneth Gould. Thus Ely was the only 1944 champion to repeat.

Ulvestad's upset of Freeman was an important point in the Oak Park program, as was Wahl's improvement in the shot put. But the master of spectacular finishes was Holsinger. He not only nipped Collins in the windup of the relay, but also used a final burst of energy to grab second in the low hurdles. Warfield and Smith had given New Trier one-two position in this race right up to the time they flashed over the last hurdle. Then Holsinger, who had been drawing up on Smith, used his sprinter's speed to beat him to the tape by a few inches.

Wind Stops Mack

Perhaps the most disappointed recordseeker was Mack in the mile. Considered a threat to Blaine Rideout's 12 year old record of 4:25.2, Mack had no trouble beating Herb Barten of Schurz, the runner-up, by 10 yards but he couldn't get closer than 6.6 seconds to the record. The wind was too strong for him. He discouraged most of his competition with a 60 second opening quarter, then followed with laps of 70, 75, and 66.8 seconds.

The north, as always, dominated the meet. Ten of the individual champions were from Chicago suburbs, Evanston, Winnetka, Oak Park, Wheaton, Argo, and Blue Island, one was from Chicago, one from the deep southern tip of the state, one from the northwest, and none from central Illinois.

It was Oak Park's 15th state title and its seventh in the last 16 years. It previously won in 1907, 1908, 1913, 1915, 1919, 1920, 1923, 1924, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1937, 1938, and 1942. New Trier won in 1934 and 1944.

POLE VAULT—Won by Ed Ulvestad, Oak Park, 12 feet 4 inches; Kendall Freeman, Sterling, and Kenneth Gould, Sterling, 11 feet 6 inches, tied for second; Pierre Peloquin, Oak Park; Bob Grinnell, Libertyville; Jack Dunley, West Aurora, and George Mathes, Glenbard, 11 feet, tied for fourth.

SHOTPUT—Won by Warren Ely, New Trier, 54 feet 6 inches; Jim Byler, Hyde Park, 51 feet 6 inches, second; Al Wahl, Oak Park, 50 feet, third; Martin Detmer, Highland Park, 48 feet 3½ inches, fourth; Dick Nealon, East St. Louis, 48 feet 1 inch, fifth. [Ely's distance is new state record. Old record, 54 feet 4½ inches, set by Martin Haufe, York, in 1943.]

880 YARD RELAY—Won by Oak Park [Jim Fitzpatrick, Bob Eilert, Bill Little, Chet Holsinger], 1:32.6; New Trier [Littrell Clark, Bill Bowler, Dick Warfield, Campbell Collins], 1:32.8, second; Highland Park, 1:32.9, third; La Grange, 1:33.2, fourth; Geneseo, 1:33.9, fifth.

Harvard Crew Gets Confused; Loses to Girls!

Boston, Mass, May 19 (AP)—Radcliffe college's girl crew today bested a straw-hatted Harvard eight in a prankish stunt race—first water contest between the Cambridge neighbors—winning by 3 seconds in a flutter finish.

The Harvard athletes had a flutter of amnesia, or perhaps chivalry, misjudged the finish line, and stopped racing with 50 yards to go.

Radcliffe, co-captained by titian-haired twin sisters, Jane and Dorothy Driscoll, Brookline, spurted on, finishing the half mile Charles river course winner by half a length in 4:08.

The contestants were impeded by an uninvited Massachusetts Institute of Technology crew, who wore yellow jerseys.

CHICAGO TENNIS TEAM LOSES 1ST AT PURDUE, 8-0

The Home Front

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS

CHICAGOLAND'S newest industrial softball leagues, sponsored by the equally new Chicago Affiliated Industrial Recreation association, will open their schedules a week from tomorrow night in Rockola stadium, 4200 N. Central av. The new organization will start with a men's league of eight teams and a women's circuit of four.

The membership will include industries which have had some of the strongest athletic teams in this area in recent years and if the softball promotion is successful, may branch out into other sports later. The men's league will include Danly Machine Co., Webster Chicago, Haber Screw Machine Products, Motorola Radio, National Mineral Products, Illinois Tool Works, J. P. Seeburg, Inc., and Rauland Radio.

Entrants in the girls' league are Haber, Motorola, Illinois Tool, and Seeburg. All games will be played at night, with sessions each Monday and Thursday. There will be a girls' contest to open the program, followed by two men's games on each playing night, giving each team one game a week. The Rockola stadium lighting plant has been improved and considerable other work done to make the establishment more attractive to players and spectators.

Board of Directors Will Govern Association

The new association will be governed by a board of directors made up of one representative from management of each of the interested companies. Lyle Bennett of Illinois Tool is the chairman; Ralph Isackson of Seeburg, secretary, and Eddy Ryan of Haber, treasurer. Other members of the board are Bill Keller of Danly, R. Lohnes of Webster Chicago, Jim Cusentino of Motorola, Harry Kerber of National Mineral, and J. H. Osborn of Rauland. Ed Krejcik will be the chief umpire, assisted by Andy Anderson. Ed Weinstein, who has served as interpreter of softball rules for a number of Chicago leagues, will be the court of last resort in any arguments over interpretation of the playing code.

SPORTS FOR ALL

They may be old men to some of the kids, but a group of not so young softball players at the Owens-Illinois Glass company plant in Alton refuse to be pushed out of the picture. They have organized softball teams known as the Old Youngsters and the Not So Goods and are looking forward to a big season. They even may take on some of the youngsters who are making fun of their efforts.

Industrial Golf Association Ready to Open Tourney Season

Greatly encouraged by the warmer weather of the last few days, the Industrial Amateur Golf association is completing plans for the start of its summer tournament program a week from today. That will be the May round of the preliminary events, to be played over three courses.

John Gertenrich, secretary of the association, said yesterday that north and west section teams will start their season at Mohawk Country club, south siders will play at Navajo Country club, and the Lake county section will hold forth on a Waukegan course not yet definitely chosen.

The latest check of entries showed that 22 foursomes expect to play in the combined west-north sectional, 15 in the southern zone, and 15 in the Lake county district. Industries wishing to enter teams still may do so by getting in touch with Gertenrich at the Douglas Aircraft plant in Park Ridge.

Ray Summers, manager of Illinois Tool Works softball teams which have won four championships in three Chicago industrial leagues in the last four years, displays the four trophies his boys have won and indicates there's room for another this season.

Republic Aviation's Indiana Division Active in Sports

Republic Aviation, Indiana division, at Evansville, supports a well rounded athletic program, as is shown by the fact that plant activities in nine sports were mentioned as being in progress in a recent issue of Republic Aviation News, the plant's weekly paper. These were golf, tennis, bowling, badminton, baseball, softball, volleyball, swimming, and horseback riding.

Champion bowlers, both teams and individuals, recently were honored at RCA-Victor corporation, Bloomington, Ind., the plant athletic association being host at an awards dinner. . . . Another industrial recreation activity was the "Spring Scandals" presented by the Welfare and Recreation association of Standard Steel Spring company, Madison, Ill., in Kiel auditorium, St. Louis. It was an entirely plant talent show, with direction, staging, script, and all other details also taken care of by employes.

BOB, BING AND BIG 10 GOLFERS SWING SATURDAY

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

Chicago, which hasn't been lacking in worthwhile fairway competitions since the war began, usually has had to wait until June to get into full swing; but next Saturday will produce a program of midsummer tempo. Three events, any one of which would be adequate for a day's satisfaction, are on the schedule.

In the first, Bing Crosby and Chick Evans will battle Bob Hope and Jimmy Hines at Tam o' Shanter for the Illinois section of the National P. G. A.'s rehabilitation fund for hospitalized service men. The second will witness decision of the 1945 Western conference individual and team championship tournaments over Northwestern's new course in Wilmette. The third will bring out a big field in Chicago's oldest established invitational—the 41st annual Midlothian Derby.

Ticket Order of 10,000

Coincident with these will be the opening of the Byron Nelson-Sam Snead 72 hole match in the east, also ticketed for the National P. G. A. rehabilitation fund.

The Crosby-Hope-Evans-Hines foursome promises one of the largest galleries of this or any other season. George S. May, the Tam o' Shanter impresario, already has an initial ticket order of 10,000, each to sell at $1.20. The match is being held under the auspices of the following sponsors and their representatives:

Professional Golfers' Association of America, Maynard G. Fessenden; Illinois section of the P. G. A., Alex Cunningham and Harry Adams; Western Golf association, T. C. Butz; Women's Western Golf association, Mrs. Charles Dennehy; Chicago District Golf association, L. D. Rutherford; Chicago Women's District Golf association, Mrs. Landon Phelps, and the Midwest Greenkeepers' association, Ray Didier.

The four will play an 18 hole match, beginning at 2 p. m. The Illinois P. G. A. is now setting up a plan whereby the caddies for the quartet of stars will be overseas veterans now hospitalized in this area.

Big Ten at N. U.

The conference meet at Northwestern is expected to be the bitterest fight in the 24 year career of the tournament. All member schools except Iowa and Chicago will compete in the 36 hole medal play duels for the two titles, with the low four scorers from any one school taking team honors.

The Nelson-Snead match will bring together the two men who dominated the recent winter golf tour. Saturday's 36 holes will be played on a medal basis at the Fresh Meadow Country club in Flushing, N. Y., and the final 36, at match play, will be determined at the Essex County club, West Orange, N. J., next Sunday.

ARMY, NAVY GET 96,000 FISHING KITS IN CHICAGO

BY BOB BECKER

Altho fishermen on the home front may think they have heard some tall fishing yarns about savage muskies, lake trout, northern pike, and other American game fish, it's quite possible that returning soldiers, marines, sailors, and seabees who have had a whirl at the fishing in Pacific waters will be able to really tell the prize winning fishing yarns of all time. Thousands of GI's are fishing during their off duty hours and they're catching not only big fish, but many queer looking tropical species with bizarre names.

The only drawback to this overseas fishing by the GIs is lack of suitable tackle. Some of the boys have rods, reels, and lures, but most of them have to use simple hand lines with either trolling lures or hooks and live bait.

Assembled in Chicago

Thousands of GI recreational fishing kits have been made or assembled in Chicago for the army and navy, but we have a hunch that the number sent out does not meet all demands for equipment. We have on our desk right now a letter from a group of boys in Africa who need fishing tackle. They're in a quiet area where it's pretty dull. They want to fish, and Sgt. Jack G. Charlesworth of the group writes us that he hopes we can get him some tackle. So far we've had no luck in collecting any.

Chicago Is One of Many

The GI recreational fishing kit being distributed by the army includes two waterproofed trolling lines, a dip net for minnows, some hooks, sinkers, and a spoon lure, and a small spear or harpoon point. All of this fits into a neat cloth sack. The navy outfit, most of which is manufactured and assembled by Pachner & Koller, Inc., Chicago, includes heavy hand lines, two metal spoons, an assortment of heavy sinkers, several packages of hooks of various sizes, and a 1½ ounce feathered jig for trolling.

The navy has fishing equipment for 25 men packed in one box. Tackle shipments to take care of more than 46,000 navy and 50,000 army fishermen already have been shipped from Chicago alone, and other American companies also are producing these outfits.

CLASS FREIGHT RATE EQUALITY ORDERED BY ICC

South, West Victory Scraps Precedent

Washington, D. C., May 19 (AP)—The south and the western states out to the Rocky mountains today won their long fight for parity with the east in basic freight rates, largely affecting manufactured goods. The interstate commerce commission ordered, in effect, that as soon as schedules can be prepared an article moving by railroad freight shall take the same rate classification regardless of where it starts and stops.

The commission also directed that uniform "class rates" be established for the whole territory east of the Rockies, effectually eliminating present territorial divisions. The far west had not petitioned for that change.

The commission recommended establishment as a base of a class rate scale approximately 15 per cent higher than present eastern territory rates—a lowering of class rates for other territories.

Temporary Changes Fixed

Because effecting the classification and rate changes may require as long as two years, the commission directed the railroads as a temporary measure to raise all class rates 10 per cent within eastern territory and lower all class rates 10 per cent in and between southern, western, and southwestern territories, and between these territories and eastern territory.

The railroads were permitted 90 days to state whether they will undertake to submit a uniform classification, and the temporary relief was ordered into effect by Aug. 30.

[Railroad freight authorities and other interests said last night they could not discuss the significance of the ICC order until they examined it in detail and in relation to their own businesses. Southern congressmen welcomed the ruling as of vast benefit to southern business.]

Rate Bases Are Explained

Class rates, the only ones affected, in general cover articles of the same general character, which are placed in a class and where the shipment is not large enough to demand a commodity rate. These customarily include such items as shoes, watches, and other manufactured articles.

Commodity rates apply principally to carload shipments of a single or closely related commodities being moved in big volume at a specified price for a specified haul—usually such items as coal, live stock, lumber, grain, cotton, and sand.

The decision, generally conceded to be the most important in ICC history, is not to be confused with a suit of similar nature instituted against the railroads by the state of Georgia. Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia said it will be continued regardless of ICC action, "to complete the job of freeing the transportation system of America."

Competition Made Issue

The ICC decision stems from a demand of years by the south and west for uniform rates. Asserting that lower rates in the industrial east were discriminatory, spokesmen for the south and west have contended that the change would put other sections of the country in a better position to compete with the east in establishment and development of industry.

Spokesmen for the east have replied that the south and west enjoyed the advantage of lower commodity rates, especially on such commodities as cotton. They argued that if class rates were to be revised commodity rates also should be looked into.

The railroads denied present rates were discriminatory and asserted they were in keeping with railroad costs for a territory of smaller population, less industrial development, and smaller traffic volume.

Two Members Dissent

Involving the highly complicated freight rate structure of the nation with literally millions of rates for thousands of items, points of origin, and destinations, the controversy was marked by an unusual conflict of opinions and interpretations of fact.

Freight rates change constantly, and the right of shippers to request changes in particular rates for particular items between specified points was not removed—only the classifications will become uniform and the pattern of rates permanent.

Dissenting from the decision of the 11 man commission were Claude R. Porter and George M. Barnard. Porter said he favored bringing rate structures "much more closely" together, but termed the majority report one-sided. He said the uniformity ordered was "without adequate support on the record," ignored rate making standards of 58 years, and was contrary to best interests of the shipping public and the railroads.

Resume Work Tomorrow in Hard Coal Pits

Washington, D. C., May 19 (AP)—John L. Lewis today agreed with anthracite operators on a contract providing an over-all daily pay raise of $1.37½ for miners and called for resumption of work in hard coal mines Monday. Production in Pennsylvania's anthracite fields was halted May 1 when the old contract expired.

The 72,000 anthracite miners will vote on the new agreement in a referendum and it will be submitted next week to the war labor board and other government agencies for approval. Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, said complete details of the contract probably will not be announced until it goes to WLB.

Full Mine Force Urged

Lewis, meanwhile, sent the mines word to end the 19 day strike and said he hoped "all mine workers will return to work in full force Monday morning."

Solid Fuel Administrator Ickes, who has been in charge of the anthracite mines since the government took control May 3, estimated that the strike resulted in the loss of 3½ to 4 million tons of coal.

It was Ickes who suggested the compromise increase of $1.37½ after the operators, during 46 days of negotiation, had boosted their original offer of $1.03 to $1.25 and Lewis had demanded increases totaling $1.79.

Hangs on Federal Approval

Lewis and the operators agreed that the new contract is contingent upon a decision by government officials whether it is acceptable under the wage stabilization policy, and on the awarding of price adjustments by the price administration to cover the increases.

The agreement contains provisions for underground travel time pay, overtime for work beyond seven hours a day and 35 hours a week, differentials for second and third shifts and increased vacation allowances. The travel time pay is believed to be between $1.12½ and $1.20 a day.

NEW BURLINGTON 'PENDULUM TYPE' CARS PUT IN USE

Three "pendulum type" chair cars, embodying a new principle of spring suspension, are being operated on Burlington railroad trains between Chicago and Omaha-Lincoln, Neb., the railroad reported yesterday. Altho the cars have been in use since 1942, this is the first time all three have been operated together to study their behavior when not restricted by adjoining cars of conventional design.

The pendulum action is accomplished by suspending the car body, at a point above its center of gravity, from soft action coil springs which extend up into recesses in the body structure on either side of the car aisle. As a result, when the car rounds a curve at a higher speed than is compensated for by the super elevation of the rails, the body tends to swing out at the bottom rather than the top, giving a "banking" effect.

LABOR-INDUSTRY STUDY ORDERED BY SENATE UNIT

Washington, D. C., May 19 (AP)—A broad study of labor-management relations and the question of consolidating scattered government labor agencies, was ordered today by the senate small business committee.

Chairman Murray [D., Mont.] said the purpose would be to promote coöperation and suggest "sound government policies and procedures to assure that maximum employment in the country's smaller producing units is achieved and maintained." Sen. McMahon [D., Conn.] heads the inquiry subcommittee which will begin hearings early in June. Other members are Murray and Sen. Wilson [R., Ia.].

FEDERAL RULE OF T., P. & W. LINE HELD ILLEGAL

1944 Order Ended Control: LaBuy

The United States government has illegal possession of the Toledo, Peoria and Western railroad, United States District Judge LaBuy ruled yesterday. The road was seized by the government and placed under control of the office of defense transportation by an order issued by President Roosevelt March 21, 1942.

George P. McNear Jr.

LaBuy's ruling was made on a bill in equity filed by the T. P. & W. against the ODT operators of the property, challenging their right to operate the railroad. It held that Holly Stover, general manager of the property for ODT, and his subordinates are not properly in possession of the railroad and that the bill in equity should not be dismissed. The defendants, the ODT operators of the road, were ordered to answer the bill.

Held Victory for McNear

The opinion was regarded a major victory for George P. McNear Jr., president of the road, who has been endeavoring to regain the property since it was seized by the government. The seizure was made after McNear refused to arbitrate a strike, which started late in December, 1941.

The judge ruled that the action of the government in taking over the property in March 1942, was legal. He held that the taking over of all the railroads, including the T. P. & W., by Secretary of War Stimson on Dec. 28, 1943, was legal. But the retention of the T. P. & W. by the ODT after all other railroads had been returned to their owners on Jan. 18, 1944, was held to be illegal, because no specific order was issued to accomplish this.

"The court is compelled to conclude that when the termination order of Jan. 18, 1944, was issued by the secretary of war that such action terminated possession and control by an agency, department or office of the United States," LaBuy said in his opinion.

Should Have Freed Road

"Therefore the director of defense transportation had no legal right to assume possession of the plaintiff's railroad after Jan. 18, 1944, and in the absence of further action by the President the plaintiff's property should have been returned to the plaintiff. This conclusion arrived at, the court disposes of the remaining contentions of the parties.

"With reference to the contention of the defendants that the United States is the real party in interest in the suit the conclusion of the court as above stated also disposes of this contention. Where there is an invasion of a legal right, either on the part of the government or an officer of it, acting in excess of a power validly conferred by a constitutional statute, then a suit will lie to restrain further action by the officers of the government who are acting under the claimed power."

Judge La Buy ruled that he could not decide on questions of future compensation for the use of the property during its possession by the government.

Neither T., P. & W. nor ODT attorneys will be able to give an opinion on LaBuy's ruling until they have studied the printed decision this week.

Holly Stover, president of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad, has been manager of the T., P. & W. since Jan. 1, 1943, as the representative of the ODT.

Stock Market Extends Recovery

New York, May 19 (AP)—The stock market today extended moderately its recovery of the last week on buying which still was attributed mainly to post-war prosperity hopes. Many customers cashed profits, however, as the averages equalled their peak of nearly eight years which was reached on May 5.

Advancing tendencies persisted thruout, altho many gains were reduced or canceled toward the close. Volume of 730,000 shares compared with 560,000 last Saturday.

The Associated Press 60 stock composite rose 0.2 to 65.3, equaling its high since Aug. 31, 1937, in a fifth successive advance. The utilities average made its sixth straight gain to reach a peak since July 31, 1937. Of 794 issues registering, 345 rose, 226 declined, and 223 were unchanged.

SECONDARY RAILS GAIN

New York, May 19 (AP)—Secondary railroad bonds gained as much as 2 points today in a quiet market. Transfers were $4,970,000 face value against $5,791,000 last Saturday.

Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic 4s and Philippine railway 4s advanced 2 each and Rock Island convertible 4½s rose 1⅛. Fractional advances were recorded by most Baltimore and Ohio, Central of Georgia, Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific, New Haven, and New York Central issues.

Industrials were little changed. Moderately higher utilities included Commonwealth Edison convertible 3½s, Illinois Bell 2¾s, International Telephone 4½s, and Western Union 5s of '60. Improved foreign obligations included Czechoslovak 8s, up 7; Brazilian, Costa Ricans, Sao Paulo state, and Uruguayans.

CHICAGO RISE EXTENDED

Prices extended their rise in an 18,000 shares turnover on the Chicago Stock exchange. Volume leaders were Central Illinois Securities and Commonwealth Edison, up fractions; Peabody Coal and Admiral corporation, down ¼ each, and Asbestos Manufacturing, unchanged. Five new 1945 highs were touched.

May Rye Sets 20 Year High; Barley Climbs

May rye yesterday advanced 2¼ cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade to $1.45¼, a new 20 year high, as the result of aggressive short covering. July rye reached a new seasonal high and despite heavy profit taking thru commisison houses the larger part of the rise was maintained. Rye closed 1 to 2 cents higher. In Winnipeg rye futures rose 5 cents, the limit.

Corn, oats, and barley were strong and September and December barley sold at new seasonal highs. Corn closed unchanged to ⅞ higher, the former on May, which held at $1.18½, the ceiling price. Oats advanced ⅞ to 1⅜ and barley 2⅞ to 3¾. September barley at one time was up 5 cents, the limit. Wheat declined ¼ to ⅞.

Winnipeg Upturn Is Factor

Nothing in the news accounted for the upturn in rye, brokers said, but the pronounced strength in Winnipeg affected sentiment. Trading on the Canadian market was light and buyers were forced to increase bids to obtain grain. American speculative interests were said to be the largest holders of Winnipeg rye futures.

May corn held at the ceiling thruout the day. The deferred deliveries were strong from the start, when cash corn offerings continued small. In the southwest small quantities of corn have been sold to the government.

Short Covering Lifts Barley

Barley futures closed 9⅜ to 10⅞ higher than a week ago, reflecting active covering by shorts and implications feed manufacturers wish to receive grain on May contracts. Trading in May grain will cease at the close Tuesday. When trading started yesterday uncompleted contracts in May wheat were 5,481,000 bushels, corn 2,355,000, oats 5,417,000, rye 4,563,000, and barley 763,000.

More favorable weather caused selling of wheat futures and some pressure developed on hedging sales against purchases of new wheat for deferred shipment from the country.

Drouth (Florida Climate) Causes Short Citrus Crop

Lake Alfred, Fla., May 19 (AP)—Florida is faced with the prospects of a short citrus crop this fall as a results of a drouth since early January, A. F. Camp, citrus experiment station director, said today. He termed the drouth the most severe in more than five years. Heavy damage has been done to feeder roots of orange and grapefruit trees and a number of tangerine trees have been killed.

VAST EXPORTS HELD ROUTE TO 'CONFLICT WITH GREAT BRITAIN'

Washington, D. C., May 19 (AP)—In a scathing criticism of "world planners and globocrats," Republican members of the house ways and means committee today assailed the administration's proposal to lower tariffs.

The 10 minority members signed a dissenting report asserting that "if the present objective is 10 billions of exports we had better drop all talk of economic peace," for "any such quantity of exports will bring us head-on into conflict with Great Britain and with other nations whose markets we must invade if we are to attain that volume."

The 14 Democrats filed a formal statement of why they believe the reciprocal trade agreements act should be extended for three years, with authority for further duty reductions. They said:

"Effective international coöperation in scaling down the barriers to world trade is essential if we are to use our influence in favor of a more united and coöperating world."

The house will debate the issue next week.

AIR CONDITIONING

Among industries with a relatively favorable sales outlook for the early post-war years is air conditioning. There is reason for confidence that the production of cooling equipment will continue its pre-war growth trend. This fact alone, however, does not qualify the common stocks of companies specializing in this field as desirable investments or speculations. It is remembered that speculation in some issues of this kind during the 1930s ran well ahead of progress made in building earning power. The boom collapsed.

The large producers have done well during the war. Altho manufacture of air cooling equipment for nonessential uses has been banned since May, 1942, their business has increased because of the large number of war industries which required control of temperature and humidity in their production processes.

As to the longer term outlook, after deferred commercial and railroad needs for new air conditioning apparatus are supplied, it is believed that air conditioning must look largely to the residential field for continued expansion. Lower prices are regarded necessary for full cultivation of this market. Quantity production economies may later make price cuts possible, but that is uncertain.

There were relatively few pre-war residential installations. For example, at the end of 1941, only about 60 Chicago homes had complete central plant air conditioning systems, and only 1,600 had electric room coolers.

The cost of installing a year around central system in a new six room house of average size was about $1,200, of which $750 was for heating and $450 for cooling equipment. The electricity cost of operation in the four hot weather months is $5 to $6 a month. The prices of electric room heaters ranged from $175 to $400, and the electricity cost averaged about $2.50 a month.

Carrier corporation, a leader in the field, has never paid a common dividend since incorporation in 1930. Its stock has been subject to extremely wide price swings. York corporation, another pioneer in the industry, paid its first dividend to common stock holders last year. Competition increased after numerous companies making other products added air conditioning manufacture as a side line.

Nevertheless, the industry will bear watching for suitable investment opportunities in strong and well established companies as sales and profit possibilities become more clearly defined.

PLAN TO REVIVE LAKE MICHIGAN FERRY SERVICE

Predict Passenger, Freight Increase

Lake ferry service between Chicago and Michigan shore ports forms an important part of the post-war plans of Great Lakes shipping lines which contemplate a revival of lake passenger and freight business into Chicago in a volume larger than in the heyday of Chicago's lake traffic.

One company completed an exhaustive survey in 1940 and its plans were nearly ready for construction of lake ferries for use between Chicago and St. Joseph, Muskegon, and other Michigan points. The ferries not only would carry passengers but also would be designed for transportation of automobiles and other freight.

Firm Plans Gulf Service

The war halted these plans and only with the end of hostilities in Europe have steps been taken to revive them and bring them into line with changed conditions in the shipping industry. Another line is considering new lake ships especially constructed to be transported down the Illinois and Mississippi rivers for service in Florida and Cuban waters after the short summer season on the lakes.

Passenger service on Lake Michigan declined steadily in the depression years and during the war reached the low point, at which one ship, the City of Grand Rapids, is operating daily between Chicago and the Michigan shore. This boat on its trips to St. Joseph carries passengers only. The Milwaukee Clipper going daily to Milwaukee and on week-end cruises to Muskegon also is exclusively a passenger ship.

T. J. McGuire, head of the C. & B. Line, operator of the City of Grand Rapids, said an extensive survey by his company in 1940 showed every indication of sufficient freight and passenger business to warrant construction of new lake ferries.

Planned Broad Beam Ships

The service contemplated at that time called for lake boats with much broader beams than the present lake ships and with large cargo space for transporting automobiles and trucks. The survey showed possibilities of extensive business in automobiles in transit from Detroit factories to dealers in central and western parts of the country. Officials of large trucking firms also displayed interest in the service.

The new ferries would make the run across the lake in less than three hours, little more time than that taken for the 120 mile auto run around the end of Lake Michigan, and avoiding all the traffic congestion of the Indiana and South Chicago industrial areas. The ferry service also would be a boon to Chicago and Illinois vacationers going to Michigan resort sections. McGuire said the ferries could be operated 11 months of the year.

E. J. Goble, general manager of the Georgian Bay Line, operators of the North American and South American which now run between Chicago and Buffalo and Duluth and Buffalo, disclosed plans of his company for new ships which can be operated on the lakes during the four month summer season and then transported to the Gulf of Mexico for winter cruises.

A. O. Smith Selects Sales Chiefs for Peace Output

Norse Expect Early Start in World Trade

BY HAL FOUST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OSLO, Norway, May 19—Norway expects prompt resumption of its foreign trade and expansion of its pre-war commercial relations with the United States, but limitations will exist in transport and in America's capacity to produce above war requirements.

Norway's capacity to produce has not been impaired by five years of German occupation, and Britain's military occupation is expected to drum up British trade in Norway.

Economic Structure Outlined.

Johs Brunaes, president of the Norwegian Federation of Industries, today outlined the present economic structure of Norway as follows:

Shipping—Norway's merchant fleet, the world's fourth largest, has been reduced about 50 per cent by war losses and almost all ships have been operated by the allies since the beginning of the war.

Fishing—Arrangements have been made to boost production tenfold immediately by supplying fuel to the diesel powered fishing vessels. Whaling operations, running to 30 million dollars a year, also are to be resumed. The tin shortage is to be met by using aluminum and chemically treated paper containers.

Resume Newsprint Output

Newsprint—Production is expected to be normal within a month. Coal needed to supplement hydroelectric power will be taken from German stockpiles in Norway.

Lumber—The world shortage will be eased by supplies from Sweden and Finland as well as Norway. Labor is available for full scale timber cutting. The forests as a whole have not been injured, tho in some localities damage resulted from ruthless clearing by the Germans.

Chemicals — The large hydroelectric plants were operated by the Germans and have not been damaged.

Finance — Norway has ample credits in the United States for immediate needs.

Many Heavy Items Needed

Brunaes said that Norway wants to import, as soon as possible, the following: heavy machinery, buses, automobiles, street cars, railroad rolling stock, trucks, farm equipment, stock feed, foodstuffs, medicines, and cotton and wool yarns.

E. A. Brofos, regional vice president of International Telephone and Telegraph company, said Norway's communications have been improved by the German occupation. Facilities expanded for military use have peace time commercial utility. A new high powered broadcasting station at Oslo is nearly completed.

Railroad mileage also was extended by the Germans, but, as in the United States, equipment and trackage have been badly worn by heavy military use.

CANADA EASING CIVIL CONTROLS AHEAD OF U. S.

Appliance, Building Curbs Disappear

War imposed controls on civilian production, building, consumption, and other peace time activities in Canada are disappearing more rapidly than in the United States, a comparison of government action in the two countries disclosed yesterday.

Among the most recent steps in Canada was the revocation last week of orders restricting the manufacture of a wide range of household appliances and consumer goods, including washing machines, sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, and bicycles.

The war production board in the United States also rescinded a number of prohibitions on civilian manufacturing last week but these did not affect materially so-called "hard goods" such as automobiles, furniture, and stoves. Permission to produce household refrigerators was granted yesterday.

Await End of Metals Curb

The producers affected by the revocations will have little opportunity to build up civilian supplies, however, until the WPB's allocation of metals is ended, it was said. Until then makers of most civilian goods will have to depend on idle, surplus, or second hand materials.

New home construction in Canada is widespread. Building permits aggregating more than 22 million dollars were issued in 1944 in Montreal. A total of 691 new houses was built in Toronto last year to accommodate 2,615 persons. The gain in population was 2,602. High priorities remain necessary for any building undertakings in this country.

The Canadians also have taken steps to adjust their tax structure to a peace time economy. The special excise tax of 25 per cent on household electric and gas appliances has been repealed and that on passenger automobiles, radios, phonographs, and cameras has been reduced to 10 per cent. The sales tax on building materials has been removed to encourage the transition to civilian production. No major tax relief for corporations or individuals is in sight for this country until V-J day, congressional sources said recently.

Meat Freed Year Ago

Altho meat in this country is as scarce as at any time during the war, Canadians have not been compelled to ration this commodity since March 1, 1944.

Other commodities which have been much more plentiful in Canada than the United States include shoes and clothes. Shoes never were rationed to the Canadians, and the limitation on two pants suits was rescinded in 1943.

Canada also has no fuel oil rationing and has had no ban on outdoor lighting for more than a year.

Canadian policy has generally followed the line that war time curbs and controls will be discontinued just as quickly as the national welfare permits. Administration critics in this country believe there is a tendency in government to continue restrictions longer than necessary for the sake of perpetuating control over certain portions of the national economy.

Chicago Bank Clearings Increase to 575 Million

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled 575 million dollars, compared with $508,800,000 in the preceding week, and $485,300,000 a year ago, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The figures:

	Clearings	Balances
Monday	$83,100,000	$9,700,000

FEDERAL JUDGES WEIGH INDIANA'S NEW BEER LAW

Allows Revoking Licenses Without Cause

Twelve northern Indiana beer wholesalers yesterday were given eight days to file briefs after opening arguments were heard in Hammond, Ind., by a special panel of three federal judges which sought to determine the constitutionality of a recently enacted Indiana law permitting the state arbitrarily to revoke wholesale liquor permits without cause.

The test case was brought after Judge Luther M. Swygert, a member of the special panel, issued in the federal District court at Hammond a temporary restraining order against interference by the alcoholic beverage commission of Indiana in the operations of the 12 beer wholesalers whose permits were revoked.

The new law denies the right of a hearing in any state court to a wholesaler whose license has been revoked.

All Permits Canceled May 1

Known as House Bill 451 and signed into law by Gov. Gates, the act provided for cancellation as of May 1 of all beer wholesale permits issued prior to April 1 of this year. Each license granted now, as before, is valid for one year. It was reported that William Jenner, former short term senator and now state Republican chairman, had ordered county chairmen to pass on applicants before the commission grants licenses.

Frank J. McHale, Democratic national committeeman and attorney for the state breweries, said yesterday that the law had forced 25 Indiana counties to go dry. Breweries, aware that their licenses might be revoked if they deliver to wholesalers whose 1944 licenses have not been renewed or to newly licensed wholesalers who have not received office of defense transportation approval, have stopped doing business with many customers, he explained.

Clash Over Property Rights

In argument yesterday, attorneys for the plaintiffs claimed vested interests in their permits, but Atty. Gen. James Emmert declared in rebuttle that no property rights were involved in the issuance of the permits and that therefore the state may revoke them as it sees fit.

McHale declared that only 27 wholesalers—all Republicans—are operating with state approval under the new law. Seventeen of these, he said, got renewal of licenses, and the remainder are New Dealers who were able to buy out "the good will" of their Democratic predecessors.

55 Licensees Unable to Sell

Licenses have been issued since May 1 to 55 other New Dealers, McHale declared, but they have not been able to go into business because they have been unable to buy out the holdings of the former wholesalers in their communities and cannot obtain permits for trucks or gasoline from ODT.

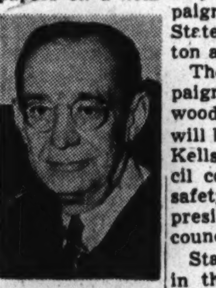
The federal panel, which includes Judge J. Earl Major and Judge Evan Evans of the Circuit Court of Appeals of Chicago, gave the state five days to answer the plaintiffs' briefs and ordered the restraining order of May 9 extended until final disposition of the cause or until otherwise ordered.

Seek Civilian Aircraft Workers to Go to Alaska

The air technical service command said yesterday it is seeking sheet metal workers, aircraft mechanics, aircraft electricians, instrument mechanics, and other aircraft equipment workers not now in war work to replace army personnel at the Alaska air depot at Anchorage, Alaska. Applicants will be interviewed at the United States employment office at 308 N. Michigan av.

MR. LEMKE GETS STEADY JOB—IT LASTS 53 YEARS

When Otto Lemke went to work carrying morning papers on a near north side route 53 years ago, he figured it would be a good, steady job for a young fellow. When he retired a few weeks ago, he hadn't changed his opinion.



Otto Lemke

It certainly had been steady work, Otto, now 70, said yesterday in his apartment at 1358 Sedgwick st.—except for three Sundays. He missed the route the Sunday he was married, the week-end he took his bride to Niagara Falls, and again a Sunday when he was sick. Otherwise, he got along fine.

Job Grows—with Tribune

That wasn't because the work got easier. The near north side route, Division st. to North av. and Dearborn st. to the lake, grew, from a district of homes plus a hayfield for the late Archbishop Patrick A. Feehan's horses, to an area of towering apartments.

Later Lemke bought the route for $800. His load at first consisted of five different morning papers: 180 TRIBUNES, 120 Heralds, 25 Times, 20 Interoceans, and 15 Chronicles. When he stopped, he was delivering 130 TRIBUNES. His job took him an hour to serve the 136 customers in the 1400 Lake Shore dr. building alone.

Works Even in Blizzard

Even on the worst day of the blizzard of 1918, his customers got their papers because Lemke insisted on trying and the late Max Annenberg, then circulation manager of THE TRIBUNE, drove the load up himself and gave Otto a hand.

Four families are still living in the same houses they occupied when they were first his customers. All are still customers, he said yesterday, except one grand dame who differed politically with THE TRIBUNE and thereafter had the paper delivered under her maid's name. "I know," says Otto, "because the hired girl told me."

Otto has had at least 50 letters from customers since he quit, thanking him for his service. Now he intends to spend a lot of time at his summer place in Antioch fishing and thinking about the days when after making his round he dropped a line into the lake in front of Potter Palmer's house and the old gentleman himself came out "wearing his stovepipe hat" and bought the catch.

MAYOR TO STENCIL 'DON'T BE JAY' SIGN ON LOOP SIDEWALK

The pedestrian safety campaign sponsored by the Chicago Junior Association of Commerce will be started at 11:30 a. m. Tuesday when Mayor Kelly will stencil the campaign slogan, "Don't be a jay," on a State st. sidewalk between Washington and Randolph sts.

The kick-off luncheon of the campaign Tuesday noon in the Wedgwood room at Marshall Field & Co. will be addressed by the mayor, Ald. Kells [28th], chairman of the council committee on traffic and public safety, and Leslie J. Sorenson, vice president of the National Safety council.

State street stores are coöperating in the campaign with special window displays. The campaign slogan will be displayed in street cars, buses, and taxicabs. Crosswalk lines will be painted on streets and policemen will distribute safety leaflets to all pedestrians caught jaywalking. City sound trucks will cruise loop streets with warnings to jaywalkers.

REVEAL SINKING OF 3 LAKE SHIPS SENT TO BRITAIN

LONDON, May 19 [Reuters]—The story of an Atlantic voyage of eight frail American lake ships, used as pleasure steamers, destined to play an important part in the D day landings, was revealed tonight. Three were torpedoed after a running fight with U-boats.

In July, 1942, with the shortage of merchant tonnage acute, D day planners had to find vessels suitable for use as cross channel and hospital ships. The eight pleasure ships were chartered. London was sceptical as to whether they had the speed and endurance to survive the Atlantic crossing.

Capt. R. T. Park, superintendent of coast lines, Liverpool, promised to get British crews to man them. He did so. They were all volunteers who knew they were being asked to attempt no ordinary job.

One Sunk on Fifth Day

The ships had to reach Britain before the weather broke, and on Sept. 21, 1942, the fleet set sail from Saint Johns, Nova Scotia. With gales threatening, it was decided to make a run for the Clyde river in Scotland.

All went well until the fourth day when, seven or eight hundred miles west of Ireland, the commodore signaled "Enemy submarines in vicinity." On the fifth day, one ship, the Boston, was struck by two torpedoes and sank rapidly.

Then began a day long battle between the remaining pleasure craft and the U-boat pack. Even Joseph Goebbels was forced to pay tribute. Claiming to have sunk "several ships of the Queen Mary class," the Berlin radio said: "The defense was so fierce that it could not be observed whether two or more of the transports hit sank or not."

Convoy Commander Lost

The fight continued thru the day, with escorting destroyers and convoy supporting each other grimly.

The New York was torpedoed and sank. While searching for survivors the warship Veteran was hit and sank. With her went the commodore of the convoy, Capt. R. S. Young, who had been picked up from the Boston.

Next, Yorktown was torpedoed and sank in three minutes. Survivors were on rafts for 46 hours, in rough seas and with a bitter wind blowing. The five surviving ships made port, two into Londonderry, one into Belfast, and two into Greenork.

All the masters and chief engineers, together with 14 other officers and men received decorations.

HAD THEY been deliberately seeking publicity, a certain Chicagoland robin family could have chosen no better spot for their nest than the window ledge of the living room of the home of Andrew Pavlin, Tribune photographer. For two years the robins had occupied a nest in the Pavlin yard, but on the third year selected the ledge, possibly because of added warmth. There they built their nest and raised their family, and there they posed unwittingly for the color photos reproduced on this page—all of which were taken thru the open window by Mr. Pavlin.

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

CUMMINGS GOING PLACES

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune)

Hollywood

ROBERT CUMMINGS is one man in Hollywood who's not only happy—he's got documents to prove it!

Wherever it is he keeps such things, Cummings has three pieces of paper, all signed and sealed, which would be to any one a reasonable guaranty of happiness.

The first is his newly acquired marriage license, dated Saturday, March 3, the party of the second part being ex-Actress Mary Elliott ("ex" because she promised to give up her career when they married).

That document also is signed by Bob's mother, Mrs. Ruth K. Cummings, who at 71 is an ordained minister in the Science of Mind church in Los Angeles. Mrs. Cummings performed the wedding service at Mission Inn, Riverside.

The second document is a four year term contract with the Hal Wallis productions which guarantees Bob the opportunity of reestablishing himself in pictures. The kid's been away from the screen for two years, serving as an air flight instructor with the American air forces.

The third bit of paper is his medical certificate attesting that he passed the air forces' most rigid examination with points to spare—thus Cummings officially is healthy, he's in love, and he's got a good paying job.

"Those papers mean a lot to me," he said, "but they wouldn't guarantee a thing except for my philosophy."

It's a little odd to talk to Bob about philosophy. His words and thoughts just don't seem to fit his face.

At 37 he looks like a college sophomore. He hasn't the sign of a night club bag under his eyes. The make-up man doesn't have to camouflage a network of crow's feet. His voice is pitched in boyish enthusiasm. He even stammers occasionally when words bottleneck and jam in their eagerness to overflow. He's the type grandmothers describe as "that nice young man!"

On the set of "You Came Along," where Bob is making his screen reappearance for Hal Wallis, Bob's mind took a philosophical turn.

"Tardiness, I think, is the cardinal sin," he said. "People who get a lot of bad breaks usually have only themselevs to blame. It's because they're most always a few beats behind the normal rhythm of life, and they get into trouble because they're always hurrying to get caught up."

• • •

A simple thing like getting up in the morning a half hour earlier than is necessary, Bob believes, would straighten out most people and change the course of their lives.

"It's this way," Bob explained. "You approach your day unhurried. You have the opportunity of planning your course of action. No need to rush and fumble. Each task gets the benefit of your complete mental and physical energy. Your work improves, no matter what it may be. Your projects begin to succeed. The result is that people begin to look at you and say, 'What a lucky guy he is!'

"It's timing, that's all."

Bob believes there's ultimate truth in mathematics, that life can be worked out and solved by a system of equations.

John Farrow

"In operation somewhere," he says, "is a divine accounting system. It overlooks nothing, good, bad, or indifferent. You do something fine or generous and it's entered, I believe, on the credit side of the ledger. On the other hand, be selfish or petty or hurt some one and there is a big charge against you. The settlement is inevitable. I've seen it work out so many times I'm convinced it's the answer to a lot of things which puzzle humanity."

During Bob's two year absence from the screen while he was under suspension from Universal, and while he was serving as a flight instructor, he had a chance to do a lot of thinking. He's emerging with a new viewpoint and a new set of values.

"When my brother Oscar, who is my lawyer, called me at the field to tell me that we had won our case against Universal and that I was a free agent," said Bob, "the news didn't thrill me too much. I was jammed into a telephone booth with a parachute strapped to my seat, and I had a plane on the flight line with the motor running and a student in the cockpit ready to be taken up for a lesson.

"Honestly, Hedda, I couldn't get nearly as excited about the news as my brother was. The $200 a month I was getting as a flight instructor was giving me more real satisfaction than any amount of money I ever had earned in pictures."

Bob declares that acting isn't nearly as important to him now as it once was.

"The main reason I'm back in front of the camera now in 'You Came Along' is that the government feels it will aid the war effort, and that's the only kind of pictures I want to appear in for the duration."

Altho Bob's contract with Wallis is for four years, he is at liberty to act only by permission of the army air corps, from which he has been granted leave. When the picture is finished he expects to report back for active duty.

• • •

While I was talking to Bob he was called into a scene for a rehearsal with Lizabeth Scott, who's co-starring with him. It's her very first screen effort. Bob was wearing the uniform of a major in the army air forces, and the Scott girl was playing a United States treasury representative who escorts Cummings, Don DeFore, and Charles Drake, all returned flying heroes, on a bond selling tour of the country. The scene was the inside of an air liner.

Cummings and Eleanor Whitney did a ballroom dance in 1936 in "Three Cheers for Love."

In "You Came Along" Bob has as his co-star Lisabeth Scott. It's her first film.

While the rehearsal was taking place, who should walk into the stage, visiting the set for the first time since their marriage, but the new Mrs. Cummings. She tiptoed up front near the camera, her eyes shining brightly with what it takes to make brides' eyes bright. She said nothing—she just stood—and looked.

• • •

Johnny Farrow, the director, broke her reverie. He called Bob's attention to his wife's presence.

"Be careful what you say to Lizabeth," he ribbed in typically masculine manner; "your frau's here!"

Bob turned around, blew her a kiss, and projected a romantic radar beam which if it could have been caught by the camera would have been worth real dough.

"That," Bob proclaimed to the cast and crew in general, "is my wife. God bless her—how I love that woman!"

Mrs. Cummings blushed on cue.

It's a far cry from the time when I first saw Bob, then an unknown, working with Deanna Durbin in "Three Smart Girls" at Universal. At that time I saw him in two small scenes, but the kid had something and I wondered where in the world they'd been keeping him all this time. I told Bob that day that he eventually would be making $4,000 a week. He laughed it off.

Parenthetically I might add in a typographical aside, "Bob, I told you so!"

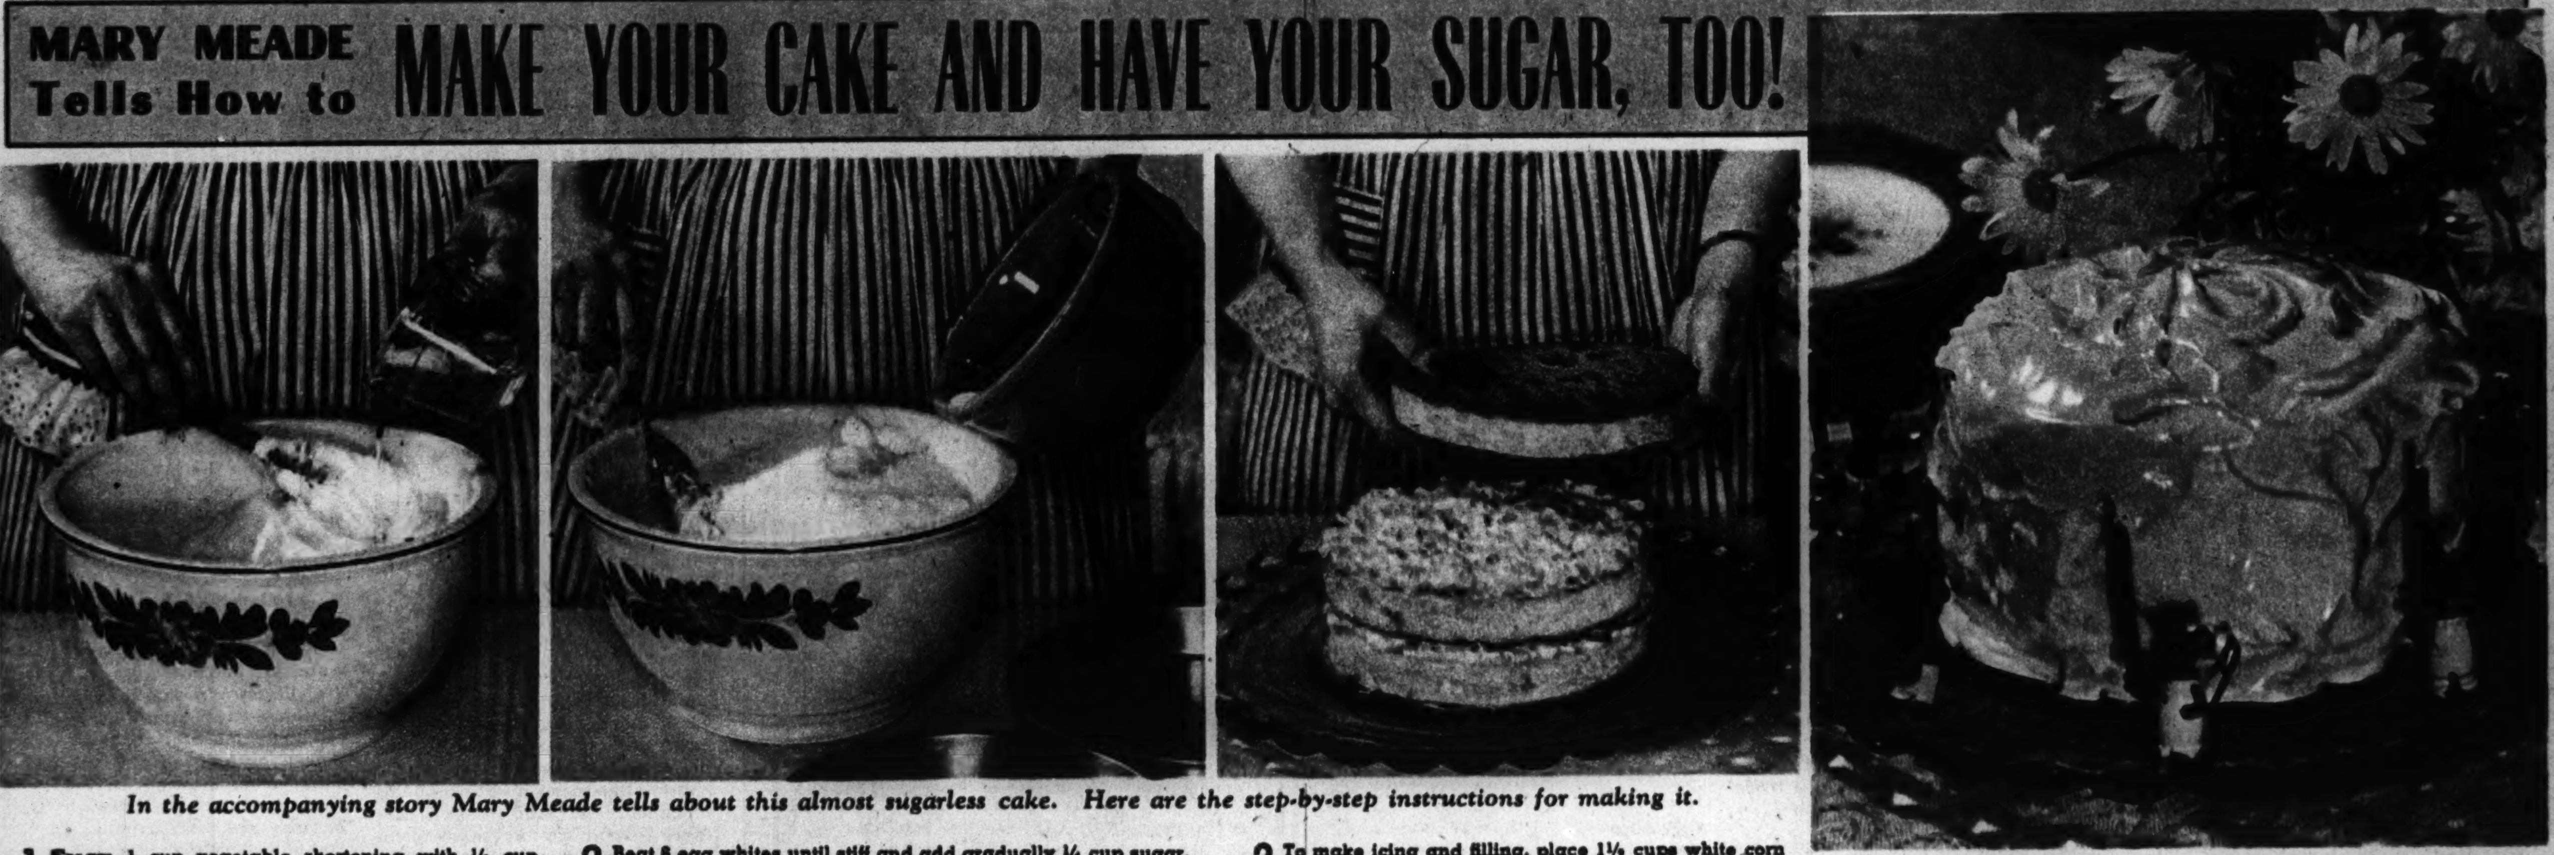
MARY MEADE Tells How to MAKE YOUR CAKE AND HAVE YOUR SUGAR, TOO!



In the accompanying story Mary Meade tells about this almost sugarless cake. Here are the step-by-step instructions for making it.

1 Cream 1 cup vegetable shortening with ½ cup sugar; add ¾ cup corn sirup slowly and cream thoroly into mixture. Sift 3 cups cake flour three times with 3 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Add sifted flour mixture in alternate portions with ⅔ cup milk to the batter, beating well after each addition. Flavor with ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ teaspoon almond extract.

2 Beat 6 egg whites until stiff and add gradually ¼ cup sugar, beating until mixture stands in peaks. The meringue should be glossy looking, not dry. Fold into cake batter, using egg whisk. Pour batter into three greased, wax paper lined eight inch cake pans (round), spreading it evenly. Bake layers 25-30 minutes in a 375 degree oven. Remove to cake racks, cool five minutes, turn out layers, and allow to cool thoroly before filling and frosting cake.

3 To make icing and filling, place 1½ cups white corn sirup, 2 unbeaten egg whites, ¼ teaspoon salt in top of double boiler. Beat with rotary beater over hot water seven minutes or longer, until icing stands in peaks. Add a few drops red coloring, ½ teaspoon vanilla, ½ teaspoon almond extract. To a third of the icing add 1 cup nuts, 1 cup seedless raisins, ½ cup chopped candied cherries. Use for filling.

4 When cake layers are in place with filling between them, cover entire cake with remaining pink icing, using a spatula to make careless looking swirls. Novelty candle holders like those colorful little wooden animals may be spaced around the cake plate to tickle the fancy of young guests. Children will expect ice cream to eat with their thick frosted cake!

By MARY MEADE

BIRTHDAY cakes with thick, luscious, "gooey" frosting often use up one person's sugar ration for a month or six weeks and are an extravagance most families feel they cannot afford. Yet here's a birthday cake, three fluffy white layers, with a nut and fruit filling and inch thick pale pink frosting, which requires only ¾ cup sugar! Isn't that wonderful?

There's not even a sprinkle of sugar in that frosting! We found that an all corn sirup frosting remains soft and fluffy almost indefinitely and swirls beautifully over the surface of a cake. Furthermore, it's almost failureproof! Remember how now and then you'd overcook or overbeat your seven minute frosting and it would harden and dry out on the cake? That doesn't seem to happen with a sirup frosting.

The birthday cake pictured is a six egg white Lady Baltimore of three fluffy white layers. We flavored our cake with vanilla and almond, and the frosting, too, but you may prefer to use lemon or orange. In that case it would be well to tint the cake frosting yellow or pale orange.

• • •

We used a generous quantity of nuts and raisins in the filling. Some recipes require only half that amount. Chopped mixed candied fruit and nuts might be used instead of the combination we have chosen. There are many ways to vary a cake like this.

As long as the corn sirup holds out, birthdays needn't be cakeless!

If you'd like a collection of recipes for other "super" cakes which spare your sugar ration, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of The Tribune. I'll send you some of our best formulas for delectable but ration-wise cakes.

EYTHE RIGHT

Color portrait in today's Picture Section

● Broadway lost Bill Eythe to the movies when Twentieth Century-Fox spotted him in "The Moon Is Down." He was playing the role of Lieutenant Tonder. The movie company put him right into "The Ox Bow Incident" and since then has kept him busy in such pictures as "The Song of Bernadette," "The Eve of St. Mark," "Wilson," and, most recently, "A Royal Scandal," with Tallulah Bankhead.

• • •

Bill started his theater career at 11 when he staged neighborhood "plays" in Mars, Pa. A Tarzan scene put him in bed for seven months with two broken legs. When he was in high school he took drama the quieter way—as stagehand. At Carnegie Tech Bill was very active in the drama school, appeared in Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse productions, and played summer stock. June, 1941, brought him his first real professional break when he was signed for the stock company at Cohasset, Mass., in which such stars at Grace George, Ruth Chatterton, and Conrad Nagel appeared. Broadway was his next step.

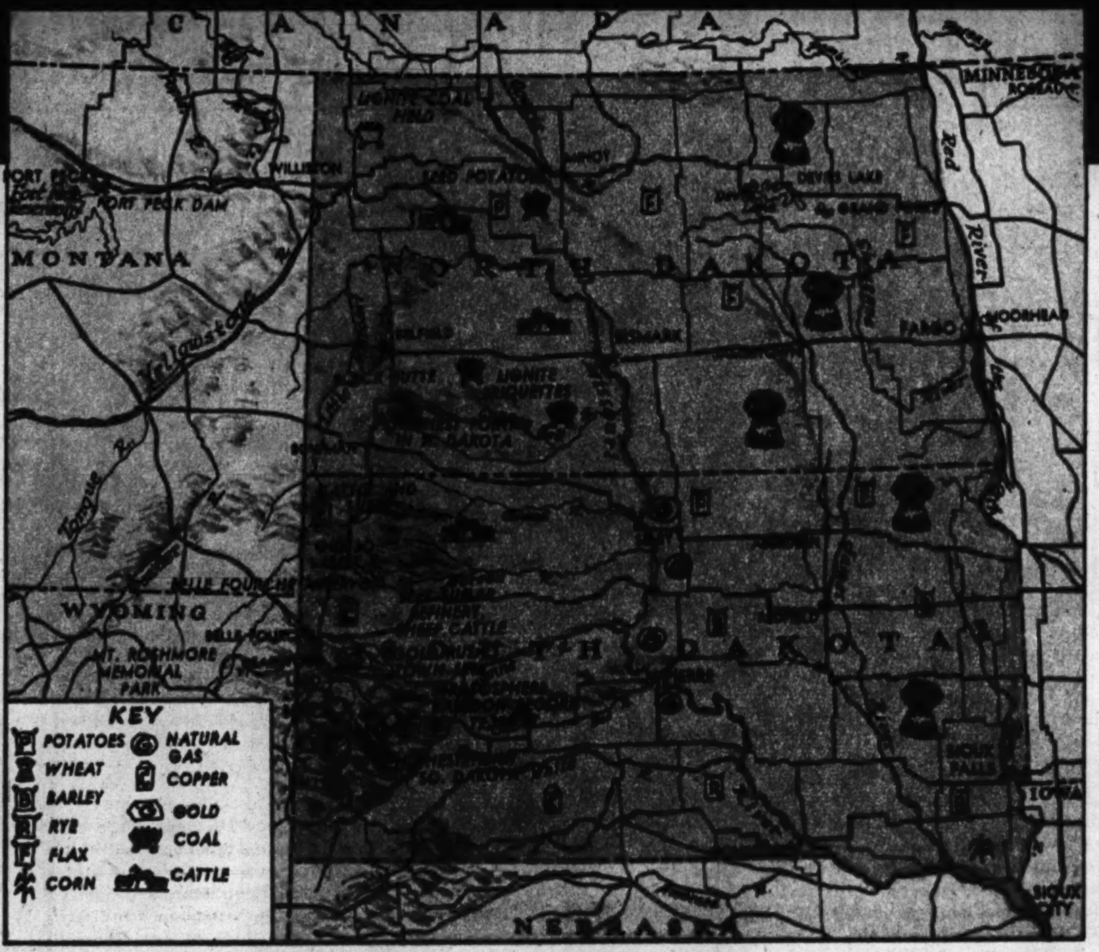
THE DAKOTAS

SISTER STATES ARE SEEN AS TWO TYPICAL EXAMPLES OF TRULY RURAL AMERICA



Map of North and South Dakota, showing principal cities and geographic and economic features. Part of Montana is included to show location of Fort Peck dam, important to the Dakotas.

● This is the first of a series of articles on regional America written by Alex Small, whose instructive and discerning articles on India and on American periodicals have appeared recently in this section. Mr. Small for nearly 20 years lived in Europe as a Tribune foreign correspondent. Recently returned to this country, he is able to view it with a detachment impossible for stay-at-homes. These are his impressions and opinions and do not necessarily coincide with those of The Tribune.

By ALEX SMALL

THE two Dakotas are real sister states. They have almost exactly the same land area (about 75,000 square miles each) and an almost equal population of about 650,000 each. They are remarkably alike in physical aspect, being mostly flat or gently rolling land; have the same sort of continental climate, marked by extremes of heat and cold. They were settled at about the same time, just after the Civil war, by the same sort of people, mostly migrants from the Mississippi and Ohio valleys, whose ancestors came from northern and northeastern Europe.

In each state the largest city (Fargo, 33,000, in North Dakota; Sioux Falls, 40,000, in South Dakota) is on the eastern fringe, and by the people in the center in each case is regarded as being only nominally inside the state. Fargo really fits into the economy of western Minnesota, Sioux Falls into that of northwest Iowa. The rest of each state is farms and the small towns or villages necessary in an agricultural community.

Of the two South Dakota is somewhat more varied in aspect, with its Bad Lands and the Black hills in the west. This has given it some vogue as a vacation region, which is not true of North Dakota. The barren tracts of South Dakota are also more extensive than in its sister state, it suffered somewhat more from the drouths and floods of the 1930s, and its population today seems slightly less prosperous.

Statistics tell the general story of the human aspects of the Dakotas. Their density of population (about even in the two) has never been above 10 to the square mile and today is somewhat less. This is lower than the density of any other midwestern state (Nebraska comes next), or of any state in the south. The Rocky mountain states have even lower densities (excepting Colorado), but they consist in good part of mountainous, uninhabitable country, and their chief activity is mining, which ordinarily supports few people.

The Dakotas, then, may be considered the most purely rural of all our states. In them you can see the American farmer or stock raiser less contaminated with city influence than anywhere else. The preoccupations and problems of the people are entirely with agriculture; it represents all but a negligible fraction of life.

It is no wonder that the Dakotas have been politically a good barometer of the American farmer's discontents. Here populism flourished in the distressful days toward the end of the last century, when cheap money was regarded as the solution of all the farmer's ills. Later there was the Farmer-Labor movement and the Nonpartisan league. Today no special movement is in the field for votes, but the attention of all people in the Dakotas is taken with the scheme called the Missouri valley authority, which is much involved in politics and is also of prime concern to farmers.

Traveling thru the Dakotas today, you can realize what strides have been made in the last generation toward making the farmer's existence tolerable and even enjoyable. Even now in the long, severe Dakota winter, when the wind sweeps across those limitless plains and piles the snow into high drifts, the little clusters of human habitations look isolated and friendless. So it really was in the childhood of most farmers out there, but today that is only appearance. Practically every farmhouse is in touch with the world thru its telephone and radio. No matter what the misfortunes of the season may have been, each family has its automobile. There are public bus lines in almost all directions—a valuable supplement to the railways, which give hardly any north-south communication thru the Dakotas. To every village come the movies and the periodicals which all other Americans see and read.

Gov. Aandahl

It's an entire misconception to think of the Dakotas as a special bleak region where people go mad thru loneliness. That could have been true up to about 1918. The automobile and wireless age has remedied all that, and life there now is standard American life, with the same conveniences and comforts as you find in Chicago. The conspicuous difference is that there is less choice in human companionship and you pretty much have to get along with your neighbors whether you like them or not.

Since this population had unusual basic unity (stocks of northern and northeastern Europe, passed thru our middle west), there is almost complete absence of some of the uglier issues which trouble more settled regions. There's no race problem, for instance. A colored person is a curiosity; anti-Semitism is something to be read about or heard about over the radio. There are considerable numbers of Catholics in the region, but they never have had to complain of any Ku Klux Klan prejudice. Today they have an able counselor in Bishop Vincent J. Ryan, whose National Catholic Rural Life conference (headquarters at Des Moines, Ia.) is an admitted influence for good thruout all that part of the west.

With the shortage of labor caused by the war, there has been a considerable seasonal influx into the Dakotas of harvest labor from our southwest (Okies and Arkies) and even of Mexicans. As workers they are regarded as inferior to the native boys who have been taken by the services or by war plants, but they are conceded to be satisfactory. They go away when their work is done, and no trouble with them has been reported, as has been in some other regions, notably in Michigan.

Despite this evident basis for a contented life, there seems to be something wrong in the Dakotas. Again figures tell the story. In population they have not been forging ahead in pace with other states. That, you may say, is because they choose to remain agricultural, while others have industrialized. The trouble is deeper; they have been losing population absolutely—North Dakota 90,000 in the decade of 1930-'40. And since the war began—disregarding the military draft—the loss is estimated at 50,000 in each of the Dakotas.

That, in an epoch when almost daily improvements in agricultural methods result in greater yields than before in all kinds of agricultural produce, and when consequently the land anywhere should be supporting more people than it ever did.

Confronted with this steady drain, I found reflective people in the Dakotas taking two attitudes toward the future. The first is a cool, conservative attitude, one which hopes to stop the drain and even to recover some of the population lost during the war. It lays emphasis on the steady improvement of what already exists, of methods of farming and marketing, and on some development of small ancillary industries connected with agriculture, like meat packing and the processing of dairy products.

The second attitude is less conservative, even dreamy. It talks of vast undeveloped resources, of the mining and other industries which could be developed in the Dakotas in competition with regions already industrially developed, of the vast population which might be supported on manufacturing in that part of the Missouri valley.

Conspicuous in expressing the level-headed point of view I found Gov. Fred Aandahl of North Dakota, a remarkable man of simple dignity and lucid intelligence.

He wants his fellow citizens to have all the benefit they might get from any grandiose scheme of harnessing the Missouri river and its affluents, but he is against the state of mind which would regard this as a magic formula, one to solve all the Dakota farmer's problems and enable him to lead an effortless life thereafter. It is clear that there is only too much of this frame of mind.

Starting at the very base of the trouble, I was informed, is an attitude expressed in the technique of "mining the soil." Most settlers came to the Dakotas in search of new rich land. Their disposition was to exploit it for all it was worth. Then when it began to show signs of exhaustion their idea was rather to move on to some other newer Dakota than to revivify and improve what they had.

Lacking new lands (since there no longer is any large unexploited region inside the United States), many boys have been attracted away from the Dakota farms to the factories. That has been the cause of the loss since the war began, when two trends of migration have been noted—one toward the Pacific coast, one toward the war industries of the Chicago region.

Lately in the Dakotas, as in the whole northwest, there has been much talk of Alaska. The climate there, people have been told, is nothing like so severe as commonly imagined; the land is rich, and there is room for thousands of immigrants who want to continue soil mining.

It's astonishing to learn that modern methods of agriculture are less known and much less used in the Dakotas than in states farther east—for example, Wisconsin. Artificial fertilizer is still a rarity; one man in Pierre (capital of South Dakota) wanted a bag of it for his lawn; the dealer didn't have any and had to have it shipped in from outside the state.

The more conservative leaders of the Dakotas want the farmers to learn to use artificial fertilizers, to improve the breed of their cattle, to do "strip" planting against the winds, to do contour plowing, to experiment with grazing grasses, to develop water holes and thus increase the area available for grazing. A comprehensive program of soil conservation and of soil management—that is seen as the first need of the Dakotas.

Two beliefs, I was told, have worked considerable harm and accounted for much individual distress among farmers of the northwest. One was the belief current when the northwest was first settled that any one can be a farmer, any ex-school teacher or broken-down lawyer. The later belief came with the introduction of machinery—that the farmer need only be a mechanic. Both ideas still show signs of life and have to be swept away. Present leaders of thought intend to convince the farmer that his is a highly specialized craft and that there's far more to it than knowing how to tinker with a tractor, important as that may be.

The best farmer in the world will be beaten, of course, if circumstances are hopelessly against him, and that's where the Dakotans are brought up against the problem of water. Water, as I heard continually in my journey thru the northwest, is the life blood of a community. That proposition cannot be realized in its simple and often tragic truth by the city dweller in Chicago who simply has to turn a tap to get all the water he needs. Even the Illinois farmer will not be obsessed by the problem of water, because he lives in a region where nature can be counted on with reasonable certainty to solve the problem in a fairly satisfactory way.

In the Dakotas nature is often violent and often capricious. Sometimes it supplies far too much water and too suddenly; then there are disastrous floods along the Missouri river and its subsidiary streams. More often nature does not supply enough and the farms suffer from drouth. In the 1930s there were two such drouths that became real catastrophes in the Dakotas, and in general the region may be said to suffer from a scarcity of water.

To have as much water as they need and no more, to have it when and where they want it—that is the dream of the Dakota farmers. Hence their interest in the vast irrigation scheme loosely and somewhat inaccurately referred to as the Missouri valley authority or MVA.

With this question as it involves principles of social policy—whether it should be financed by a government or by private capital, whether or not the subsidiary power generated should be sold by a government in competition with private enterprise—I do not purpose to deal. My concern here is with the possible benefits or disadvantages to the people who will be directly affected by such a project, assuming the thing is carried thru by any means whatsoever.

Already a start has been made on what eventually may be a vast system of water harnessing which would extend from Fort Peck in Montana down to the mouth of the Missouri and involve territory from the Mississippi to the Rocky mountains. An irrigation scheme was put thru on the Platte river in Nebraska and stabilized agriculture there. Its sponsor was the late Senator Norris of Nebraska, and its benefits are said to have explained in part his continued political popularity.

On the Missouri river itself there is now a huge earthen dam at Fort Peck in Montana. It, with its reservoir, has proved of dubious value, I was told in Montana. (This matter will be taken up later.) The WPA carried thru an irrigation plan in the valley of the Heart river in western North Dakota. This, I was told, was well conceived and well administered, its benefits considerable and obvious.

As the MVA in its full scope is now envisioned, it would involve control for irrigation of all subsidiary streams, on the model of the Platte and Heart rivers, and in addition a series of gigantic dams on the Missouri itself—at least five, I was told, four of which would be in South Dakota.

So far as this would be a pure irrigation scheme, I found that every one was in favor of it. Irrigation would relieve the Dakota farmer of his obsessing fear of drouth. Never again would he see his cattle die before his eyes be-

TAN OR TENDER

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

IF THE almost universal desire for a deep tan breaks out again this year, as it has as far back as we can remember, early holiday week-ends are going to be marked heavily by casualties.

Don't say nobody warned you who go all out to gain the first tan. You've been warned many times that the first burning committed deliberately in no way contributes to your pictorial assets. On the contrary, it more often does real damage to the skin. But you know that, so why rush things? You have months ahead in which to accumulate that golden glow your heart desires.

Take it easy. The fairer you are, too, the easier you'd better take it. You don't want to look like a red hibiscus on the rampage. Aim for your golden glow if you want it. It's lovely when it is that.

All tanning, understand, starts with a burning of the skin, but if you take your sun in small doses at first the burning is not uncomfortable, nor does it do serious damage. Five or 10 minutes a day of exposure is the right dosage to start with. If you take advantage of one of the countless protective preparations available to you today and screen your skin you'll scarcely notice the burning period.

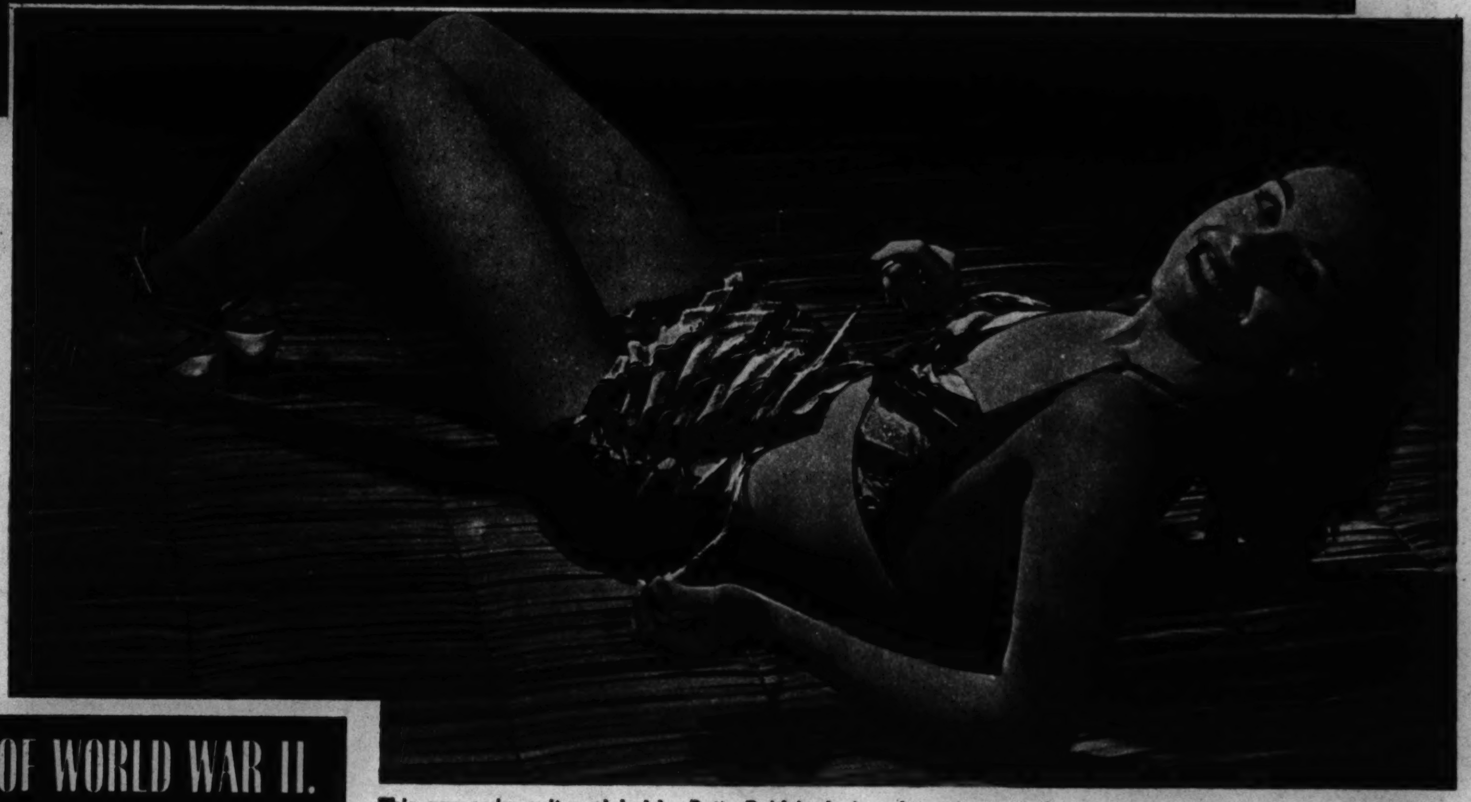
It is up to you to make your selection, guided by the knowledge that the drier the skin the more oiling it needs before exposure; also that the hot weather will age the skin unless it is oiled.

If you swim you should bear in mind that, once you've immersed yourself in the water, you'll have to replace the oiling supply when you come out. That first coating will not do. It must be reapplied after swimming.

We might suggest here that the war gardener take identical precautions against excess burning. Arrange your working time so that you escape the high noon rays if possible. But in any event coat the skin with oil so that you do not get that weathered look of the outdoors you're still not used to.

We would add a warning, too, about hair drying out, fading, changing color where rinses and dyes have been used, when protection against those hot rays is neglected. You have your bandanas if big, floppy hats are cumbersome. You won't be oiling your hair for your sun dates, but you'd better make protective provision so that the oil in your hair is preserved.



This gay swim suit modeled by Betty Reid is designed to give you the maximum exposure to the sun—but be careful that you take proper precautions not to burn your skin too rapidly. (Acme photo)

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

"Old Main," the dominating building on Carthage campus.

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Carthage, Ill.

CARTHAGE COLLEGE is celebrating its diamond jubilee this year. That alone is something of an achievement; survival for 75 years is not easy for a small liberal arts college located in a little and somewhat inaccessible town with no heavily populated communities near-by from which to draw students. It is not easy even for a college loyally supported, as Carthage has been, by a church.

Carthage is pretty proud of the facts that it has served the Lutheran church and American youth so long, that its freshman class this year was 50 per cent larger than that of last year, that it is very well accredited, and that of debts it has none.

Founded to meet the needs of the Lutheran church in this section for an institution of higher education, Carthage college is supported largely by the Illinois, Iowa, Northwest, and Wartburg synods of the United Lutheran church. About 66 per cent of its students are of the Lutheran faith.

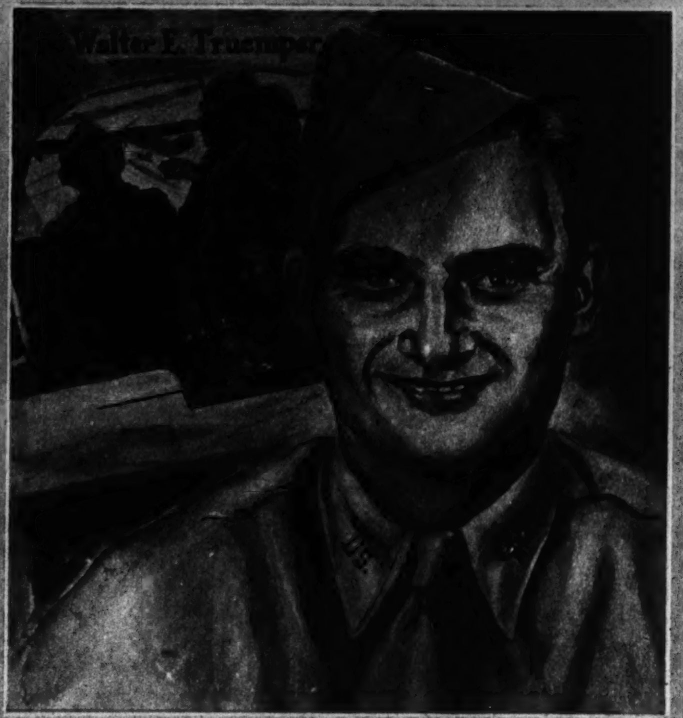
Carthage college began its academic work in 1870 in a small building on the town's square, starting out with one professor and 16 preparatory students. In 1871 it was able to operate in its own building, not quite completed, and in 1873 it chose its first president, Dr. David L. Tressler, secured a full faculty, and began to function, in "Old Main," as a fully accredited college.

Old Main still stands and still serves as the heart of Carthage college. An old fashioned, tall-windowed edifice of weathered red brick now almost pink in its antiquity, it dominates the campus. Its steps, which Carthage students and alumni feel are hallowed, are also a little hollowed by the feet that have trod them thru the years. Stretching from these steps to the college gates is "Evergreen walk," a path laid between two rows of magnificent pines planted by the college's first president.

Along three sides of the green so beautifully divided by the Evergreen walk are the other college buildings, the newest a fine library with pillared front, dedicated in 1942, which was the gift of alumni and friends of the college. As its special project for this jubilee year Carthage is conducting a drive for funds for a new memorial dormitory for men, a much-needed building here, where men students normally outnumber women by two to one.

Music is of tremendous importance at Carthage. More than half the students choose to study it. This year the college has innovated class instruction in piano, free to all freshmen, and students and staff alike are enthusiastic over the results. The Carthage college band has been able to form again this year, with 40 men on the campus, and the a cappella choir numbers 50 voices. The choir, which was formed in 1927, did not disband when war reduced the number of male voices, but it discontinued its annual concert tour. PHOTO STORY IN TODAY'S PICTURE SECTION.

AMERICAN HEROES OF WORLD WAR II.



This is another of the series on outstanding American heroes of the present war. Subjects for the series are chosen from among heroes who have been decorated for valor. Illustrations are by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Varnak.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

WALTER E. TRUEMPER, a second lieutenant in the army air forces, was a navigator on a Flying Fortress. While on a mission to Leipzig, Germany, on Feb. 20, 1944, the plane was attacked by an enemy fighter. A 20 millimeter shell exploded in the cockpit of the Fortress, causing considerable damage, killing the co-pilot, Flight Officer Ronald E. Bartley, and wounding the pilot, Lt. Clarence R. Nelson.

• • •

The plane went into a spin, but one of the crewmen reached the controls and leveled it off. Truemper, with the aid of other men of the crew, succeeded in flying back to England. There he and Sgt. Archibald Mathies, altho neither was a pilot, volunteered to try to make a landing in order to save the life of the wounded Nelson, who was unconscious. The rest of the crew were ordered to bail out.

Col. Eugene A. Romig, commanding officer of the bombardment group, took a plane into the air to attempt to guide the damaged Fortress to a landing, but when he saw that its course was too erratic to warrant the effort he ordered Truemper and Mathies to bail out.

This they refused to do, however, since they did not wish to leave their wounded pilot to his fate. Twice they attempted to land but failed. On the third effort they crashed in an open field. All three occupants of the plane were killed. Both Lieutenant Truemper and Sergeant Mathies were cited for conspicuous gallantry.

On the following Fourth of July Lieutenant Truemper was awarded the medal of honor (congressional medal) posthumously, the presentation being made by Brig. Gen. R. E. O'Neill, commandant of Chanute field, to Truemper's invalid mother, Mrs. Henry E. Truemper, at her home in Aurora, Ill.

On Erring Parents, by the Heirs Apparent

By SHEILA JOHN DALY
(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune.)

MOST fellows and gals think their families are strictly wonderful. But into each life some rain must fall, and into each family life come a few rugged moments which leave these same characters wondering whether they are just something some one left on the doorstep in a basket. Here are some typical complaints from both boys and gals who would like to have their families give the list the once-over-lightly:

"My family and I have no serious difficulties; perhaps my chief problem is that they don't seem to realize that, now that I am a senior, I could be growing up! I know that when I was in the first three years of high school I did act like just a kid, but that's no reason why I can't be trusted with the car for an occasional date now. And I do know how to treat my date and when to take her home (I've been told often enough!). No one needs to give me last-minute briefing before I dash out for a date—I just wish they'd trust me more."

"Maybe this sounds selfish, and perhaps I am, but I don't like to have to sit down after a party or dance and tell mom all about it. I'm usually dead tired and a little crabby then, so I wish she'd wait till the morning for the details. It's always more fun to tell if you don't feel as if you have been railroaded into it."

• • •

"There's only one gripe I have about my family, and it doesn't show up too often. But once in a while, when I'd love to contribute something to an adult family conversation, my remarks are dismissed as childish. Personally, I think much poise and self-confidence can be acquired at home by letting us air our opinions and then have them corrected if necessary. Several of my friends feel this way, too."

• • •

"When I come home at night after school I love to sit down and play a few Harry James or Vaughn Monroe platters. I barely get settled when mother comes in to hear a radio program. She knows I love my records, but I guess she loves her soap operas better."

• • •

"My mother has a very suspicious mind; she thinks all teenagers are wild. When I come in from a date at night she asks me where I have been and if I have been drinking. When I tell her where I have been and that I haven't been drinking, she says calmly, 'I don't think you're telling the truth,' and then leaves me to repent my 'lies,' when all the time I've been telling the truth. It makes me furious."

• • •

"After my gal friend and I have a small misunderstanding via the phone my dad has the habit of rubbing it in with little questions such as 'Having a little trouble?', 'Want to borrow my shoulder to cry on?', or 'Not big enough to know how to handle a girl?' He seems to think it's funny, but it's never funny to me."

• • •

"My family thinks I'm too young to do a lot of things just because I'm the 'baby' of the family. Whenever my mother sees me doing anything for the first time—smoking a cigaret, driving the car, or even asking a girl to a movie—she gets dewy-eyed and comes out with the old standby, 'But you're only 17!' That's practically an adult, I'd say."

• • •

"The only thing my dad does that I could cheerfully choke him for is scaring all my dates half to death. The poor fellows come in, not knowing what to expect, and instead of trying to make them feel at home he usually booms out, 'Well, what do you want?' This isn't exactly the best way to start the evening. Even if it's all a joke as far as my dad's concerned, it does disastrous things to a boy's ego."

• • •

"I have just lately become old enough to realize that all parents do not spend their lives arguing the way mine do. I am an only child, and after each argument my mother comes to me, expecting me, as a fellow, to 'defend American womanhood' by taking her side when she tells me how my father is abusing her. If they knew it, I no longer like either of them, tho I do have respect for my father because he never tries to talk about my mother to me."

• • •

"My only complaint comes from my own laziness—my mother will never let me sleep late. If I'm up late studying I have to get up to go out for a loaf of bread; if I've been out on a late date I have to get up at the crack of dawn to go out for the Sunday paper. A fellow could use a little sleep occasionally."

And what else do these high school characters have to complain about? What other "mistakes" keep mothers and dads from getting the gold medal for goodness? Well, it's a long, long story—continued next week!

A NEW FEATURE

TOPS AMONG TEENS

Ronald Clyne . . . artist.

AT 15, WHEN MOST BOYS are drawing model airplanes and caricaturing friends on the back pages of history books, Ronald Clyne of Chicago had sold his first professional art work. With a notebook of cartoons and black and white sketches, carefully mounted, tucked under his arm, the young artist walked into the office of an editor of a large publishing house. The editor bought two cartoons at $5 each. After that initial sale, and for the next year, he averaged one sketch a month, selling his cartoons and illustrations to leading detective and mystery magazines.

Last year, while a senior in Hollywood High school, Ronald privately published a 1,000 book edition of a portfolio of 10 pen drawings by Wallace Smith, with an introductory page which he wrote himself. The sketches, favorites of Ronald's, were taken from a book by Ben Hecht written in 1922, and the portfolios were sold thru ads in an amateur art magazine, with Frits Lang, famous movie director, as one customer.

Now, at 19 and just one year out of high school, with a studio in his home and an ambition that reaches out toward New York and the publishing market there, this young artist already has done numerous commercial illustrations for magazines and books and has designed book jackets for the work of several leading authors.

Tall, lean, with a sensitive face that would be an excellent subject for any artist, Ronald plans some day to follow fine art. A severe critic of his own work, the young artist has already begun to fill in the large frame he has set for his career.

T. Dorsey May Strangle Himself in Own Strings

Tommy Dorsey . . . fiddles while fans burn.

TOMMY DORSEY has been around ever since November of 1906, and he has served with a lot of very fine musicians, so he should be alert to trends in popular taste. If his current VICTOR recordings are samples of what the public wants there is a definite trend away from swing to a semi-symphonic sort of sweetness that makes Lombardo look like Bunk Johnson. I don't believe there is such a trend, and I think Tommy is making a mistake in his current alignment. Take "A Friend of Yours," for instance. It starts out with a string section that might be introducing "Snow White," then goes into a romantic vocal which is the best part of the disk. Stuart Foster does it. Tommy got himself nine strings, a la Krupa, and they have run away with him. "There's You" is on the other side, and it sounds almost exactly like the "Friend," except that Billy Usher is only fair in the vocal. Or take "Like Someone in Love"—"Sleigh Ride in July." Bonnie Lou Williams does a couple of nice vocals, and you get an occasional tantalizing glimpse of that sweet trombone, but so what? On the other hand, when you change to "You're Drivin' Me Crazy" you get back some of the older Dorsey. There's the old easy swing on the trombone, the brasses work with good unity, and the Sentimentalists do a sa-su-sa job on the vocal. "More and More," which is the A side of this pair, is probably all right for a soft spring night. Best of all the fairly recent T. Dorseys is "Any Old Time"—"The Sunny Side of the Street." Billy Usher sings the first one, but it's the slow trombone story and a rather chaotic brass ensemble that give this one life. Again the B side is better, with the brasses working well and plenty of good riffs by the Dorsey sidemen. This is still substandard, but good.

Harry Cool fans, attention! Your boy is forming a band, they tell me, for a Chicago date in July. Still no records from Premier, but I'm trying! —W. D.

I think you'll like Benny Carter's versions of "I'm Lost" and "Just a Baby's Prayer at Twilight" on CAPITOL. The latter especially has nice interplay among reeds and brass, with a good vocal by Savannah Churchill.

Jane Foster Edison's Director of Home Economics, brings you her own favorite tested recipes, selected especially for Edison Home Service readers. Try them—you'll like them!

CREAM PUFFS

½ cup margarine 1 cup flour
1 cup water 4 eggs, unbeaten

Bring margarine and water to a boil on high heat. Add flour all at once and stir constantly. Remove from heat, to cool, then add one egg at a time, beating after each addition. Shape on slightly greased cookie sheet or muffin tins. Bake at 400° in a pre-heated oven for 30 min., then reduce temperature to 350° for 30 min.

Rhubarb Custard

½ lb. rhubarb 1½ tbsp. cornstarch
½ tbsp. water 1 cup milk
½ cup sugar 2 eggs, beaten
dash of salt

Cook rhubarb slowly until soft. Mix together ½ tbsp. water, ¼ cup sugar, ½ tbsp. of cornstarch, and stir into the rhubarb; stir constantly, over low heat, until thickened. Remove from the heat. Mix remaining cornstarch, sugar and salt in saucepan, add milk, and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens. Slowly stir into beaten eggs and cook on low heat, stirring constantly, for 2 minutes.

When both custard and rhubarb sauce are cooled, stir rhubarb into custard. Cut off the tops of cream puffs and fill cream puffs with rhubarb custard and dust with powdered sugar. Makes 10 cream puffs.

So your family will say "Gee, mom, you're a swell cook!"

"SALTY O'ROURKE"

1 To the sport of kings Salty O'Rourke (Alan Ladd) brings the purse of a pauper. A horse runs wrong, and a crooked bookie, Doc Baxter (Bruce Cabot), delivers an ultimatum to pay up 20 grand in 30 days—or else. Unruffled, Salty assures Smitty, his trainer (William Demarest), that he has a plan.

2 Salty claims an outlaw horse and gets a ruled off jockey, Johnny Cate (Stash Clement), back on the track by having him impersonate his 17 year-old brother.

3 Listed as under age, Cate, actually 22 years old, must attend school. To Barbara Brooks, his beautiful teacher (Gail Russell), he brings flamboyant gifts. Insulted, she expels him.

4 At left: Salty, to pacify "the old maid school teacher," brings her a fancy sewing box. Meeting Barbara, he swiftly revises his strategy and offers it to her matchmaking mother (Spring Byington).

5 Cate tries to favor the teacher by fixing a race. Salty berates him but to keep him in line persuades Barbara to pay special attention to the jockey. Misunderstanding, Cate thinks she wants to marry him.

6 Blow-off comes at the Jockey ball the night before the big race when Cate discovers Barbara loves Salty and decides he's been double-crossed. He disappears announcing he intends to drink all the liquor in town.

7 Salty and Smitty find him, sober him up, get him to the track. Cate slips away to find Doc Baxter and offers to throw the race. But Cate double-crosses the gambler after Barbara talks him into riding straight. Doc's gunmen pay off with bullets and the jockey is killed.

8 Salty promises Barbara he'll get revenge and starts for Doc's headquarters. Barbara, unaware she's multiplying his risks, filches his gun. Guarded by the Babe (Rex Williams), Doc waits. Salty finds he's unarmed, then tricks the gamblers into shooting each other.

9 Salty realizes Barbara's innocent sweetness makes her different from any other girl he has ever known, and proposes. (THE END)

"Here, Herrenvolk and sons of the Sun, is what a Thunderbolt pilot sees as he peels off to wipe you out... You've heard about the Thunderbolt?*... Of course you have, but as we say in our quaint American way, you ain't heard nothin' yet... You've brought 'em down?... well, that happens, too, but at what a cost men, what a cost... The records tell that gratifying story. ℭ And naturally you've examined with awe, these instruments and other details of the few ships that fall into your hands... so we don't hesitate to publish this fine view. ℭ Confidentially, we're well aware that if you had the blueprints and complete specifications, you haven't the time... you haven't the material... and more important still... you haven't, and never have had, the kind of people... with the kind of spirit and the free-man's pride of accomplishment, which have made the name 'Thunderbolt', a synonym for allied air supremacy."

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC

FOUR FOOTED FIGHTERS!

By WARD WALKER
(Tech. Sgt., U. S. M. C.)

IT WAS the night of July 25-26, 1944, our fifth night ashore on Guam. Clouds covered the moon and drifted low over the thousand-foot crests of the mountains rimming Apra Harbor, our beachhead.

For four days the marines had driven ahead, meeting only isolated strong spots in the hills. The front lines, stretched thin, were from two to three miles inland. Every one was tense—hell was past due to break loose.

And break it did about 10 p. m. Wave after wave of Jap soldiers launched themselves at the marine lines, trotting fanatically into the machine gun and artillery fire.

More than 3,000 of the emperor's best were to die in that charge. But a little band of 50 slipped thru in a spot where the marines ran out of ammunition. They were well equipped, ably led, and they had an objective—the very heart of the marine assault on the island, the command post down on the beach.

The Japs moved quickly down the mountainside, taking cover in the deep gullies when the star shells lighted the sky. Soon they were within striking distance. Under cover of the dense brush and the darkness, they had a reasonable hope of a surprise stroke.

But a giant Doberman pinscher, Tojo, on sentry duty, had alerted. His marine handler passed the word. The leathernecks were waiting and ready. Minutes passed. Nothing happened. Some of the marines commenced to wonder—all but Tojo's handler. The big dog had never been wrong.

And he wasn't wrong this time. The Japs started a silent, murderous attack. Marine guns ripped into action and half of the Japs were wiped out in the first few seconds. The other 25 roamed thru the area until dawn, desperately trying to keep one step ahead of the dogs. One by one they were hunted down and destroyed.

That was the first time I saw the war dogs prove their worth. It wasn't the last.

In every campaign in the Pacific the Japs have slipped their suicidal snipers thru the marine lines under the cover of darkness. Armed with grenades and high explosives, they would do what damage they could before they were killed.

The war dogs made that a highly unprofitable business on Guam. The darkness didn't hide the smell of the Japs, and it became axiomatic that where the dogs were the Japs weren't. Those few who did slip thru found it impossible to hide long from the four-legged devil dogs.

• • •

The second morning after the banzai charge the marines swept forward across the upper plateau, driving north of the city of Agana thru the fields of chest-high kunai grass—lush hiding for the Jap snipers.

Our squad was accompanied by King, another Doberman.

The fields were dotted with clumps of Jap dead, slaughtered in their senseless charge. As we neared one pile King alerted. His handler tried to quiet him, told us apologetically that it was the first time the dog had ever alerted on dead Japs.

Even as he was apologizing a very live Jap armed with a Nambu (automatic rifle) reared out of the pile. One of the lads cut him down before he could fire — and the handler spent 10 minutes apologizing to King.

The ravines and gullies were riddled with Jap caves, some of them occupied by machine gunners and others empty. The dogs could tell the difference, while the marines could only find out by drawing fire from the Jap guns—a process that swells the casualty lists.

King alerted on one small opening. A demolition expert tossed in a small charge of explosive. That blew out the doorway and exposed an intricate series of tunnels leading to a master cave deep inside a hill. Two hundred forty Japs were blown to kingdom come in that one nest.

When the Japs were driven into a death trap on the northern peninsula of Guam there wasn't a marine on the island who didn't speak respectfully of the war dogs, for a lot of them owed their lives to the highly trained noses and ears.

On the transport heading into Peleliu in the Palau Islands I struck up a warm but respectful friendship with Prince, one of the Dobermans quartered on our ship. I'd stand out of reach and admire him. Prince, after a few sniffs and a routine baring of his fangs, would let me watch him without trying to tear out my throat.

I next saw Prince in an aid station near Death valley, being treated for a bayonet slash on his flank. He and his handler had killed three Japs in a hand-to-hand, fangs-to-bayonet battle on the ridge the night before. His handler was gently scolding him:

"You got what you had coming, you big-blank-blank! Letting those little blanks get that close. Scared the life out of me, you did."

• • •

To us the handler explained it must have been the wind, or perhaps the thick stench of hundreds of dead Japs in the area, that dulled Prince's nose.

"Anyhow, I forgive him, I guess," the handler said. "Two of 'em he got himself, so quick he had time to help me with the third. And this cut ain't so bad. He'll be fixed and ready to go in a few days."

Prince signaled his complete agreement by nudging his handler's hand.

While the scout dogs do the most spectacular work, the messenger and first aid dogs are equally heroic. In the midst of a murderous battle at the entrance of Death valley, late in the Peleliu campaign, wounded marines were lying unconscious and hidden in holes and gullies where the stretcher bearers couldn't find them.

Communications had been blasted out by Jap mortar fire. While the messenger dogs raced for reenforcements and new orders, the first aid dogs cruised the area under heavy enemy fire, sniffing out the wounded. Stretcher parties followed the dogs, and before the marines withdrew from the deadly trap all of the men were accounted for.

At Guam and Peleliu the Japs followed the same pattern they'd used at Bougainville, Saipan, and Tinian—they'd sacrifice any number of troops to kill a war dog. One prisoner at Peleliu begged with tears in his eyes to be bayoneted, not thrown to the dogs.

In the more recent actions of Iwo Jima and Okinawa, correspondents have sent thru similar reports, saying that Japs will fire first at the war dogs, then at the accompanying marines.

In two years of battle in the Pacific the dog heroes have proved that the Japs' fear has a solid basis — the combination of devil dogs and United States marines is one the Japs can't beat.

T./Sgt. Ward Walker, U. S. M. C. R.

● Tech. Sgt. Ward Walker, U.S.M.C.R., on military leave from The Chicago Tribune as a marine corps combat correspondent, recently returned to Chicago after 22 months in the Pacific, including the campaigns of New Britain, Guam, and Peleliu. In the latter two operations he watched marine war dogs in action, watched them save marine lives and help to beat the suicidal Jap garrisons. But the canine heroes have their share of casualties and more of them are needed by the marines. If your dog is a Doberman pinscher or a German shepherd, healthy and from 1 to 4 years old, he is urgently needed. Enlist him in the marines by writing to War Dogs, U. S. Marine Corps, Washington 25, D. C.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

cause water holes had dried up. The size of farms could be reduced. In central North Dakota a farm of 587 acres is considered none too large for an average family because of allowance for unwatered stretches; in the well watered Red river valley a farm of 160 acres is sufficient. Further, one irrigated acre will "stabilize" from 20 to 30 additional acres and enable them to come under cultivation.

In such a situation the Dakotas should have no trouble holding the population they already have, and might even look forward to a substantial increase. For with a greater output from the land there would be more opportunity for development of the sort of industry they already possess.

Why, then, did I find some serious-minded people rather hesitant about the MVA—aside from political considerations? Mainly because they distrust the mood of expectation their fellow citizens have about the project. The latter are in the utopian frame of mind; they think that with water control all problems will be solved; they will be absolved from all further effort.

The serious realize, too, that a project of this scope involves many complications. It is not true, for instance, that the water of even so vast a river as the Missouri is inexhaustible. There are limits to the extent to which nature can be coerced.

The mammoth dams which have been built in this country during the last decade have four possible primary utilizations. To Dakotans they would appear in this order:

1. Irrigation.
2. Flood control.
3. Navigation.
4. Supply of power.

Rarely is a dam built with just one of these objects in view, and by its very nature it is bound to serve two, three, or all four of them. If it affects a wide area, different people will take differing views on its primary function, according to their geographical situation and their economic interests with relation to it.

No matter how careful may be the plans, the completed structure may somehow appear in a different light than it did in project, or circumstances may change. A good example is the Grand Coulee dam and reservoir in central Washington on the Columbia river. Its original primary object was to irrigate the arid stretches of central Washington. Supplying of power was considered as only incidental, and navigation was not considered at all. The war came with its demand for industrial power, and the Grand Coulee (with its supplementary dams like Bonneville) turned into a source for immense power. Presumably it will some day return to its original purpose and become an irrigation dam as well, but that will have to wait.

The planners of these projects have to keep all interests in view and make an effort to satisfy every one; above all, not to make one man's meat another man's poison, to help the people on the upper stretches of a river at the expense of those on the lower, or vice versa.

These tremendous dam and reservoir projects are usually presented to the public in some simple light, as such an obvious good that none but the perverse would question them. Actually they are very confusing even if you assume that you are getting the exact facts. It's bound to happen in a question of this magnitude that some of your informants are shouting for some vested interest, some private enthusiasm or hobby of their own.

To the visionaries the MVA is just part of their dreams for the development of the Missouri valley. They grow eloquent on the tragedy of unutilized subsoil resources. There are tremendous deposits of lignite coal, mostly in North Dakota; of mica in the Black hills, of an extremely useful mineral compound named bentonite. Between Pierre and Chamberlain, a straight-line distance of about 60 miles, I was told there is an estimated 2,000 million tons of manganese.

The thought of all this unexploited wealth infuriates the enthusiasts. The MVA would fit into their dreams—they think—by supplying cheap navigation. As things are now they see a conspiracy by the railways and the industrial east to choke off their industrial development by high freight rates. Lignite coal of the Dakotas is sold for 98 cents a ton at the mine. Shipped merely 150 miles to Pierre, its sale price has gone up to $3.42.

The more judicious admit the justice of high freight rates in a thinly populated region. It is only natural to expect it to cost more to move goods from Minneapolis to Bismarck than from Chicago to Detroit. This situation cannot be changed until population gets denser. The calmer spirits hope that the bureau of reclamation will develop by irrigation the 1,600,000 acres it is talking about. They want the Dakotas to remain primarily agricultural, only in an improved way, until such time as the exploitation of mineral wealth and industry in the Missouri valley can be put on a sound basis.

It was a bit pathetic, I thought, to hear Dakotans talk as if they hoped living and labor conditions in other parts of the country would not be any too good once the war is over. That's their hope of getting back their own—those who have been drawn away by the high wages in the war industry areas.

Those who do return, if they follow the lead of men like Gov. Aandahl, will find they can have improvement and greater stability than in the past. There will be less of the situation seen today, where farmers around Bismarck, with the war time boom, have in many cases incomes of $7,000 or $8,000, in some cases $20,000 to $30,000; but three years ago their incomes were around zero and they were heavily in debt.

The best disposed person could hardly say that there is much to attract the average traveler to the Dakotas. In western South Dakota there are the Black hills, of course, with fishing and scenery, and they have had a certain vogue since Coolidge once established the summer White House out there. Pheasant shooting brings those who like that to the Dakotas; in South Dakota alone they are reckoned for an annual contribution to the wealth of the state of from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

In Bismarck the state capitol building is a notable one, and photographs of it have gone around the world. It replaces the old building which burned 14 years ago—a white skyscraper with an attached wing in modern style. Its main hall is a masterpiece of rich and simple beauty, done in gleaming woods and bronze with simple flat surfaces.

A visitor can feel, however, that life in the Dakotas may have its own special attraction. "We like a country where we can see," one man told me in Bismarck, and certainly those open plains, almost treeless, have their own grandeur. They are best, probably, in winter, as I saw them, with the gusts of wind tossing the snow about in that crystal air, with the golden flash of the skimming and strutting pheasants.

Discovery by Noted Veterinarian
STOPS DOG-ITCH

For years, veterinarians were baffled by a common skin disease that caused untold agony to dogs and cats. Starting as a burning itch, it soon develops dandruff-like scales and brownish edged sores with a mouldy odor in ears, on paws, under-body, back or around tail. Treatments for mange, fleas, allergy or faulty diet result only in costly care or actual loss. Now, noted veterinarian, Dr. A. C. Merrick, has positively identified this disease as a fungus infection comparable to "Athlete's Foot." He has named it "Fungitch" and has also developed SULFADENE, a treatment proved amazingly effective in thousands of clinical cases. Applied externally, Dr. Merrick's SULFADENE stops the itch in a few minutes—scales and sores vanish in a few days. Buy today where you get pet foods or remedies—or send $1.00 for generous treatment; money back if it fails to give complete satisfaction. Address Brookfield Laboratories, Dept. They cost a few cents more — and most people find them worth it.

it's as simple as that...

When you know how!

The chain stitches of the first sewing machine could be unraveled by pulling on a single thread—a potentially embarrassing method for the wearer. In 1845, Elias Howe conceived the idea of a needle with an eye in the point and clothes-making was on its way from the chimney corner to the specialized factory.

The new TRIUMPH Flashlight Battery is an advancement in the dry cell as simple and as far reaching as the needle invented by Elias Howe

Constructed on a new principle, TRIUMPH Battery has NO SHELF DETERIORATION, even at high temperatures!

Regardless of when it was made or how long you keep it, your new TRIUMPH Flashlight Battery will be 100% efficient when you are ready to put it into use.

When it comes to minding your PEAS and their Q's*...

... no other container protects like the CAN

The *qualities you want most—in a dulcet dish of plump peas—are full-bodied flavor, gay green color, and toothsome tenderness.

And those are the very qualities so ideally preserved for you—when you buy peas in cans!

That's because the lightproof, airtight steel-and-tin can is such a lasting protector of food flavors, colors, and wholesomeness.

Not only that, but because modern canning methods are so efficient and so jiffy-quick, these vine-ripened peas often reach your table actually higher in vitamin and mineral content than peas bought in city markets and cooked at home!

This same sure protection also applies, of course, to the many vegetables, fruits, juices, meats, and other fine foods that come in cans—as well as to hundreds of additional things that go to make up the long list of more than 2,500 products normally packed in cans by over 135 different industries.

And cans are so convenient. They don't break, crack, tear, or split. They're easy to carry, store, open, and dispose of. Truly, no other container combines so many advantages!

CAN MANUFACTURERS' INSTITUTE, INC., NEW YORK

OUR FIGHTING FRONTS need thousands of things packed in billions of cans. This means certain civilian products must come to you in substitute containers for the duration. But your Government has wisely provided for homefront nutritional protection by permitting adequate supplies of foods to be packed in cans. Stocks on dealers' shelves are yours to buy freely. Remember to turn empty cans in for salvage.

If I Had a Wishing Well
Here's what I'd wish for my Little boy . . . . .

"I'd want him to be the kind of man his neighbors like . . . and look up to! I'd wish him success in the work he wants to do . . . ability to make friends, the right kind of friends. And to marry a sweet girl . . .

"Like every mother I often day-dream about my youngster's future . . . and I do everything I can to make those dreams come true! Health and diet . . . good manners, good grooming, good looks! Yes, looks do count, and a friendly smile goes a long way toward success. So thank heavens, I've found a tooth paste that's wonderfully good, in a field where many are good. It's Listerine Tooth Paste.

"It's easy to see why it's called a 'cleansing prescription for your teeth.' This tooth paste actually gets into and helps clean many of those tiny little 'pinpoint' cracks in the enamel that are so hard to get at. And they say those 'pinpoint' spots are just the places where decay may often start.

"That's why it is Listerine Tooth Paste for all of us."

The TEENIE WEENIES

BY WM·DONAHEY.

ICE CREAM

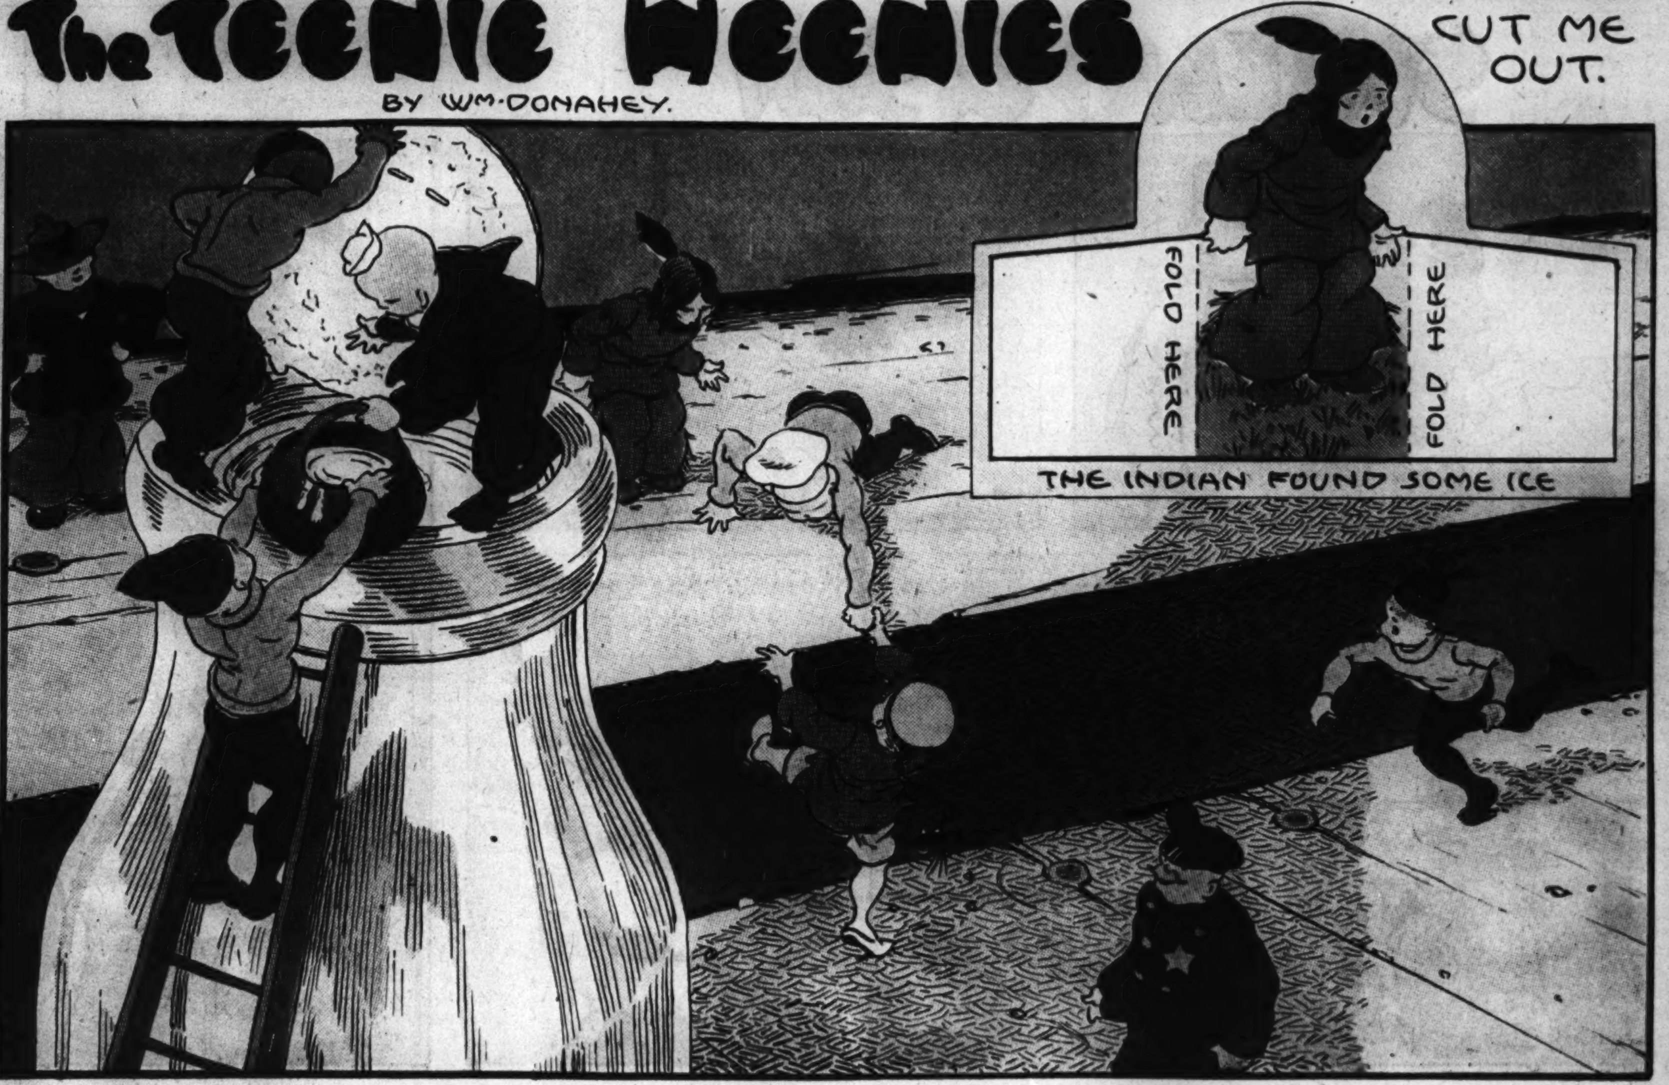
THE Teenie Weenies know a great deal of what goes on in the neighborhood of the Teenie Weenie village. They get the news from birds, mice, cats, and dogs, and even the chickens often give the little folks'bits of news. The Chinaman can best understand the birds and animals, and it was thru these friends that the news of the cream bottle reached the Teenie Weenie village.

Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, first told the Chinaman about the bottle of cream that stood on the back steps of one of the big houses near the Teenie Weenie village. Jack, the dog, told the Chinaman that the people who lived in the house had gone away. One of the respectable mice told the same story, and a chipmunk had very much the same story to tell. That suggested ice cream to the Dunce, whose thinking is controled mostly thru his Teenie Weenie stomach, and he asked the General if they couldn't get enough cream to make a thimble of ice cream.

The Indian found some ice back of the grocery store, and several of the little men dragged a couple of pieces as large as English walnuts over to the Teenie Weenie village. Then the men set off for the cream bottle. They carried along one of the biggest Teenie Weenie ladders, for a cream bottle is rather hard to climb, even for a Teenie Weenie. Gogo and the Sailor climbed up to the top of the bottle and pried off the paper top with a small finishing nail which the little folks used for a crowbar. The Sailor then dipped up an acorn bucket of cream, and the Dunce was lucky enough to get it to the ground without falling off the ladder.

When the paper top had been put back in place the little men galloped off to the shoehouse, where they immediately went to work making the ice cream. The Cook prepared the cream for freezing, while other Teenie Weenies cracked ice. For a freezer they used one of the Cook's biggest cooking kettles, which is really nothing but the metal top of a catsup bottle. Into that they set a thimble of cream, fitted a top tightly to the thimble, and then filled the kettle with cracked ice and salt. Occasionally the Cook removed the thimble top and stirred the cream with a long paddle, which had been whittled from a used match, in order to make the cream freeze smoothly.

The ice cream was delicious, and the little folks surely enjoyed it.



CUT ME OUT.

YOU CAN SEE THE DIFFERENCE!

Tests show it...Millions know it!

No matter what leading tooth powder you are using now... Pepsodent Tooth Powder with Irium will make your teeth brighter!

Pepsodent makes this unqualified promise to you, without fear of contradiction... because test after test proves: Pepsodent Powder with Irium makes teeth far brighter.

Tests by impartial laboratories... tests with photoelectric devices... tests by identical twins... by dental clinics, by dentists themselves... produced overwhelming evidence for this one unshakable fact:

Pepsodent Powder produces a lustre on teeth twice as bright as the average of all other leading brands... brighter than any of them—bar none!

Change to Pepsodent Powder—the only powder containing Irium, the exclusive cleansing ingredient. Use it twice a day... and see it make your teeth brighter!

You can see the difference in one week!

Don't think a missing tooth can't hurt you!

When this young woman was about nine years old she lost several permanent teeth near the back of the mouth. And because the spaces didn't show, her parents neglected having bridges put in. But here's what happened.

As she grew older all of her teeth shifted out of line... ugly spaces then appeared between her front teeth. By the time she became an adult her smile was ruined... all because the missing teeth were not replaced. Fortunately, modern dentistry found a way to bring her teeth back into line... and then, at last, the necessary bridges were made.

So remember, even though the space doesn't show, it pays to have missing teeth replaced. It's the only way to insure the health and beauty of your remaining teeth. And daily brushing with Pepsodent Tooth Powder is the way to keep them sparkling bright!

Tests Prove Oxydol Washes Clothes CLEANER and WHITER!

Yes, Whiter! In wash test after wash test—Oxydol proved that it actually washes clothes cleaner and whiter than many other soaps which, unlike Oxydol, fail to get out that last possible trace of stubborn dirt and grime!

White and Bright Wash After Wash! Soaps often leave behind tiny discoloring particles caused by dirt in the clothes and the "hardness" of the water. Even with careful rinsing some of these impurities stick in the clothes and turn gray or yellow under ironing heat. But Oxydol combats "dirty grayness"—actually helps prevent grayness particles from forming!

New "Hustle-Bubble" Suds Lift Dirt Out! Oxydol's new "Hustle-Bubble" suds are so active they lift dirt out. And they work longer, too—long after suds from other soaps have quit! Yes, with Oxydol all your white things—except for unusual stains—come so clean they're White Without Bleaching. Sparkling white!

So Safe for Colors, Too! Oxydol is so safe for wash colors, rayons and your own precious hands. Its rich, safe suds wash your colored clothes so clean they fairly sparkle!

Next washday use Oxydol. Remember—
OXYDOL WASHES WHITE WITHOUT BLEACHING!

AVOID SOAP WASTE! Soap is made of vital war materials, so soap waste is war waste! Make your Oxydol go farther!

10,000 CADETS OF CHICAGO TO PARADE FRIDAY

30 R.O.T.C. Units to March at Noon

To the stirring cadence of staccato drum beats and resounding bugle tones, more than 10,000 khaki clad youths of Chicago's high schools will march thru an avenue of flags from Balbo dr. onto Michigan av. Friday noon, in the 10th annual parade of the nation's largest R. O. T. C. command. Insignia on the sleeves of their olive drab and blue uniforms will signify the participation of 29 public schools and one parochial school in the city-wide event.

Past military, school, and civic dignitaries in the reviewing stand at the Congress st. plaza, and north on a boulevard lined with thousands of applauding parents and other spectators, the colorful parade will proceed up Michigan av. to Randolph and Lake sts. Heading the columns of cadets will be Col. Richard E. Kutz, Waller High school senior, and members of his city corps staff.

Others on City Staff

Other cadet officers from north side schools who are included on the city staff are Maj. Richard L. Thompson, Waller, and Capt. Gerald Kiffel, Lake View. All were chosen by competitive examination in March.

Colors awarded by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will be borne by two units, as yet unnamed, which are ranked first and second by officers who have conducted a two week inspection. The American flags and school banners will be presented after a brief speech by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, at Balbo dr. preceding the parade.

Top Units to Lead

First places in the parade will be taken by these two top ranking units, with St. Mel High school cadets in third place unless they rank first or second. Organized as a separate unit, the parochial school regiment will be a guest of the 3,687th service command unit, to which all Chicago public school R. O. T. C. groups belong.

Pending announcement of the inspecting officers' decision, north side units are scheduled to march in this order: Waller, Sullivan, Senn, Lake View, Amundsen, and Lane Technical. R. O. T. C. instructors will march with their units.

Will Wear New Medals

With the poise and efficiency resulting from military discipline, the cadets will display regimental coordination achieved thru long and diligent drill. Many of them will wear medals recently awarded by the R. O. T. C. department, THE TRIBUNE, and various patriotic organizations for outstanding participation in unit activities.

Mayor Kelly and Col. McCormick will be in the reviewing stand, as will Lt. Col. Oscar N. Taylor, professor of military science and tactics for Chicago public schools, Maj. John F. Gardiner, military professor at St. Mel High school, and Maj. Frank L. Beals, R. O. T. C. administrator for the board of education.

Other Leaders to Attend

Among other military officials present will be Col. Joseph E. Torrence, commanding officer of the 3d district of the 6th service command; Lt. Col. Lewis C. Gordon, army specialized training division director; Maj. Doris Epperson, WAC director; Comdr. P. G. Pettersen, commandant of the Chicago coast guard base; Capt. B. B. Wygant, commandant of the midshipman's training school in Abbott hall, and Lt. Col. Michiel Dobervich, executive officer of the central procurement division of the marine corps.

School officials present will include President McCahey of the board of education; George F. Cassell, assistant superintendent of public schools; the Very Rev. D. F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools; Brother James Luke, director of St. Mel High school; Philip L. McNamee, director of war production training with the board of education, and district school superintendents and high school principals.

Units Begun in 1917

Fifteen bands and nine drum and bugle corps will march in the parade.

For the public, the R. O. T. C. parade, sponsored annually by the board of education in coöperation with THE TRIBUNE, provides an opportunity for observing and judging accomplishments of the organization which has been called "the backbone of order and discipline in Chicago high schools." Military training was introduced into Chicago public schools in 1917, largely thru efforts of THE TRIBUNE, and since 1919 has been under the national R. O. T. C. program.

Inspection of north side R. O. T. C. units was completed last week, when 6th service command officers visited Lane Technical High school. All other units in this area were inspected the previous week, and presentation of awards to outstanding cadets was included in each ceremony.

List Sullivan Winners

Sullivan cadets who received awards are:

Department medals—Lt. Col. Donald Wittenberg, officer's efficiency; Corp. Marshall Sarnatsky, noncommissioned officer's efficiency; Tech. Sgt. George Dibelka, band efficiency; Alvin Gittelson and Corp. De Royce Etheredge, neatness, and Paul Everly, recruiting.

Tribune medals—Corp. Ralph Ewry, Sgt. Verne Beck, Corp. Seymour Vishney, Hughes Hopewell, 2d

STUDENTS TELL JUNE HOPES AT CATHOLIC HIGHS

War Will Postpone Plans of Boys

When this year's June high school graduates tucked primers under their arms and trudged to the nearby schoolhouse in 1933, they began an educational career which took them thru eras of both depression and war. Despite this, in interviews with Tribune reporters, outstanding seniors of north side Catholic high schools expressed much the same brand of expectations known to their parents and grandparents.

Talk of education and hopes of careers in industry, arts, and diplomacy were threaded with the theme of travel. Some had learned the magic names of China, Rio, or Afghanistan while pasting stamps into collections. Others were spurred to adventure by reports of friends and relatives on battlefronts around the world. Each brought to his choice of career hope and a belief in himself and his right to personal achievement.

These top ranking seniors were chosen by their classmates from faculty selected groups of 10 from each high school for interviews with reporters of the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE. Choice was based on scholarship, initiative, and participation in extra-curricular activities.

ST. MICHAEL BOYS

A senior with definite ideas for the future is Ellis Meredith, 1553 N. Clark st., outstanding senior of St. Michael's High school for boys. Planning a diplomatic career, he wants to reform the method of choosing ambassadors, basing selection entirely on merit without regard for financial standing.

After service in the coast guard, which he expects to enter in late summer, and before he studies diplomacy at Georgetown university, Washington, D. C., Ellis intends to spend a year or more in Alaska with some friends. With a view to establishing a settlement in central Alaska, they have studied relief maps and done much background reading on the country.

A native of Alabama, Ellis moved to Chicago with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Meredith, and entered the 5th grade of St. Michael's school. Tho he's one of the few Protestant students in his school, he has the highest mark in his religion class. He edits the school newspaper, Central News, and is a member of Quill and Scroll, honor society for high school journalists.

Ellis has held class offices four years, being secretary of the senior class. For the last two years he has worked after school and in summer for a legal firm. He has a brother in the army in Persia.

ST. GEORGE

Merritt J. Davoust, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt G. Davoust, 7113 Ridge av., doesn't mind a period of naval service because in radar school, whose entrance examination he already has passed, he'll get nine months of college training toward his career as a chemical or electrical engineer.

If his post-war job takes him out of the United States, that's all right, too, the St. George High school senior says, because he likes to travel. "I'd like to see France and India," he added.

Jack, as every one calls him, is valedictorian and has maintained a straight A average all thru high school. This year, the first since 1932 that St. George has published an annual, he was activities editor of the Dragon. He was on the senior debate team, and has played football and participated in track. Jack plays basketball and baseball with community leagues. Mathematics and science are his favorite subjects and he reads an average of three books a week.

LOYOLA

Partly because he's a lawyer's son and partly because he thinks it will be a good profession after the war, Edward Kelly, 7347 N. Bell av., intends to study law when he completes his military service. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Kelly, the Loyola academy senior hopes to enter the navy in August.

As practice for his career, Ed was a finalist in the school oratorical contest this year, speaking on a subject of his choice: "The Need for Modern Catholic Leaders." He is president of the senior class, has been home room president four years, and is president of Torch, an activities club.

Ed has been an honor student four years, with an average above 90 per cent the last three. English is his favorite subject. He played basketball and football and was a member of the dance committee. Ed was on the staff of the annual, Grad Prep, this year.

IMMACULATA

A souvenir of her first visit to a night club, made at the age of 10 with her grandmother, started Virginia Heidkamp's collection of unusual menus, which today is one of her chief interests. It is not surprising that Virginia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Heidkamp, 4815 N. Hamilton av., was chosen outstanding student for Immaculata High school, for she won a similar honor in her sophomore and junior years.

Virginia plans to major in mathematics at Clarke college, Dubuque,

SALES MANAGER DOES BUSINESS OF $37,000,000

Her Staff Blankets City to Vend War Bonds

BY RUTH LOGAN

A $30,000 orchid, a ride in Chicago's only surrey with fringed top, Saturday and Sunday afternoons at Wrigley field, and week-end nights at the Chez Paree or the Latin Quarter—these are common experiences in the life of Miss Vera Berg, 5119 Kenmore av.

Tho they seem to spell adventure and excitement, such incidents really mean about 25 hours of steady volunteer work each week when Miss Berg, as chairman of the war savings staff of the American Women's Volunteer services, directs 500 young women in the sale of war bonds. In addition to this work, the north sider holds a full time position with the board of education.

In A. W. V. S. Since 1942

Miss Berg, who has been a volunteer since A. W. V. S. was organized in September, 1942, gives her lunch hours, three to five evenings a week, and Saturday and Sunday afternoons to her patriotic work. Her assistants sell bonds in three hotels, three downtown theaters, a loop department store, three night clubs, a ball park, and at special events, such as the political conventions last summer. Sales since 1942 have totaled $37,000,000.

Five o'clock three afternoons a week finds Miss Bery hurrying from her day time job to her desk at 203 N. Wabash av., where she may stay until 11 p. m. interviewing volunteers, arranging schedules, and answering calls for women to sell bonds at miscellaneous gatherings.

Saturday and Sunday afternoons in the baseball season Miss Berg goes with 15 or more assistants to Wrigley field. Their presence is announced over a loud speaker and the audience is asked to coöperate by buying bonds.

Chez' Sales High

On Saturday nights the year round seven volunteers sell bonds at the Chez Paree and four at the 885 club on Rush st. On Sunday night seven workers canvass the Latin Quarter. Tho Miss Berg usually doesn't sell, she supervises the work and checks to see that all is going smoothly. The master of ceremonies announces the girls' presence after the first show and asks patrons to buy bonds.

"Performers are coöperative in aiding sales," Miss Berg continued. "For instance, a man in the Chez one night offered to buy a $1,000 bond for a dance with Gertrude Neisen. The A. W. V. S. worker, acting as go-between, asked Miss Neisen and she agreed."

Even Go to Parties

Miss Berg acquired her orchid of fabulous price at a bond rally Feb. 14, 1943, in the Stevens hotel, where dinner plates sold for $1,000 bonds. The orchid, belonging to a night club singer, was bought at auction by a man who insisted that Miss Berg wear the flower because she wrote the bond. Since the volunteer was in uniform she couldn't wear the corsage, but the man said she must keep it anyway. "I still have it for a souvenir," she laughed.

Miss Berg and four assistants opened an A. W. V. S. canvass in the 5th war loan drive by touring the loop in a surrey lent by a Chicago woman who said the vehicle was unique in the city. A team was contributed by a north side stables. The surrey was decorated with posters and the horses wore blankets printed with slogans.

Seventy volunteers worked each day during the Republican and Democratic conventions, selling a total of $7,000,000 in bonds. Many of her assistants have day time jobs and serve varying amounts of time with a minimum of three hours weekly, saidd Miss Berg. Her total is 5,250 hours.

North side volunteers include Ann Balt, 7100 Sheridan rd.; Hazel Fry, 936 Waveland av.; Jeanne Lepine, 74 E. Walton st.; Evelyn Linder, 1608 Sherwin av.; Winifred Pawliger, 527 Brompton pl.; Dorothy Stein, 6807 Sheridan rd.; Alice Olson, 1608 Sherwin av.; Louise Sweeney, 2452 Hollywood av.; Genevieve Wright, 4900 N. TELL PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS' WORK IN BOND SELLING

Of the $4,500,000 of war bonds and stamps sold by students in Chicago and Cook county parochial schools since last September, $740,000 worth was sold by pupils in 10 Catholic schools along the north shore.

In addition students have participated in the Red Cross war fund drive, collected tons of scrap paper, and gathered magazines, books, soap, rosaries, decks of cards, and various sewn and knitted articles for the comfort of both fighting men and women, and peoples in liberated areas.

Not content with being busy as bees all winter, these enthusiastic students are preparing to redouble their efforts in the seventh war loan drive. Pupils of St. Gregory's grammar and high schools, 1643 Bryn Mawr av., are especially eager salesmen for they have been working all year toward the purchase of a $125,000 ambulance plane, and bonds worth $124,000 already have been sold.

St. Gregory Keeps Flag

More than 90 per cent of the student body buys war stamps regularly, thus enabling St. Gregory to fly the schools at war minute man flag, the first school in its district to do so. Sales were spurred in February and March by a plan of the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael Klasen to combine the bond drive with a campaign to raise funds for a new school building.

About $3,000 in bonds, naming the school as beneficiary, were sold. At a bond rally, students heard a talk by Dr. Jo Adler, volunteer worker of the Uptown Clark community, and sang songs of the different branches of service. Thermometers, victory ladders, and charts with American eagles or tags of red, white, and blue marked the progress of sales in some rooms. Weekly announcements were made over the public address system.

Gather 47 Tons of Paper

St. Gregory has collected 47 tons of scrap paper. During the recent Red Cross war fund drive, students sponsored an amateur show and raised a substantial sum by casting penny votes to determine the outstanding performance. Elimination contests were held in each room and two acts were chosen by penny votes for the final show. Each students is a member of the Junior Red Cross. Last Christmas they packed three large cartons with games, puzzles, scrapbook, candy, cigarets, and gum for distribution.

Publications as well as students of St. Scholastica academy, 7416 Ridge av., have gone to war. In order to conserve paper and films, the senior class this year voted to replace the usual year book with a small memory book. The Raven, student newspaper, for the last two years has won the Gallup award, given annually to 50 schools in the United States whose contributions to school and community war service are considered outstanding.

Debate War and Peace

School debates consider phases of the war and peace, and the Readers' club hears reviews of books on current events. Students say prayers for fighters several times daily, and many are working as aids in hospitals and in St. Vincent's orphanage. Recently St. Scholastica sent several hundred dollars to Italy for the rebuilding of convents and monasteries.

The purchase of a scout trainer plane and a gasoline tank truck has been financed by war bonds and stamps sales, and students are working to buy a pursuit plane. Stamps worth $40,000 have been sold. The school subscribed 100 per cent to the Junior Red Cross drive, with a contribution of $155.

Tell Marywood Record

Students of Marywood school, 2128 Ridge av., Evanston, grammar school for girls, had sold bonds and stamps worth $184,397 by Dec. 31. This amount was used to buy five planes, one landing craft personnel, one personnel carrier, one field ambulance, and several jeeps. Tho the drive began slowly, its pace quickened with a rally Dec. 7, attended by the 280 students of Marywood and representatives of the Red Cross and treasury department.

In addition $200 has been contributed by students to buy books and magazines, and $220 was raised for the Red Cross at a tag day in March.

A landing craft, personnel, a liaison plane, and 46 field ambulances have been bought by students of St. Benedict school, 3938 N. Leavitt st., with bond sales amounting to $75,000 and stamps sales of more than $30,000. They have collected 125 tons of scrap paper, and have contributed 100 per cent to the Red Cross.

Immaculata Buys Plane

A steady stream of small purchases has resulted in bonds and stamps sales of more than $52,000 for purchase of a pursuit plane by students of Immaculata High school, 640 Irving Park rd., which flies the minute man flag. Students recently received a note of appreciation from a tank crew in France for the equipment bought with last year's contributions. Eileen Gibbons, senior chairman, and six assistants compose the sales committee.

Gifts to the Junior Red Cross include: $200 for the war fund drive, 577 books, 1,175 cakes of soap, 13 knitted afghans, 24 Christmas bags, and a number of scrapbooks, medicine bottles, and articles for recreation. Service men's canteens have received 715 packs of cigarets, 474 cakes, and 1,700 candy bars. Evelyn Jackowski and Virginia Heidkamp are chairmen of these activities.

Compete at St. Gertrude's

Competition between classes stimulates bonds and stamps sales in St. Gertrude's school, 6218 Glenwood av. Teachers sell stamps in home rooms each Tuesday. Students have purchased an ambulance plane, four jeeps, a trainer plane, a personnel carrier, and a navy landing craft thru sales, and have sold $50,000 worth of bonds toward the purchase of a $108,000 Corsair fighter plane.

Pupils bring collections of scrap paper to the school each Wednesday and the weekly amount, weighed at noon, averages more than a ton. They have regular customers who save paper for them, and each student contributes at least one bundle weekly. English students have written essays on "How I Can Help Win the War" and are allowed to read the best from each class over the public address system. Art students also have encouraged bond sales with posters and sketches on phases of war work.

Loyola Sales Soar

With bond sales of $83,000, Loyola academy, 6525 Sheridan rd., soared high above its sixth war loan drive quota of $8,000, which had been set $2,000 above that of the previous year. Posters and signs bedecked the halls on the first day of the drive, and the Rev. Ara Walker, principal, made an opening talk to the student body. Student addresses by George Keough Jr., football captain, and William Roche of the varsity team, followed.

Pep rallies were held at lunch hours to spur the drive. Some of the best salesmen were photographed in a jeep sent to the campus by the army. Students selling $5,000 in bonds included William Collins, Martin Henslee, and John Marhoefer.

Bond sales of $50,000 by pupils of St. Ita's school, 5525 Magnolia av., have financed the purchase of an amphibian steel tractor, a field ambulance, and one army primary trainer. The school flies the minute man flag. Students also contributed $220 to the Red Cross, and gathered more than 700 bars of soap for Polish children.

Give Candy for Veterans

Pupils of St. Joseph's school, Wilmette, sold $32,000 worth of bonds, made substantial contributions to the Red Cross, and collected 500 candy bars for veterans of Vaughan hospital in the last year. A scrap paper campaign has continued thruout the year.

To promote sales in Our Lady of Lourdes school, 4641 N. Ashland av., a war bulletin board has been set up to show these results of previous sales: a $175,000 bomber, three $15,000 training planes, two $3,000 liaison planes, two $1,950 field ambulances, and six $1,165 jeeps. Sales since last September have amounted to $18,654. Students also have contributed tons of paper to the salvage campaign.

STUDENTS TELL JUNE HOPES AT CATHOLIC HIGHS

War to Postpone Plans Made by Boys

Ia., and then become a secretary, preferably to an architect because she's studied mechanical drawing for two years. This year she held an art scholarship. Her scholastic average for the four years is 93 per cent.

Virginia was senior class president and home room president in her sophomore and junior years. She played basketball and volleyball three years. She wants to see America first and then travel in Europe and India.

MARYWOOD

A career on the stage or in radio, followed by marriage, is the plan of Peggy Donnelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Donnelly, 1114 Lake Shore blvd., Evanston. She expects to enter Rosemont [Pa.] college next fall.

Peggy has studied dramatics for the last 10 years, appearing in a number of little theater productions. She had the lead in the senior play at Marywood School for Girls this year. She likes languages and has studied four years of Latin. Her scholastic average is 92 per cent.

As a senior she was sodality prefect and chairman of a war bond rally, in which students tripled their quota. Peggy was a delegate to the Chicago Youth conference and a queen's work board member of Cicsa. After the war she hopes to visit Mexico and other Latin American countries.

ST. GREGORY

Tho for the present military service may short circuit his ambition to become an electrical engineer, eventually Robert Brictson, 18, of St. Gregory High school will make his career in electronics. Bob, son of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Brictson, 1810 Summerdale av., passed the navy air crew examinations, but unless called to duty soon the army may call him.

Ranking first in his class, Bob has been on the honor roll during his three years' attendance at St. Gregory. With an interest in vocabulary, he found reporting for the school newspaper a natural. He is vice president of his home room. He plays guard on the basketball team, which last season won the parish championship.

Bob works Saturdays and summer vacations with the park district. He has had the job three years. As an avocation he chooses forestry.

ST. MICHAEL GIRLS

Mary Roy has had a song in her heart just about as long as she can remember. She sang as a public entertainer while very small. Now that she has attained the stature of 4 feet 11 inches Mary will train to become a singer.

President of her class at St. Michael Girls' High school, Mary also attended the grade school. She has been on the honor roll four years and is vice president of the Glee club, sports reporter on the newspaper, and flutist with the school band.

Until recently Mary worked after schools at a five and dime, but found that employment interfered with school activities. With graduation, she hopes to find a secretarial position and study music at night school. Otherwise she will enter De Paul university music school this fall. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Roy, 616 W. North av.

DE PAUL

A stamp collection, started when he was 10, introduced John Chrystal of De Paul academy to the countries of the world. Now he cherishes the hope that one day he may see them all. While awaiting call from his draft board, John, who is 17, will have time for two semesters in engineering, either at Notre Dame university or at Illinois Institute of Technology.

John, son of John F. Chrystal, 3428 Hirsch st., travels fast. In the recent track meet at Culver, Ind., he took first place in the half mile. He participated in intramural track, baseball, football, and basketball, and was a member of the Chemistry, Engineering, and Camera clubs. He is a columnist on the newspaper, Prep, is an honor student, and has sung in the De Paul choir three years. Outside of school he plays on the C. Y. O. basketball team.

SACRED HEART

For Helen Bertke, outstanding graduate at Sacred Heart academy, the immediate future holds attendance at Manhattanville college of the Sacred Heart in New York. That completed, she will become a secretary.

Member of the honor roll and Honor Ribbon council, Helen served on the committee for the Jumbo Ree circus, sings with the Glee club, and belongs to the sodality. She is enthusiastic about American literature, the theater, and horseback riding. She would like to live on a ranch. Helen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Dewey Bertke, 2244 Lincoln Park West.

ST. SCHOLASTICA

Marion Hughes of St. Scholastica High school expects her future employers will speak Spanish to her, and she'll understand them. She will major in the language when she enters either Mundelein or Northwestern university next fall. She also entertains the idea of becoming a teacher of Spanish.

President of the graduating class, Marion has led an active school career. She won her school letter and sweater, took photos for the yearbook, is chairman of the prom committee, and was a senator at the mock session of the senate held at Marquette university last winter. She played the role of Mother Prioress in the senior play. Despite her busy life she still found time to chalk up a four year average of 93 per cent, keeping her name on the honor roll four years.

Marion was a member of the staff of the newspaper which last year won a Gallup award. Last summer she worked as a page girl at the Chicago Title and Trust bank where her father is an attorney. She plans to find employment again this vacation. Marion and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Hughes, live at 7010 N. Paulina st.

MALLINCKRODT

With the school shorthand award tucked in her pocket, Joan Koehler of Mallinckrodt High school will seek a position as secretary upon her graduation in June. She is a member of the Shorthand and Typing club and has maintained a scholastic average of 94 per cent. Her name has been on the honor roll four years.

Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Koehler, 2016 Touhy av., has served as editor and feature writer on the newspaper and is senior representative to the alumnae association. She also is a member of the senior basketball and volleyball teams.

In her leisure time, Joan reads historical romances and collects recordings of operatic and instrumental selections.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 21

Tomato plants, egg plants, and peppers can now be planted without fear from frost. Use husky plants that are growing, not weak, woody ones that have been kept too long in flats, for these take a long time to become established.

Buy only resistant varieties, such as Marglobe, Pritchard, Rutgers, Pan-American, and others. If only a few plants are needed buy pot plants, for they transplant without being checked. Dig the holes large enough to accommodate the roots, place a little plant food in the bottom and stir it with the soil.

Place the plant so that it is neither too high nor too low, altho tomatoes root along the stems. Fill the holes and water afterward, raking a little fine soil over the moist soil. A starter solution may be used. Firm the soil around the plant to bring the roots in direct contact with them.

Tuesday, May 22

Mark the iris as they come into bloom and discard all poor varieties. Transplant old clumps in June or July or after flowering. Use good divisions and plant shallowly about nine inches apart for early mass effects.

The top side of the rhizomes [the part from which the roots grow] may be exposed to the sun or slightly deeper if in sandy soil. The iris is fine for many purposes. Sow vegetable and flower seeds thinly. Plant the essentials and not too many varieties.

Corn, potatoes, and tomatoes should be planted only where there is sufficient space for them. Soak parsley seed a day before sowing but only a few plants are needed.

Wednesday, May 23

Take good care of all fruits. The common elderberry is ornamental and its fruit furnishes fine pies, jelly, and good wine.

Plunge house plants in a sheltered spot in the garden. Those requiring a shady spot may be plunged beside a shed, beneath an overhanging tree or elsewhere.

These plants include ferns, night blooming cereus, Christmas cactus, fancy leaved caladium, some palms, and others, while the date palm, century plant, hibiscus, gardenia, poinsettia, geranium, and others of a similar nature require full sun.

However, plunged plants need examining every day to see that they do not dry out. It is well also to give them an application of plant food once every three weeks.

Thursday, May 24

Beds of geraniums should not be continually watered or they will grow soft. Keep them on the dry side. During the heat of summer keep the philodendron away from the sun's rays or the foliage will turn brown. Keep in subdued light or in a north window where there is abundant light but no sun.

Friday, May 25

Insect pests must be kept under control or the plants will be seriously injured. Eradication by dusting is cleaner than when the wet spray is used and the dust is easy to apply.

Two practices in vegetable growing must be adopted and continued regularly to obtain the high grade materials desired. First, thinning plants and second, cultivating them. Delaying cultivation means weeds.

Saturday, May 26

Gardens that cannot be artificially watered may be mulched when hot weather comes or toward the end of June. Mulching is simply covering the ground between plants with materials like decayed manure, grass clippings, peat, leaves, or anything that will decay.

VOTERS TO PICK TWO EVANSTON JUDGES JUNE 4

Predict Light Balloting Despite Contests

Two incumbents are among four candidates seeking municipal judgeships in the Evanston election June 4. One is Judge Harry H. Porter, who has been chief justice of the court during his 12 years on the bench. Other candidates are Judge James M. Corcoran, James G. Barber, a justice of the peace, and Henry E. Steele.

Despite the contest for the two six-year term vacancies, a light vote has been predicted by city officials, who urged citizens to go to the polls. All 68 precincts will be open from 6 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Holds Harvard Law Degree

Graduate of Northwestern university, Judge Porter received a law degree from Harvard university in 1924. He is a member of the bar of the United States Supreme court, Illinois bar, and federal District court.

Active for several years in the national safety program, Judge Porter is chairman of the National Safety council committee on tests for driver intoxication and is a member of the council committee on winter driving hazards. He has been general chairman of the council street and highway traffic section.

On Bar Association Committee

Judge Porter is vice chairman of the American Bar association committee on traffic court organization and procedure and is a courts section member of the national committee on traffic law enforcement. Believing that courts must give special consideration to problems of the returning veteran, Judge Porter is developing a plan for coping with such problems in the post-war period. The judge, his wife, and two children live at 1139 Forest av., Evanston.

During his 12 years on the bench, Judge Corcoran has tried about 50,000 cases, only 18 of which were appealed—one to the United States Supreme court. In all 18 cases the judge's decisions were upheld.

Admitted to Bar in 1926

Judge Corcoran, who lives at 2235 Asbury av., Evanston, attended Northwestern university, received a law degree from Loyola university, and was admitted to the bar in 1926. For several years he has been a visiting judge in Cook county Juvenile court. He is past president of Evanston Kiwanis club, Evanston Big Brothers' association, and Evanston Catholic Youth organization.

The candidate is a director of the Evanston War chest and Evanston Y. M. C. A. The latter organization dedicated a recent publication, "Evans-Teens Speaks," to Judge Corcoran in appreciation of his interest in youth problems.

Former Electrical Engineer

Going from law to some other business isn't as unusual as becoming a lawyer after successful employment in another field, declared Barber, who opened a law office 10 years ago at 1514 Elmwood av., Evanston, after working as an electrical engineer. He helped to organize the opening of the Michigan av. and Orleans st. bridges in Chicago.

Barber is a veteran of 19 months' service in France in World War I. From 1920 to 1930 he maintained an automobile business in Evanston and read law at night. "I learned it the hard way," he said. He has been a justice of the peace since 1929.

Organized Evanston Safety Council

Barber organized the Evanston Safety council, which resulted, he said, in installation of the first safety bureau in a police department in the United States as far as records show. He is chairman of the Chicago Motor club north area council, director of Evanston Salvation Army, and commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Evanston post.

Since 1931 Steele has maintained a law office at 636 Church st., Evanston. His experience with courts began in 1908, when at the age of 23 he was elected clerk of Jo Daviess county Circuit court. He was admitted to the bar at Springfield in 1916, and after practicing at Galena, Ill., was made general counsel of Midcity Trust and Savings bank of Chicago.

The veteran lawyer believes that churches, parents, and courts should coöperate more closely in solving problems of youth delinquency. He is a Mason and a member of First Methodist church, Evanston.

YANKBROADCAST FROM OKINAWA IS FLEA CIRCUS

Lt. Bruce Dennis Tells of Radio Rigors

BY LARRY WOLTERS

When you hear a short wave pickup relayed from Okinawa by way of Meet Your Navy or the Army hour have you ever wondered how much work and danger may go into the making of such a broadcast? A letter has reached this desk from Lt. Bruce Dennis, on military leave from W-G-N's staff, giving some idea of what goes into these programs.

"Our broadcasting studio occupies a former chartroom high on the flying bridge of our ship," he begins, "with just room for the commentator and program officer [which is what I'm known as]. We've crowded as many as eight people in here. Both Adm. Turner and Gen. Buckner have broadcast from our studio and once they were on together in a special army day program. I made my network debut as an announcer on this show which was taken by all four networks.

Plenty of Excitement

"Have had plenty of excitement, especially during the Kamikaze suicide raids. Several have been shot down not far away. We had a navy flyer up here one night waiting to be interviewed by Bud Foster when all the guns cut loose. He said he'd rather get out of here and stick to his Corsair where it was safe!"

Lt. Dennis told of spending two nights on the island to do a broadcast from a captured Japanese cave, with the aid of Joe Hainline of NBC.

"Took a jeep with a built-in transmitter along," he said, "for sending the show back to the ship whence it was relayed. The cave was located several feet below flea level and I accumulated 473 bites or 13 more than Tom Morrow [Chicabo Tribune correspondent], whom I met near one of the division headquarters. Tom seems always to be in o rahead of the front lines.

A Shrine in Cave

"The cave had been an Okinawa shrine. We reached the cave mouth, picked ourselves up after being floored by the sour smell welling from it, and slipped down a flight of stone steps to the main room. In its center was a wooden shrine that looked like a highboy with steplike shelves leading up to the cabinet where the idol was kept.

"Stalagtites [or is it mites] depended from the ceiling and water dripped down slowly into silent dank puddles. There was no echoes. From a broadcast standpoint it was as dead as if hung with velvet curtains. No booming, no resonance. Joe and I crept around trying to keep the bats out of our hair.

"American field artillery near-by kept cannonading away at the Japs and gave us sound effects. The broadcast was set for early next morning so we decided to remain in the cave overnight along with some shell shocked GIs taken from the front lines. Some more soldiers ducked in because an air raid alert was sounded. One was named Gustafson and he came from Genoa, Ill.

Bring Down a Zero

Ack-ack fire caused every one to flatten to the floor of the cave, Lt. Dennis said. Every one kept away from the opening of the cave except the bats which were silhouetted by the bright light of a paper moon.

After more gunfire there came "a sudden, rending, tearing crash, then utter silence."

"A sentry showing up at the mouth of the cave announced laconically: 'They got him!'

"A brand new Jap Zero had been shot down and landed 20 yards from the mouth of the cave. Twisted metal, some bright blue and some red from the disintegrated rising sun littered the ground. The oil pump from the engine lay right on the flagstone walk as we came out of the cave. In the midst of the wreckage lay what had been the Japanese pilot. Expressions of sympathy followed:

"'I wonder if the so and so had a wristwatch?'

"'Who got his pistol?'

"'Maybe the guy in the foxhole.'

Close Shave for GI

"It was agreed that if the guy in the foxhole got the pistol that was O. K. One wing of the plane had torn thru the pup tent a doughboy had over his foxhole. He was awakened rudely but was unhurt.

"The broadcast went on soon after daylight with Joe sticking to the previously censored script that had suddenly grown dull to us. But Joe didn't care. He got a clip of machine gun bullets from the Zero. [So did I.]

"What bothered us were the flea bites. The Okinawa flea is a jet propelled job that covers an amazing lot of territory in a short time and he is accompanied by four motored mosquitos which snap at any uncovered part.

"So anyway, that's the way American broadcasting came to Okinawa."

LIAISON OFFICER IS LINK BETWEEN ARMY, CIVILIANS

Lt. Krisor Has Answer to Every Query

When a north side resident dials Lincoln 6246, chances are that he wants either information or assistance. If the request has to do with military matters, 1st Lt. John D. Krisor, answering the telephone in his office at 2001 Irving Park blvd., will do his best.

Lt. Krisor

Capt. Stockman

It may be a mother wanting to know why her son overseas hasn't yet received the package she mailed in February, or a minister inquiring about arrangements for a patriotic service at his church. Or it may be an anonymous report that a soldier must be AWOL because he's around the neighborhood again, or word from a near-by police station that a service man from out of town has been injured in an accident.

He Knows the Answers

Whatever the message, Lt. Krisor, as liaison officer for the army and Chicago civilians, will know the answer. To the mother he will explain the frequent and necessary delays in shipping to war zones. The minister will be promised full coöperation. The tipster will be assured that a quiet but thoro investigation of the AWOL suspect will be made by military police. For the injured soldier, the nearest military hospital will be notified promptly to send an ambulance.

As an area commander, representing the commanding officer of the 3d district of the 6th service command, who is Col. Joseph E. Torrence, Lt. Krisor has one all-inclusive assignment: To bring the army closer to the people it serves. He works more than 60 hours a week in his office and in war plants, schools, churches, and the homes of service men. With 10 other area commanders working under direction of Capt. Ross Stockman in Illinois and northern Indiana, he represents the war department in the presentation of more than 300 army medals each month, and in the same period apprehends or investigates 400 AWOL soldiers and handles thousands of personal civilian problems.

Makes E Presentations

Lt. Krisor's duties are as varied as are the problems brought him. With his staff of three noncommissioned officers he has assisted in numerous army-navy E award ceremonies and bond rallies, and makes monthly inspections of guard service at Teletype corporation, Western Electric plant, and numerous other war plants.

An important part of the work of an area commander is the presentation of bronze stars, infantryman's badges, and other medals to the relatives of men killed in action, missing, or taken prisoner. Occasionally a medal is presented to a soldier who has returned suddenly from overseas. One such case was that of Pvt. John Bernath, 1114 Drummond pl., who was captured by the Germans while serving with a medical detachment in Italy and was released recently from a prison camp.

When Lt. Krisor, unaware of Bernath's return, visited the home to make arrangements for the presentation of a bronze star to Mrs. Bernath, Pvt. Bernath answered the door.

Citizens Aid Officers

Each area commander is assisted by a committee of key civilians. Among members of the committee appointed by Lt. Krisor, with their business addresses, are William Keith, American Legion headquarters, 205 Wacker dr.; Edward Burmeister, Lake View bank, Belmont and Ashland avs.; Louis Soelter, Kiwanis club, 2516 N. Halsted st.; Robert McMaster, president of Oak Park; Warren Stevens, community newspaper editor, 5625 Lake st.; John Harmon, Illinois Bell Telephone company, 212 W. Washington st., and Oscar Mayer, general manager of Oscar Mayer company, 1241 Sedgwick st. A committee of women has also been organized to call on the relatives of men killed in service.

FLUTE PLAYED BY QUEEN BESS REGAINS FAVOR

'Recorders' Marketed by Winnetka Musician

BY RUTH LOGAN.

After approximately 300 years of obscurity, the recorder, a type of straight flute perfected during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, is staging a comeback. Its return to favor is due partly to the efforts of David Dushkin, manufacturer of the instrument, who has 50 recorder students among the 200 persons in his music school in Winnetka.

The recorder gives a pleasant tone without requiring a strong wind or a highly developed embouchure, Dushkin said, and adapts itself to music of the greatest composers, so that even a beginner can identify himself with Bach or Handel. "Bach's music sounds good on a recorder, but imagine it for instance on a ukulele," Dushkin said.

Requests from Abroad

Composers are beginning to write music for the recorder again, Dushkin pointed out, and schools in all parts of the country have ordered instruments from him. Requests also come from Canada and South America, and several hundred recorders recently were sent to prisoners of war camps in Germany.

"The recorder has enjoyed an illustrious history," observed Dushkin. "It's even tangled with royalty. Henry the VIII., who was not so kind to most persons' feelings, had a tender regard for his recorders and even for his recorder players. He remembered them in his will!

"Also, as legend goes," continued the musician, "when Queen Bess was surprised at recorder practice by the ambassador from France, she decided to have him beheaded. But in the nick of time the ambassador complimented her playing so she granted him a favor instead.

Bard Mentioned Recorder

"Shakespeare mentioned the instrument in his plays occasionally, too," Dushkin recalled, "and when Bach talked about flutes he meant recorders. Samuel Pepys was a proficient recorder player, tho he called the instrument a flageolet."

The recorder tangled with Dushkin some 12 years ago in England to the advantage of both. Visiting the workshop of Arnold Dolmetsch where obsolete musical instruments are made, Dushkin was pleased with the recorder because of its tone and the "blowing singing" relationship to music which it afforded. Both he and Mrs. Dushkin were able to play the recorder after two hours' practice, tho neither had attempted it before.

Turned Out Own Job

Dushkin thought it would be a good instrument to teach in his school. But a Dolmetsch recorder cost $38 and Dushkin was not allowed to enter the workshop where the instruments were manufactured. Thus challenged, he determined to make a recorder himself.

By trial and error he gradually learned the process of manufacture, and now Dushkin's factory is one of a probable two in this country which turns out the flutes. They are usually made from native black walnut because the wood is pretty and comparatively easy to obtain—tho mahogany or any close grained hardwood is good—thru a combination of machine and hand processes. Dushkin supervises the tuning himself. The instruments are equipped with a plastic mouthpiece designed four years ago by the musician.

30 R.O.T.C. Units to March at Noon

To the stirring cadence of staccato drum beats and resounding bugle tones, more than 10,000 khaki clad youths of Chicago's high schools will march thru an avenue of flags from Balbo dr. onto Michigan av. Friday noon, in the 10th annual parade of the nation's largest R. O. T. C. command. Insignia on the sleeves of their olive drab and blue uniforms will signify the participation of 29 public schools and one parochial school in the city-wide event.

Past military, school, and civic dignitaries in the reviewing stand at the Congress st. plaza, and north on a boulevard lined with thousands of applauding parents and other spectators, the colorful parade will proceed up Michigan av. to Randolph and Lake sts. Heading the columns of cadets will be Col. Richard E. Kutz, Waller High school senior, and members of his city corps staff.

Others on City Staff

Cadet officers from south side schools who are included on the city staff are Lt. Col. Walter Martis, Bowen High school, Maj. Russell Moy, Tilden Technical High school, and Capt. Irving A. Farber, Hyde Park High school. All were chosen by competitive examination in March.

Colors awarded by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will be borne by the two units, as yet unnamed, which are ranked first and second by officers who have conducted a two week federal inspection. The American flags and school banners will be presented after a brief speech by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, at Balbo dr. preceding the parade.

Top Units to Lead

First places in the parade will be taken by these two top ranking units, with St. Mel High school cadets in third place unless they rate first or second. Organized as a separate unit, the parochial school regiment will be a guest of the 3,687th service command unit, to which all Chicago public school R. O. T. C. groups belong.

Pending announcement of the inspecting officers' desision, south side school units are scheduled to march in this order: South Shore, Tilden Technical, Bowen, Hirsch, Du Sable, and Hyde Park. R. O. T. C. instructors will march with their units.

Will Wear New Medals

With the poise and efficiency resulting from military discipline, the cadets will display regimental coördination achieved thru long and diligent drill. Many of them will wear medals recently awarded by the R. O. T. C. department, THE TRIBUNE, and various patriotic organizations for outstanding participation in unit activities.

Among military officials in the reviewing stand will be Col. Joseph E. Torrence, commanding officer of the 3d district of the 6th service command; Lt. Col. Lewis C. Gordon, director of the army specialized training division of this service command; Maj. Doris Epperson, WAC director for the 6th service command; Comdr. P. G. Pettersen, commandant of the Chicago coast guard base; Capt. B. B. Wygant, commandant of the mishipman's training school in Abbott hall, and Lt. Col. Michiel Dobervich, executive officer of the central procurement division of the marine corps.

Educators to Attend

School administrators present will include President McCahey of the school board; George F. Cassell, assistant superintendent of public schools; the Very Rev. D. F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools; Brother James Luke, director of St. Mel High school; Philip L. McNamee, director of war production training with the board of education, and district school superintendents and high school principals.

R. O. T. C. executives in the group will be Lt. Col. Oscar N. Taylor, professor of military science and tactics for Chicago public schools; Maj. John F. Gardiner, military professor at St. Mel, and Maj. Frank L. Beals, R. O. T. C. administrator for the board of education. Mayor Kelly and Col. McCormick also will be in the stand.

Units Started in 1917

For the public, the R. O. T. C. parade, sponsored annually by the board of education in coöperation with THE TRIBUNE, provides an opportunity for observing and judging accomplishments of the organization which has been called "the backbone of order and discipline in Chicago high schools." Military training was introduced into Chicago public schools in 1917, largely thru efforts of THE TRIBUNE, and since 1919 has been under the national R. O. T. C. program.

Three south side high schools—Hirsch, Du Sable, and Hyde Park—were visited by 6th service command officers last week in the closing days of the inspection. Presentation of awards to outstanding cadets was included in the ceremony at each school.

Hirsch cadets who received awards were:

Department medals—Lt. Col. Robert Crist, officer's efficiency; Sgt. Dean Heminger, noncommissioned officer's efficiency; Sgt. Floyd Seelander, band efficiency, and Herbert Mischo and Eugene Schumacher, neatness.

Tribune medals—Master Sgt. Tony

MASS TO MARK 90TH YEAR OF OLD ST. JAMES

Archbishop Stritch to Preside Sunday

Services commemorating the 90th anniversary of its founding will be held at 11 a. m. Sunday at Old St. James church, 29th st. and Wabash av. The Rev. Fr. Francis I. Lavin is pastor.

Presiding at the memorial services will be Archbishop Stritch. The mass will be sung by the Sisters choir of Chicago, a group of 90 nuns from 23 religious orders, trained by the Paulist choir director, the Rev. William J. Finn.

Old St. James, known as the mother church of all south side Catholic churches, was instituted in 1855 by Bishop Anthony O'Reagan. It served principally the settlement then located at 26th st. and the lake, known as Carville. This settlement was near the division repair shops of the Illinois Central railroad.

First Baptism in 1855

The first mass was celebrated in St. Agatha's Convent of Mercy at 26th st. and Calumet av., which was a forerunner of the present Mercy hospital at that address. Parish records show that the first infant baptism in the church was William Patrick Whalen on May 27, 1855—90 years to the day of the memorial mass.

The first church building, a wooden structure at 27th st. and Prairie av., was completed in 1858. The archives of Old St. James' which are extant disclose many interesting historical events. Camp Douglas, a prison camp for Confederate soldiers at 33d st. and the lake, was within the St. James parish, since parish limits at that time included the whole south side. Baptismal records show that between 1863 and 1865 almost 500 of these Confederate prisoners were baptized by the Rev. Thomas Kelly, pastor, who later became chaplain of the Illinois Irish brigade.

Once a Society Parish

Construction on the present edifice was begun in 1879 and completed in 1880. During the '80s and '90s it was one of the socially prominent parishes of the city. Its elementary and high schools received favorable comment thruout the country and the high school was the first such Catholic institution on the south side. An exhibition by its elementary school pupils during the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893 brought commendation to the parish.

It is one of the few Catholic churches in America to be consecrated—having been so declared in 1895. Thus it must be preserved and if not used as a church must be demolished. The massive stone edifice is still in excellent condition and the stained glass windows, representing gifts from many early Chicago families, are in a fine state of preservation.

Altar Boys to Attend

From 1880 to 1920 one of the best known of its parish activities was the Altar Boys society. Many former members of this society are still living and about 40 will be present at the altar for the memorial mass.

South siders who are on the arrangement committee for the memorial include Judge Igoe, 5120 Hyde Park blvd.; Elmer J. Whitty, 6529 Kenwood av.; Dr. Joseph F. Kerwin, 8342 S. Paulina av.; Edward R. Tiedeboh1, 6822 Euclid av.; Eugene C. Coyle, 7439 Clyde av.; George C. Hall, 7314 Bennett av., and Philip F. De Marais, 7828 Euclid av.

AWARDED NAVY CROSS IN SAVING LIFE OF SAILOR

Lt. [j. g.] Robert Voltz, whose wife, daughter, and parents reside at 5024 Ellis av., recently was awarded the navy cross for what he has termed his most memorable flight as pilot of a torpedo plane.

It was during an attack on the Jap fleet in Lingayen gulf off Luzon. Four defending enemy planes attacked, riddling his plane on the first pass and sending it into a spin which went unnoticed by other members of his formation who might have aided him. He managed to right the plunging craft and headed out to sea with his attackers pursuing.

When after several parting shots the Japs retired, Lt. Voltz made a crash landing near his ship, the impact of which severely injured one of his crew. Semi-conscious, the injured man was kept afloat by Lt. [j. g.] Voltz until a destroyer picked them up.

LISCOME BAY VET MEETS SON FOR FIRST TIME

Dad's Ribbons Catch Baby's Eye

"My son's so friendly it wouldn't make any difference if the stranger holding him was a casual passer-by or his dad just home from the wars," chuckled Gordon Stoner, machinist mate 1st class, of 10734 Avenue J. "He likes everybody immediately. When my wife handed him to me the first thing he did was make a grab for my service ribbons."

Such was Stoner's introduction to his son, Albert, 13 months. The sailor was quickly initiated into the mysteries of child care, "too quickly," he added grimly. When he arrived he found his wife, Theresa, temporarily taking care of his brother's three children also. The four young ones, each under 5 have led the Stoners a merry chase.

In Navy 8 Years

Stoner was heard to mutter something that sounded like "being in the navy was peaceful by comparison." Judging from his naval experiences it would be difficult to agree.

He has been a navy man for the last eight years. He enlisted when a sophomore at Bowen High school, stretching his age to get in. An older brother, James, was enlisting and Gordon was determined to go with him. The brothers took their boot training together and later served together in Panama aboard a subchaser on convoy duty.

Ships on Liscome Bay

After two years in the canal zone, Gordon returned to this country for further training, James remaining. In July, 1943, Gordon shipped out aboard the aircraft carrier Liscome Bay. At the close of the Tarawa battle in November, 1943, the carrier was hit by a torpedo.

"I was in the machine room at the time," Stoner related. "The whole aft of the ship was blown up and she quickly sank. I swam around for about two hours until a destroyer picked me up. Only a handful of men was saved. We were taken to Macon Island and put on a transport headed for Pearl Harbor."

Awarded Purple Heart

He was hospitalized for 10 days, awarded the Purple Heart, and given a survivor's leave to come home. After his visit at home he was assigned to duty on an attack transport which was shipping for Guam. Later the transport went to New Guinea to pick up troops for the Philippine invasion. On Nov. 20, 1944, a bomb hit the ship off Leyte. It was badly damaged but managed to make port.

Stoner formerly lived with his uncle, Anton Johnson, at the Avenue J address. He will report to Philadelphia for reassignment. His wife is the daughter of Comdr. and Mrs. H. P. Michiels, formerly of Chicago, now residing at Chickasaw, Ala. The commander recently served as captain of a destroyer in the Pacific.

STUDENTS TELL JUNE HOPES AT CATHOLIC HIGHS

War Will Postpone Plans of Boys

The children who became first graders when the depression was setting a new low, most of whom were born in 1928 when their elders were developing enthusiasm for a "new era," are leaving high schools this June.

In common with graduates born and reared during less strenuous times, plans for their own individual lives continue to be uppermost in the minds of this year's group. That, at least, is the impression gathered in interviews with the outstanding senior named by his classmates at eight Catholic high schools on the south side.

The graduates, who were first graders 12 years ago when the depression was near bottom seem little upset by the turmoil which has occupied their elders thruout their entire school life. The transition from depression to war, a war which soon will claim the entire attention of some of the graduates, is taken as a necessary phase in a life experience. But to the graduate the thing that counts is what he is going to do.

Hope to Learn in Service

Some of the boys express the hope that they won't want to go to war, that it will be over by the time they are 18. They state this thru no sense of cowardliness and without a thought of shirking their duty, but rather as if they were speaking of an annoying interruption which must be dealt with before they can take up their future lives. Some of them are determined to learn all they can while in service, others are thinking mainly of the time when they can go on to college.

Each of the eight students interviewed was elected by his classmates and faculty as the outstanding graduate on the basis of grades as well as participation in school activities.

MOUNT CARMEL

Jim Albaugh, 7412 South Shore dr., was voted the outstanding student tho he's been at Mount Carmel only two years. He was named the most valuable player in All-Catholic and All-Section football, and played intramural basketball and baseball. Jim isn't all brawn and no brains however, for he is an honor student and his favorite subject is mathematics.

He has spent the last couple of summers shoveling coal aboard a lake freighter and expects to work at it again this year before entering service. He will be 18 in October. Altho his college plans for becoming an electrical engineer have been upset, Jim hopes to become an electrician's mate in the navy and go to college after he has been released. His brother Corp. John Albaugh, is serving with the quartermaster corps in Germany.

WOODLAWN LORETTO

With no if or but about it, Lena Brevard, 6437 Harper av., intends to become a commercial artist. All thru high school she has made the school posters, worked on yearbook art, and been in charge of props for the dramatic art department. Water color painting is her hobby and her favorite painting subjects are landscapes and still life.

Lena, an honor student, is class president and a member of the Writers' club, and the athletic association. She writes for the school paper, is editor of the yearbook, and likes to read, swim, and ride a bike. In school she prefers chemistry and history to other subjects. She intends to work this summer and enter Rosary college in the fall. Her brother, Pvt. Albert P. Brevard, has been serving with the military police in Germany.

MERCY

Honor student Lillian Dunbar, 6852 Paulina st., hopes to enter nurse training at St. Xavier's college next fall. Lillian has decided that just in case the nursing field is overcrowded after the war she will take college training, too, so that she also will be fitted to teach.

She is active in the Mercy Athletic association, the Physics and Science club, and the Dramatic Art club. Her favorite school subject happens to be an extracurricular one, however. It is her pre-flight course with the civil air patrol. After graduation she hopes to make this her hobby by joining a neighborhood patrol squadron. She plans to work this summer.

DE LA SALLE

Altho he works after school and Saturdays as a clerk in the South Chicago postoffice, Thomas Patrick Durkin, 2860 E. 76th st., still finds time for school activities. He is class president, an active member of the Auxiliary club, and plays on the basketball team. As a key for entering the business world—he hopes to become an advertising salesman—Thomas took a commercial course in high school.

He will be 18 in August, and about that time intends to enlist in the navy, where he'd like to be a yeoman. He plans to study business administration at college when released from service, and if, as he says, "you want to go away in the future," he'd like to go into private enterprise—namely, to own a hunting and fishing resort in some cut

ST. THOMAS THE APOSTLE

Mary Ellen Wieloch, 837 E. 87th pl., isn't certain what subject she'd like to teach, but she thinks it will be Spanish. She is an honor student, works on the newspaper, and is on the editorial staff of the yearbook. She also works after school and Saturdays in a bookshop.

She is interested in psychology and hopes to take some courses in that subject at St. Francis' college, at Joliet, where she intends to matriculate next fall. Also interested in dramatics, Mary Ellen confesses she has "no very practical dream of 'being a radio actress." Her favorite diversions are reading, tennis, and horseback riding.

AQUINAS

Mary Ann Fellinger, 7441 South Shore dr., plans to enter St. Mary's college near South Bend, Ind., next fall, where she will major in dietetics. Altho her favorite subjects are mathematics and English, she has chosen dietetics because it is a relatively uncrowded field and because she enjoys cooking and working with foods.

Mary Ann, who is an honor student, Student Council president, and a member of the Latin, history, and dramatic art clubs, works on Saturdays. Like her fellow representatives, she hopes to work this summer. She likes to swim, read, and, as a musician, enjoys classical records.

ST. PROCOPIUS

Edward Prieboy, East Chicago, has launched his career already, tho he is only 17. Talent scouts spotted him while he was playing American Legion baseball in Indiana, and he will leave this summer to play minor league ball at Indianapolis, Ind., before being drafted. He is proud of the fact that his American Legion team was state champion for 1944-'45.

At school, he takes part in many activities, and has been president of his class for the last three years. He is vice president of the St. Wenceslaus Service society and captain of the baseball, basketball, and football teams. He is a member of the Dramatic and Glee clubs and an honor student. When drafted, he hopes he's put in the navy.

ENGLEWOOD LORETTO

Busy as she has been kept by school activities, Barbara Battle, 7410 Rhodes av., has found time during the last year to become a civil air patrol member and to obtain her pilot's license and 12⅓ hours of flying. She earned money for this hoppy by clerking in a food store.

Barbara intends to enter St. Francis college, Joliet, next fall where she will major in French and speech. She would like to become a radio actress. Barbara's school activities and honors include: Co-editor of the school paper, class treasurer, sodality chairman, and membership in the Glee club, Voice choir, and Quill and Scroll.

NURSE DIFFERS WITH MOVIES ON PACIFIC PICTURE

There 18 Months and Wants to Return

Lt. Mary Anne Harrington who as a navy nurse was one of the first American women to arrive in New Caledonia after United States forces landed, has returned to this country to duty at the naval hospital in San Diego, Cal. She is the daughter of Mrs. Kathleen Claire Harrington, 5841 Blackstone av.

Lt. Mary Harrington

"It isn't like it's shown in the movies, but I want to go back," she said, describing her 18 months' of duty at Guadalcanal, New Caledonia, and Wellington, N. Z.

Nurses Greeted by Band

The landing at New Caledonia was not without its compensations, however, for, she said, "The service men—there were thousands—greeted us royally with a band, cheers, and clicking cameras."

At Guadalcanal, where she served during the latter part of her tour, she was assistant chief nurse in a 1,500 bed hospital and helped supervise nursing of casualties from the battles for Bougainville, Saipan, and Guam. "The hospital was made up of Dallas and Quonset huts with screens and was quite comfortable," Lt. Harrington related. "It was awfully hot, but we were cooled by the shade of the coconut grove around us and by the rain which fell every night."

Barter with Natives

In their spare times, the nurses received bananas and papayas from the Melanesian natives in exchange for bright handkerchiefs, nail polish, bandanas, and peroxide for their hair. "The fresh fruit was wonderful after living out of cans," she said, "even if we had to talk pidgin English to get it."

Lt. Harrington is a graduate of St. Luke's hospital and also studied at the University of Michigan. Commissioned in September, 1941, she served at Mare Island, Cal., on recruiting duty in San Francisco, and at the naval hospital at Oakland, Cal., prior to going overseas.

AMERICA'S BEEN GOOD TO HIM SO HE STAYS ON JOB

Octogenarian Labors 7 Days Every Week

"America's been good to me," is the reason German born Frank Rhomberg gives for working longer and harder at a time when he might easily be retired.

He has been an inspector at Standard Forge, Indiana Harbor, for 22 years and when the war started and the plant converted to defense work, Rhomberg, who is 80 years old, began to work seven days a week. He maintained that pace until recently when production was ordered cut back and an occasional five or six day week began to appear.

Inspects Bomb Caps

One week he works from 7 a. m. to 3 p. m. and the next, from 3 to 11 p. m. It takes him an hour to get to work, and about 15 minutes to walk from the train to the shop. His job is no easy one. As an inspector of bomb caps, weighing nearly 1,000 pounds, he must roll each around to examine it thoroly. Rhomberg doesn't look his age, and contends that this is because he "feels better when he's working hard."

While the Rhomberg's have no children in service, they both feel they should work hard and buy bonds, when they consider what this country has given them. Mr. Rhomberg came to America in 1891 from Koblenz, Germany. After doing factory work while he got his bearings and learned a little English, he decided to turn to farming and within a few years had enough saved to lease land in Louisiana where he raised rice. Always a hard worker, he's proud of the fact that he handled from 160 to 300 acres by himself, with outside help only during the harvest period.

Migrates to Montana.

A stroke of bad luck, and the loss of his first wife made him strike out for new fields, however, and he migrated to Hardin, Mont., where he homesteaded near a Crow Indian reservation. He farmed, raised pigs, and built a couple of log cabins, finally selling the place in 1916. After a period in which he and his present wife discovered the headaches to be found in the restaurant business, the couple came to Chicago.

It wasn't long until Rhomberg became an inspector for his present employer and they purchased a nice brick home. Mrs. Rhomberg, 73, also from Germany, and also a hard worker, takes care of the three story house by herself, and fixes her husband "good nourishing food."

Asked if he intended to keep on working or to retire when the war was over, he replied that he would work as long as he possibly could . . . and certainly until the Japs are licked, for, he reiterated, "the war ain't but half over yet."

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 21

Tomato plants, egg plants, and peppers can now be planted without fear from frost. Use husky plants that are growing, not weak, woody ones that have been kept too long in flats, for these take a long time to become established.

Buy only resistant varieties, such as Marglobe, Pritchard, Rutgers, Pan-American, and others. If only a few plants are needed buy pot plants, for they transplant without being checked. Dig the holes large enough to accommodate the roots, place a little plant food in the bottom and stir it with the soil.

Place the plant so that it is neither too high nor too low, altho tomatoes root along the stems. Fill the holes and water afterward, raking a little fine soil over the moist soil. A starter solution may be used. Firm the soil around the plant to bring the roots in direct contact with them.

Tuesday, May 22

Mark the iris as they come into bloom and discard all poor varieties. Transplant old clumps in June or July or after flowering. Use good divisions and plant shallowly about nine inches apart for early mass effects.

The top side of the rhizomes [the part from which the roots grow] may be exposed to the sun or slightly deeper if in sandy soil. The iris is fine for many purposes. Sow vegetable and flower seeds thinly. Plant the essentials and not too many varieties.

Corn, potatoes, and tomatoes should be planted only where there is sufficient space for them. Soak parsley seed a day before sowing but only a few plants are needed.

Wednesday, May 23

Take good care of all fruits. The common elderberry is ornamental and its fruit furnishes fine pies, jelly, and good wine.

Plunge house plants in a sheltered spot in the garden. Those requiring a shady spot may be plunged beside a shed, beneath an overhanging tree or elsewhere.

These plants include ferns, night blooming cereus, Christmas cactus, fancy leaved caladium, some palms, and others, while the date palm, century plant, hibiscus, gardenia, poinsettia, geranium, and others of a similar nature require full sun.

However, plunged plants need examining every day to see that they do not dry out. It is well also to give them an application of plant food once every three weeks.

Thursday, May 24

Beds of geraniums should not be continually watered or they will grow soft. Keep them on the dry side. During the heat of summer keep the philodendron away from the sun's rays or the foliage will turn brown. Keep in subdued light or in a north window where there is abundant light but no sun.

Friday, May 25

Insect pests must be kept under control or the plants will be seriously injured. Eradication by dusting is cleaner than when the wet spray is used and the dust is easy to apply.

Two practices in vegetable growing must be adopted and continued regularly to obtain the high grade materials desired. First, thinning plants and second, cultivating them. Delaying cultivation means weeds.

Saturday, May 26

Gardens that cannot be artificially watered may be mulched when hot weather comes or toward the end of June. Mulching is simply covering the ground between plants with materials like decayed manure, grass clippings, peat, leaves, or anything that will decay.

LIAISON OFFICER IS LINK BETWEEN ARMY, CIVILIANS

Capt. Dolven Has Answer to Every Question

When a resident of west or south Chicago dials Crawford 1119, chances are that he wants either information or assistance. If the request has to do with military matters, Capt. Frank Dolven, answering the telephone in his office at 14th st. and Albany av., will do his best.

It may be a mother wanting to know why her son overseas hasn't yet received the package she mailed in February, or a minister inquiring about arrangements for a patriotic service at his church. Or it may be an anonymous report that a soldier must be AWOL because he's around the neighborhood again, or word from a near-by police station that a service man from out of town has been injured in an accident.

Will Promise Action

Whatever the message, Capt. Dolven, as liaison officer between the army and Chicago civilians, will know the answer. To the mother he will explain the frequent and necessary delays in shipping to war zones. The minister will be promised full coöperation. The tipster will be assured that a quiet but thoro investigation of the AWOL suspect will be made by military police. For the injured soldier, the nearest military hospital will be notified promptly to send an ambulance.

As an area commander, representing the commanding officer of the 3d district of the 6th service command who is Col. Joseph E. Torrence, Capt. Dolvan has one all-inclusive assignment: to bring the army closer to the people it serves. He works more than 60 hours a week in his office and in war plants, schools, churches, and the homes of service men. With 10 other area commanders working under direction of Capt. Ross Stockman in Illinois and northern Indiana, he represents the war department in the presentation of more than 300 army medals each month. In the same period the 11 officers apprehend or investigate 400 AWOL soldiers and handle thousands of personal civilian problems.

Three Enlisted Men Aid

Capt. Dolven's duties are as varied as are the problems brought him. With his staff of three noncommissioned officers, he has assisted in numerous army-navy E award ceremonies and bond rallies, and has shown war films to workers at the Crane Co., Western Electric Co., and other war plants.

An important part of the work of an area commander is the presentation of bronze stars, infantry man's badges, and other medals to the relatives of men killed in action, missing, or taken prisoner. Occasionally a medal is presented to a soldier who has returned suddenly from overseas. One such case was that of Lt. Joseph Kill, 4213 Wells st., who was liberated from a German prison camp when the Russians took control of Romania. When Capt. Dolven, unaware of Kill's return, visited the home to make arrangements for the awarding of a distinguished flying cross, Lt. Kill himself answered the door.

Tell of Other Duties

Typical of other services given by the area commander's office were the arrangements made by Capt. Dolven for a Chicago man to attend ceremonies in Washington, D. C., at which his brother was awarded the congressional medal of honor, and Capt. Dolven's aid in obtaining thru the Red Cross and war department, an emergency furlough for a soldier whose wife was to undergo a critical operation.

Each area commander is assisted by a committee of key civilians. Among members of the committee appointed by Capt. Dolven are Arthur G. Goyer, 1110 W. 35th st., bank cashier; John M. Haffner, 5100 S. Ashland av., community newspaper editor; State Sen. McDermott [4th], 5445 S. Ashland av.; William J. Warfield, 706 E. 50th pl., and H. J. Beggins, 4100 S. Kedzie av., auxiliary military police chief. A committee of women has also been organized to call on the relatives of men killed in service.

In Occupation Army

Capt. Dolven fought with an infantry regiment in France during World War I., and later was a town marshal in Germany with the army of occupation. In civilian life a professional golfer, he returned to military service in February, 1942.

Organized in December, 1942, as plant guard officers, the area commanders assumed their present titles and took over additional duties in July, 1943. Auxiliary military police serving as guards in many Chicago war plants are still under their supervision and are inspected monthly. Area commanders in this 32,000 men for guard duty, releasing regular army men for service overseas.

City Divided Into Two Areas

The area commander system originated here, with Capt. Stockman as the first officer in such a position, and has been copied in many parts of the nation. The officers are commissioned in the corps of military police.

Metropolitan Chicago is divided into two areas, with Capt. Dolven in charge of the entire section south of the dividing line, which extends east on Belmont av. from the county line to Harlem av., south to Jackson blvd., east to Pulaski rd., south to Roosevelt rd., and east to the lake. Lt. John Krisor supervises the north area from his office at 2001 Irving Park rd.

Other area commanders in this 6th service command district are Capt. G. M. Unsworth, whose headquarters are in the Carnegie Illinois plant at Gary; Capt. E. R. Sherwood, Aurora; Maj. Walter G. Mee, Springfield; Capt. Charles McFarland, Decatur, Ill.; Capt. Donet Smith, East St. Louis, Ill.; Lt. John Miller, Carbondale, Ill., and Capt. George Tomlinson, Moline, Ill. In the Camp Ellis and Fort Sheridan areas, the commanding officers of those posts are area commanders, with Capt. Howard Werner, Camp Ellis, and Capt. Jack Marietta, Fort Sheridan, as subcommanders. A suboffice in Joliet is headed by Sgt. H. H. Buell.

Liaison Officers

Liaison service between the army and Chicago citizens is performed by these four officers. Capt. Stockman is supervisor of all area commanders in Illinois and northern Indiana.

DANCE SERIES GAINS BACKING OF S. SIDE YOUTH

A series of dances for young people of the south side Negro community recently was started by the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., and the Parkway Community house, 5120 South Park way.

The dances are held each Wednesday at the Y. W. C. A. and on Friday at the center. They are the outgrowth of meetings attended by Horace R. Cayton, Parkway Community house director; O. O. Morris, Wabash Avenue Y. M. C. A., and Miss Betty Lyle, South Park way Y. M. C. A. The program was set up in consultation with the Council of Social Agencies. An appropriation of $5,000 was contributed by the Community and War fund.

Youngsters Back Plan

Cayton stated that prior to forming the project, dances have been held at Parkway and met with enthusiastic response from the young people. However, the community house lacks the space and facilities for handling the number of youngsters eager to attend.

Project director is Mrs. Irene McCoy Gaines, former director of the woman's division, Chicago Urban league. A volunteer youth planning committee was formed with 33 members who elected the following leaders: Henry Jenkins, 4242 South Park way, and Walter Parrish, 4947 South Park way, chairmen; Leatrice Bonner, 5138 Michigan av., and Lucinda Wellington, 3259 Rhodes av., secretaries; Marvin Harper, 5157 Calumet av., business manager, and Mary Barron, 3525 South Park way, head of the program committee.

It is the committee's job to select the orchestras, tend the cloakrooms, serve at soft drink stands, and provide entertainment. The committee meets for an hour before each dance to plan ahead.

No Drinking or Smoking

Rules of conduct and dress for dances, as laid down by the committee include neckties for boys, low heels for girls, and no smoking or drinking. Invitations are distributed by the committee, as well as thru Mrs. Maudelle Bousfield, principal at Phillips High school, and John Meegan, Du Sable High school principal. A small service fee is charged to help pay for the orchestras and printing.

Members of the adult advisory committee, in addition to Cayton, Morris, and Miss Lyle, are Miss Dorothy Rogers, program department director; Mrs. Emily Miller, activity director at the house; Miss Ann Boston, Girl Reserve secretary at the South Park Y. W. C. A.; Miss Lucy Carner, Chicago Council of Social Agencies; Lawrence Burr, Wabash Avenue Y, and Mrs. Wilhelmina Blanks, South Park Y. W. C. A.

YANK BROADCAST FROM OKINAWA IS FLEA CIRCUS

Lt. Bruce Dennis Tells of Radio Rigors

BY LARRY WOLTERS

When you hear a short wave pickup relayed from Okinawa by way of Meet Your Navy or the Army hour have you ever wondered how much work and danger may go into the making of such a broadcast? A letter has reached this desk from Lt. Bruce Dennis, on military leave from W-G-N's staff, giving some idea of what goes into these programs.

"Our broadcasting studio occupies a former chartroom high on the flying bridge of our ship," he begins, "with just room for the commentator and program officer [which is what I'm known as]. We've crowded as many as eight people in here. Both Adm. Turner and Gen. Buckner have broadcast from our studio and once they were on together in a special army day program. I made my network debut as an announcer on this show which was taken by all four networks.

Plenty of Excitement

"Have had plenty of excitement, especially during the Kamikaze suicide raids. Several have been shot down not far away. We had a navy flyer up here one night waiting to be interviewed by Bud Foster when all the guns cut loose. He said he'd rather get out of here and stick to his Corsair where it was safe!"

Lt. Dennis told of spending two nights on the island to do a broadcast from a captured Japanese cave, with the aid of Joe Hainline of NBC.

"Took a jeep with a built-in transmitter along," he said, "for sending the show back to the ship whence it was relayed. The cave was located several feet below flea level and I accumulated 473 bites or 13 more than Tom Morrow [Chicabo Tribune correspondent], whom I met near one of the division headquarters. Tom seems always to be in o rahead of the front lines.

A Shrine in Cave

"The cave had been an Okinawa shrine. We reached the cave mouth, picked ourselves up after being floored by the sour smell welling from it, and slipped down a flight of stone steps to the main room. In its center was a wooden shrine that looked like a highboy with steplike shelves leading up to the cabinet where the idol was kept.

"Stalagtites [or is it mites] depended from the ceiling and water dripped down slowly into silent dank puddles. There was no echoes. From a broadcast standpoint it was as dead as if hung with velvet curtains. No booming, no resonance. Joe and I crept around trying to keep the bats out of our hair.

"American field artillery near-by kept cannonading away at the Japs and gave us sound effects. The broadcast was set for early next morning so we decided to remain in the cave overnight along with some shell shocked GIs taken from the front lines. Some more soldiers ducked in because an air raid alert was sounded. One was named Gustafson and he came from Genoa, Ill.

Ack-ack fire caused every one to flatten to the floor of the cave, Lt. Dennis said. Every one kept away from the opening of the cave except the bats which were silhouetted by the bright light of a paper moon.

After more gunfire there came "a sudden, rending, tearing crash, then utter silence."

"A sentry showing up at the mouth of the cave announced laconically: 'They got him!'

"A brand new Jap Zero had been shot down and landed 20 yards from the mouth of the cave. Twisted metal, some bright blue and some red from the disintegrated rising sun littered the ground. The oil pump from the engine lay right on the flagstone walk as we came out of the cave. In the midst of the wreckage lay what had been the Japanese pilot. Expressions of sympathy followed:

"'I wonder if the so and so had a wristwatch?'

"'Who got his pistol?'

"'Maybe the guy in the foxhole.'

Close Shave for GI

"It was agreed that if the guy in the foxhole got the pistol that was O. K. One wing of the plane had torn thru the pup tent a doughboy had over his foxhole. He was awakened rudely but was unhurt.

"The broadcast went on soon after daylight with Joe sticking to the previously censored script that had suddenly grown dull to us. But Joe didn't care. He got a clip of machine gun bullets from the Zero. [So did I.]

"What bothered us were the flea bites. The Okinawa flea is a jet propelled job that covers an amazing lot of territory in a short time and he is accompanied by four motored mosquitos which snap at any uncovered part.

"So anyway, that's the way American broadcasting came to Okinawa."

SESSHU LEADS CHICAGOAN ON FABULOUS TRIP

Japs Seem to Resent Her Pursuit of Ancestor

Up to a certain point Mrs. John Carter Covell's life followed the ordinary pattern. After that point it took on all the aspects of a female Haliburton adventure, tho for a serious purpose, in the orient.

She was born and reared in Racine, Wis., was graduated from Oberlin college in Ohio, where she majored in English, and was given a trip to New York City as a graduation gift. The trip lengthened into an extended visit when she decided to attend classes in the history of art at Columbia university. While there she was awarded a Carnegie traveling fellowship and went to Europe to study her subject first hand.

Studies Three Languages

On her return she began work on her doctor of philosophy degree at Columbia in oriental art. Chinese, Japanese, and Latin were her three language majors, and for her thesis on original research she chose as her subject, Sesshu, a 15th century Japanese artist, whom she describes as the Michael Angelo of Japan.

It was while doing this original research in the orient that her adventures began. As a young white woman traveling alone—and one who was not a missionary—it was difficult for the orientals to accept her for what she was. This was particularly so in Japan where women have no such freedom and where the police are constantly on the alert for spies. More than once when she wore her camera slung over her shoulder she was stopped for questioning.

Viewed with Suspicion

"They are an odd people," she continued. "Once while visiting Toso, the capital of the Shikoku Island, which is now being bombed, I was a suspect as soon as I stepped off the boat. First because of the camera I carried, and second because, up to that time [1935] I was the first young nonmissionary white woman to set foot on the isle. They did not stop me, however, but allowed me to proceed to my friend's house.

"At 11 p. m. that night, after I had gone to bed, they decided to question me. When I refused to see the policeman, he was nonplussed for a moment and then spent the night on the threshold of the house. In other words he had been assigned to my case, and he was determined to stick. He followed me around all during my stay there, always polite and never annoying, unless you can call a small dog padding silently after you such."

During her stay at Toso, Mrs. Covell found she had made front page news in all eight newspapers.

"It was rather flattering to be followed around by eight reporters," she related.

Visits Homes of Sesshu

To learn of the environment which influenced Sesshu she tried to visit those places where he spent much of his time. Among those was Szen Buddhist monastery, situated just outside Kyoto, Japan. She arrived as their holy week was beginning and, with several other pilgrims, took her place in a large hall. Here for hours on end the monks sat, and she with them, in a position similar to that of the Yoga and in a state of half consciousness.

During the week, which was observed once a month, the diet at the monastery consisted of rice gruel and pickled radish three times a day. "It was asceticism in its highest form and most uncomfortable for an outsider. How long I remained there is a secret," she said, "but I did stay long enough to learn this story from experience."

Sees Bar to Chinese Unity

Mrs. Covell also stopped in China. It is her opinion that the Japanese inferiority complex is at the bottom of most of their atrocities. "That, and the fact that once a set pattern as taught them by their parents is upset, they are bewildered and don't know how to act," she commented. What most bewildered her in China was the different dialects used. "People in one city can't understand natives of another," she said, and added, "I really don't see how China will ever progress while the language is so varied."

Mrs. Covell, her husband, who is a major attending classes in advanced Japanese at the University of Chicago, and her 3 year old daughter live at 5519 Kenwood av.

WAR'S MIRACLE PLASTIC TURNED TO ARTISTIC USE

Students in Gary Find a Creative Outlet

Their workshop is a schoolroom. Their tools, the simplest: files and drills, and a portable kerosene oven. Their working material is plastic. And the result it attractive plastic jewelry which practically every student in the school wears.

With this formula students in the art classes of Miss Helen Ruth Huber, instructor at Wirt school, Gary, prove for themselves two of their teachers pet theories: that art is not reproduction, but creation, and that it is not a problem but a way of doing things. The youngsters admit they love it, and to many of them Ma, as Miss Huber is called, is their favorite teacher.

Learned Art at U. of C.

Miss Huber, who enjoys her classes as much as her pupils, first introduced working in plastic at the school four years ago. She had learned it one summer while teaching in the University of Chicago workshop. She always had felt that art in the school was too much copy work with not enough emphasis placed on originality. Here, she felt, was a fine medium for creative work . . . a versatile material suitable for making clever jewelery, practical novelty pieces, and artistic abstracts.

"Plastic is fascinating stuff to work with," she said. "However, I do feel it should be used only as a modern medium . . . in clean-cut, classic lines. I try to impress my students with this idea as they do their designing. Otherwise I leave them alone to create it as they wish."

Plastics Limited Now

When she initiated the work in her classrooms it was possible to purchase catanite [colored plastic] as well as lucite and plexi-glass. Now, however, only the latter two are available, being rejected scraps from bomber plants. The material comes either in sheets or in various sized cylinders and costs the students 3 or 4 cents a square foot. When dropped it will bounce rather than break, and the desired pieces must be sawed off. When heated it becomes pliable and may be flattened or bent to shape.

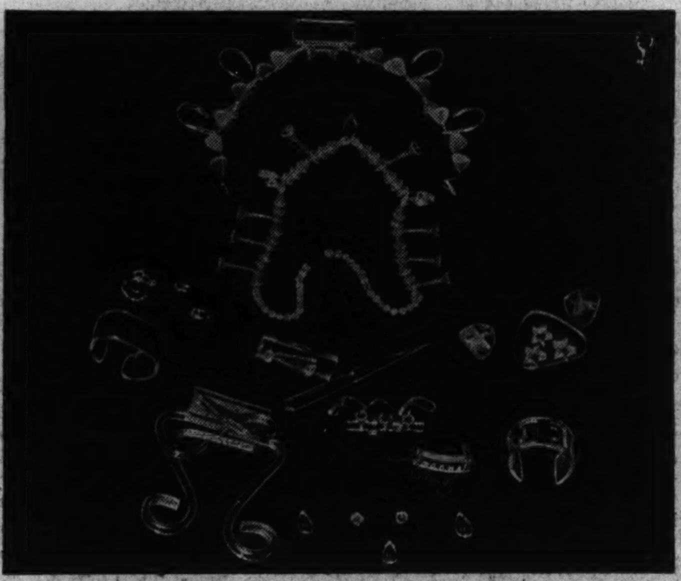
The school did not have the usual facilities for such work—such as a kiln or power driven tools—but Miss Huber, whose determination is equalled by her ingenuity, resurrected an old kerosene oven and an electric plate. They serve very well to heat the materials. A little more elbow grease on the part of students and simple hand operated tools substitute for power tools.

Toothbrushes Appropriated

Enthusiasm for making the jewelry ran to such a high pitch at one time that George Kerezman, eighth grade student, didn't hesitate to cut up the family toothbrushes to obtain the colored plastic he wanted for inlay work on a plastic ring. The boys show as much interest in the craft as the girls. It is quite proper at Wirt for a high school Joe to present his Jane with his latest plastic ornament.

Miss Huber, who formerly taught history of art, is a graduate of the University of Chicago, where she majored in archaeology. Later she received her master of arts degree at Northwestern university. When she became interested in plastic she again went to school. "You've got to know just what material you're putting in that oven or you're likely to blow the place up," she observed, "which is just what one student nearly did recently when I was out of the room. All plastics can't stand heat."

Handmade Plastic Jewelry



Jewelry, napkin rings, letter holders, and letter openers are among the plastic items made by students in Miss Helen Ruth Huber's art classes at Wirt school, Gary. Miss Huber introduced plastic work in her classes after working with it one summer while teaching at the University of Chicago workshop. The material, rejected scraps from bomber plants, is purchased in sheets or cylinders at 3 or 4 cents a square inch. Unbreakable, it bounces when dropped, and when heated becomes pliable. PATROLS OF 3 GARY SCHOOLS GIVEN PLAQUES

Junior chamber of commerce plaques recently were presented by Mayor Joseph E. Finerty of Gary to representatives of three school patrol groups for outstanding service during the year. Among the recipients were Geraldine Rakowski, captain of the all-girl patrol at Tolleston High school; John Kopil for Holy Trinity Slovak High school, and Rudolph Augustinovich, Glen Park grade school. Andrew Skinta is the police officer sponsoring the Gary school patrols.

30 R.O.T.C. Units to March at Noon

To the stirring cadence of staccato drum beats and resounding bugle tones, more than 10,000 khaki clad youths of Chicago's high schools will march thru an avenue of flags from Balbo dr. onto Michigan av. Friday noon, in the 10th annual parade of the nation's largest R.O.T.C. command. Insignia on the sleeves of their olive drab and blue uniforms will signify the participation of 29 public schools and one parochial school in the city-wide event.

Past military, school, and civic dignitaries in the reviewing stand at the Congress st. plaza, and north on a boulevard lined with thousands of applauding parents and other spectators, the colorful parade will proceed up Michigan av. to Randolph and Lake sts. Heading the columns of cadets will be Col. Richard E. Kutz, Waller High school senior, and members of his city corps staff.

Others on City Staff

Cadet officers from west side high schools who are included on the city staff are Capt. Walter C. Ringhoff, Austin, and Capt. Everett J. Miller, Marshall. They were chosen by competitive examination last March.

Colors awarded by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will be borne by the two units, as yet unnamed, which are ranked first and second by officers who have conducted a two week inspection. The American flags and school banners will be presented after a brief speech by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, at Balbo dr. preceding the parade.

Top Units to Lead

First places in the parade will be taken by these two top ranking units, with St. Mel High school cadets in third place unless they rank first or second. Organized as a separate unit, the parochial school regiment will be a guest of the 3,687th service command unit, to which all Chicago public school R.O.T.C. groups belong.

Pending announcement of the inspecting officers' decision, other west area units are scheduled to march in this order: Harrison, Marshall, Crane Technical, and Austin. R.O.T.C. instructors will march with their units.

Will Wear New Medals

With the poise and efficiency resulting from military discipline, the cadets will display regimental coördination achieved thru long and diligent drill. Many of them will wear medals recently awarded by the R.O.T.C. department, THE TRIBUNE, and various patriotic organizations for outstanding participation in unit activities.

Among military officials in the reviewing stand will be Col. Joseph E. Torrence, commanding officer of the 3d district of the 6th service command; Lt. Col. Lewis C. Gordon, director of the army specialized training division of this service command; Maj. Doris Epperson, WAC director for the 6th service command; Comdr. P. G. Pettersen, commandant of the Chicago coast guard base; Capt. B. B. Wygant, commandant of the midshipman's training school in Abbott hall, and Lt. Col. Michiel Dobervich, executive officer of the central procurement division of the marine corps.

School administrators present will include President McCahey of the school board; George F. Cassell, assistant superintendent of public schools; the Very Rev. D. F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools; Brother James Luke, director of St. Mel High school; Philip L. McNamee, director of war production training with the board of education, and district school superintendents and high school principals.

Executives of R. O. T. C.

R.O.T.C. executives in the group will be Lt. Col. Oscar N. Taylor, professor of military science and tactics for Chicago public schools; Maj. John F. Gardiner, military professor at St. Mel, and Maj. Frank L. Beals, R.O.T.C. administrator for the board of education.

Mayor Kelly and Col. McCormick also will be in the reviewing stand.

Fifteen bands and nine drum and bugle corps will march in the parade.

For the public, the R.O.T.C. parade, sponsored annually by the board of education in coöperation with THE TRIBUNE, provides an opportunity for observing and judging accomplishments of the organization which has been called "The backbone of order and discipline in Chicago high schools." Military training was introduced into Chicago public schools in 1917, largely thru efforts of THE TRIBUNE, and since 1919 has been under the national R.O.T.C. program.

Four west side high schools, Marshall, Crane Technical, Austin, and St. Mel, were visited by 6th service command officers last week in the closing days of the all-city federal inspection. Presentation of awards to outstanding cadets was included in inspection ceremonies at the three public schools, and St. Mel cadets received medals and ribbons at a military honors day program last Sunday.

List Marshall High Winner

Marshall students who received awards were:

Department medals—Maj. Ronald Siegal, officer's efficiency; Technical Sgt. William Haas, noncommissioned officer's efficiency; Corp. Robert Goldberg, band efficiency; Sgt. Bernard Peller, Sgt. Allan Ellstein, and Corp. Eugene Lichenstein,

CRACKLING RIFLE WINS PVT. SMITH HIS SILVER STAR

Foe Disconcerted as Gun Speaks

For gallant action in Belgium, the silver star medal has been awarded Pvt. Daniel D. Smith, 136 S. Mayfield av. During last September and October he and a group of comrades occupied an observation post in enemy held territory to secure detailed information on Nazi installations.

Altho it was necessary to go to and return from the observation post at night under heavy enemy artillery fire, Pvt. Smith and his comrades carried out the task successfully.

"As a result of their observations," says his citation, "artillery fire was placed on the enemy, inflicting heavy casualties."

War Department Comments

"The quick thinking and sure shooting of an alert threesome saved the 117th infantry's I and R platoon from an ugly situation during a daring patrol inside enemy territory in Belgium," said a later war department bulletin.

"Pvt. Smith and two companions were the rear guard of a 15 man patrol inside German lines on the lookout for information and prisoners. While the patrol was working its way along, one of its members saw 15 Germans in a position to bushwhack the 117th infantry men. As he gave the warning, Pvt. Smith shot and killed three of the enemy. The third member of the patrol killed another. The remaining Germans were captured to take back to allied lines for information purposes."

Overseas 17 Months

Pvt. Smith entered service Nov. 12, 1942, and was assigned to a reconnaissance section. He was transferred overseas in January, 1944.

A graduate of Steinmetz High school, he also attended Wright Junior college. He is a past captain of the James G. Brophy post, Sons of the American Legion, and a member of the League of American Wheelmen. Before entering the army he was employed by the Western Electric company.

His brother, Lester, on military leave from the business survey department of THE TRIBUNE, is en route to the Pacific with the army.

WEST SUBURBAN TOWN MINSTREL TO OPEN FRIDAY

The Cotton Town Minstrels, an evening of frolic and song in old time fashion, will be presented Friday, Saturday, and Sunday nights at the Village club of Western Springs.

G. F. Smitskamp, as interlocutor, will provide dignified contrast to the humor of the endmen who will be John Dexter, Frank Jacobi, Paul Shore, Gordon Zimmerman, Robert Muller, R. V. Knott, J. L. Parsons, and Fred Burns. Thirty residents of the village will be in the choruses.

Lawrence Griffin is directing the show.

Morton High Will Hold Honors Dinner Thursday

Morton High school's fifth annual honors banquet will be held Thursday in the school cafeteria. At later ceremonies in the school auditorium, new members of the Senior Honor society will be installed. Parents of students on honor scrolls are being invited to attend.

Invitations were issued by the youth service committee of which L. W. Remley is chairman. He was assisted by J. W. Hinds, senior boys' counselor, and C. C. Taggart, assistant superintendent.

The new project was designed to promote better association of representative young men of the community with business and professional leaders and to give boys a clearer idea of the extent of the Rotary organization and the service it renders.

LIONS WILL HOLD DAD TO GI BOND RALLY IN LYONS

Offer Buyers V-Mail Forms Tomorrow

Under sponsorship of the Lyons Lions club, a Dad to GI Joe bond rally will be held from 8 to 10 o'clock tomorrow night at Orrie's Bar Ranch, 8039 Ogden av., Lyons.

Organization of a Dad to GI Joe club in the village to aid the Mighty 7th war loan drive is but another activity on the part of the Lions club in remembering service men and women.

Tells of Lions' Activities

Recently, the group staged a successful Monte Carlo night at Vaughan General hospital. Every two months it sends cigarets to the 600 persons from the community in service and each month it mails its own newspaper to men and women of Lyons now in uniform.

Tomorrow night, the club's rally will give residents of the community an opportunity to purchase war bonds for sons, daughters, or others in the army or navy. Available will be the V-mail message form prepared by the treasury for use of all who wish to notify the service men and women overseas that war bonds have been purchased in their names.

GI Joe Plan Praised

"The Lions of Lyons have dedicated themselevs to help bring the war to a victorious finish and to keep up the morale of our service men and women," said Orrie Schneider, the club's president. "The Dads to GI Joe bond idea fits well into both purposes."

With Joe Slee, local theater man, as master of ceremonies and Francis Creadon in charge of singing, the club hopes to create an informal atmosphere at the rally.

DANCERS FOR MUSIC FESTIVAL PAGEANT URGED TO SIGN UP

The festival pageant, for many years a highlight of the annual Chicago Music Festival in Soldiers' field, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., will be renewed this summer. Miss Mayblossom Macdonald, director of a dance studio at 3907 Madison st., will again be in charge. She soon will announce the theme for this year's pageant.

Mayblossom Macdonald

The dancers will be accompanied by the festival symphony orchestra directed by Henry Weber. The pageant will be presented after dark with special lighting. Rehearsals will begin in July with the final rehearsal to be held on Aug. 17, the night before the show.

The minimum age for dancers who wish to participate is 6 years. Evening classes will be arranged for women employed during the day. A coupon for the convenience of those wishing to take part appears in this issue. The coupon should be sent to Philip Maxwell, director of the Chicago Music Festival, Chicago Tribune, Tribune Tower. Entries will be received up to and including July 1.

Fighters' Dads Eager to Buy New GI Bonds

Bonds for GI Joe as gifts from fathers to their sons in service are being purchased by many west siders as an additional contribution to the mighty 7th war loan drive. By helping to finance the war, the bonds will, they hope, bring their sons home sooner and with the assurance that on their return they will have a nest egg waiting for them.

Sgt. R. M. Crusnow

A. J. Crusnow

Dad to GI Joe chairmen have been appointed in the majority of west side communities to work with the treasury department in the promotion of E bond sales. In the west and northwest Garfield park district A. J. Crusnow, 4010 Madison st., assistant vice president of the Madison-Crawford National bank, will lead the campaign. His son, Sgt. Robert, has been in the marine corps four and a half years, serving overseas for the last three and a half years. He has participated in many major campaigns, and recently took part in the assault on Iwo Jima.

Has Three Sons in War

In South Austin Edward R. Kelly, 5239 Monroe st., has been appointed Dad to GI Joe committee chairman. With three sons in service, he believes that war bonds are the most practical gifts he can give them. His eldest son, Lt. Edward R. Jr., who entered service in June, 1941, is on duty with the 14th army air force in China. Lt. Thomas, next oldest, is a marine pilot flyer in the Pacific, while Leroy, naval machinist mate third class, is serving aboard a destroyer in the same theater of operations.

Robert Eichenbaum, 11 N. Green st., is near west side committee chairman. His son, Lt. Robert, in service 35 months, is on duty with the 7th army in Germany. To help accelerate bond sales for service sons, Eichenbaum will speak at a rally tomorrow evening in Washington Park temple, 4100 Washington blvd., and on Thursday will address members of the midwest side Kiwanis club at a luncheon meeting in the Midwest Athletic club, Homan av. and Madison st.

Leaders in North Lawndale

Morris Zimmerman, 3401 Roosevelt rd., and William Dess of the same address will be co-chairmen in North Lawndale. Mr. Zimmerman's son, Pvt. Joseph, entered service three years ago. Overseas two years, he is stationed at the 237th station hospital in New Guinea. Dess' son, Pvt. Lester, was wounded while serving with the 9th army last February and is now recuperating in England.

Other Dad to GI Joe committee chairmen include Theodore Maschek, 1437 W. 17th st., southwest central community; Lester D. Castle, 5645 Lake st., north and central Austin, and John Boscia, 824 S. Oakley blvd., medical center.

Offer V-Mail Facsimiles

Fathers who purchase bonds for their sons will receive upon request facsimiles of bonds printed on V-mail stationery which may be sent to overseas service men. They also will receive a charter membership card recording their purchase.

Dad to GI Joe clubs may be formed by three or more charter members. General headquarters of the campaign is treasury department offices, room 202, 105 W. Adams st.

ADVISE PROVISO GRADE STUDENTS ON HIGH SCHOOL

To give graduating 8th grade pupils of Proviso township necessary information concerning fall enrollment for their freshman year at Proviso High school, C. C. Taggart, assistant superintendent, and Miss Violet Hogan of the English department have been visiting grade schools in recent weeks.

In former years, pupils were asked to select a four year curriculum. Under a new plan, the choice is not made until pupils will have had a year's high school experience.

It is hoped that the new plan will result in a wiser choice of the individual pupil's course of study.

GIRLS TO STAGE FASHION SHOW AT MERCY HIGH

A fashion show will be presented by the girls of Mercy High school at 8 p. m. Friday in the school auditorium, 8135 Indiana av. Models will wear clothes they have made the last year in sewing classes.

Foreign Wars Veterans to Visit Memorial Today

The Veterans of Foreign Wars at 2 o'clock this afternoon will make their annual pilgrimage to the World War memorial at 611 N. Sacramento blvd. donated by Mrs. Julia C. Steven. The national junior champion drum and bugle corps of the 33d Division post will be guard of honor to combat men from the European and South Pacific war theaters, who will be guests.

STUDENTS TELL JUNE HOPES AT CATHOLIC HIGHS

War Will Postpone Plans of Boys

Members of this year's high school graduating classes have lived thru two major cycles in American history. When they entered grammar school in 1933 the country was in the throes of depression. During their freshman year in high school the United States was plunged into World War II.

As a consequence the students who will be graduated during the next two months are on the whole a realistic group. No starry eyed dreamers, they have evolved a more mature philosophy of life than ordinarily would be expected from youth still in their teens.

Typical viewpoints were expressed by outstanding students of west side Catholic high schools who were interview by THE TRIBUNE. They were elected by their classmates from a group of faculty named nominees on the basis of leadership in school activities, academic standing, and character.

Await Military Call

Shortly after commencement many of the young men will be called into military service. Accepting it as a necessary duty, the majority nevertheless plan to continue their preparations for a career after the war, many of them by entering college.

"I know it's going to be hard getting back into the routine of studies, especially since I'll have to be with students younger than myself," said one of the graduates, "but if I want any kind of a professional career I know I'll have to have a college background. I only hope I won't lose my enthusiasm for it before I can get started."

ST. PHILIP

Chosen as outstanding graduate of St. Philip High school, Roy Parenty, 17, 1315 N. Monitor av., was president of the school sodality, a member of the debating team in his junior year, and a feature writer on the newspaper.

He likes chemistry more than any other subject. An honor student, he ranks in the upper 10 per cent of his class. Baseball and basketball are his favorite games. Among his extracurricular activities, dancing is his favorite indoor sport. He likes both swing music and smooth, and Harry James is his favorite orchestra leader.

Altho he won't receive his diploma until May 27, he began his premedical studies at Loyola university in March. He expects to be called into service in November after his 18th birthday, but by that time will have completed the equivalent of a year of college. He hopes to return to Loyola after the war to fit himself to be a doctor, his ambition since he was 12.

ST. MARY'S

During her four years at St. Mary's High school Rose Marie Bergmann, 3145 W. 19th st., senior class president, has been outstanding in scholarship and in sports. Since her freshman year she has been an honor student, and has found her science classes of greatest interest.

During her first two years she was captain of the volleyball team and in her junior and senior years was captain of the basketball quintet. President of the Girls Athletic association, she has won the G. A. A. award for four consecutive years.

As a sophomore she served as prefect of her room sodality. She was junior class president, and last year won the Quill and Scroll award. This year she was sports editor of St. Mary's Herald. She was also chosen delegate to the Chicago Youth conference.

Collecting phonograph records is Miss Bergmann's hobby, her albums containing a wide selection of both classical and contemporary music.

She has chosen nursing as her profession. In September she will enter nurse training at St. Anthony's hospital.

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION

IN ELMHURST

James Cox, 17, Elmhurst, outstanding senior at Immaculate Conception High school in Elmhurst, would like to be either an English teacher or a journalist. He enjoys writing poetry and essays, and hopes after the war to prepare himself for his career by majoring in English in college. He will be 18 in July and subject to war service.

James is prefect of CISCA, a member of Quill and Scroll, and associate editor of the class paper, Eye See. In his sophomore year he was vice president of his class. Reading is his chief hobby, and he finds Shelley, Keats, and other poets of the Romantic period most interesting. Franz Werfel and Kenneth Roberts are his favorite novelists.

His best liked sports are boxing and fishing. In past summers he has gone fishing at Lake Ripley, Wis.

ST. IGNATIUS

During his freshman, sophomore, and junior years at St. Ignatius High school, William Hickey, 241 S. Lavergne av., was president of his home room. He also was chosen senior year president.

An honor student, he ranks English and physics as his best liked subjects. Writing is one of his hobbies, and he has done several articles

The Farragut brass ensemble, composed of Wallace Huebner, Anton Havlik, Geraldine Kunz, and Frank Frish, will play the Strauss novelty "Pizzicato Polka."

Five champion majorettes, Dolores Populi, Merle Scheuld, Lorraine Langush, Lorraine Sefcik, and Gloria Zajicek, will twirl their batons to military songs. Service men in the audience will be honored in a special ceremony.

Her readings included "Peg O' My Heart," and selections in dialect. She also had a leading role in the senior class play," "Threat of Destiny."

Classes will be formed for smaller enrollments if approved by the school office.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 21

Tomato plants, egg plants, and peppers can now be planted without fear from frost. Use husky plants that are growing, not weak, woody ones that have been kept too long in flats, for these take a long time to become established.

Buy only resistant varieties, such as Marglobe, Pritchard, Rutgers, Pan-American, and others. If only a few plants are needed buy pot plants, for they transplant without being checked. Dig the holes large enough to accommodate the roots, place a little plant food in the bottom and stir it with the soil.

Place the plant so that it is neither too high nor too low, altho tomatoes root along the stems. Fill the holes and water afterward, raking a little fine soil over the moist soil. A starter solution may be used. Firm the soil around the plant to bring the roots in direct contact with them.

Tuesday, May 22

Mark the iris as they come into bloom and discard all poor varieties. Transplant old clumps in June or July or after flowering. Use good divisions and plant shallowly about nine inches apart for early mass effects.

The top side of the rhizomes [the part from which the roots grow] may be exposed to the sun or slightly deeper if in sandy soil. The iris is fine for many purposes. Sow vegetable and flower seeds thinly. Plant the essentials and not too many varieties.

Corn, potatoes, and tomatoes should be planted only where there is sufficient space for them. Soak parsley seed a day before sowing but only a few plants are needed.

Wednesday, May 23

Take good care of all fruits. The common elderberry is ornamental and its fruit furnishes fine pies, jelly, and good wine.

Plunge house plants in a sheltered spot in the garden. Those requiring a shady spot may be plunged beside a shed, beneath an overhanging tree or elsewhere.

These plants include ferns, night blooming cereus, Christmas cactus, fancy leaved caladium, some palms, and others, while the date palm, century plant, hibiscus, gardenia, poinsettia, geranium, and others of a similar nature require full sun.

However, plunged plants need examining every day to see that they do not dry out. It is well also to give them an application of plant food once every three weeks.

Thursday, May 24

Beds of geraniums should not be continually watered or they will grow soft. Keep them on the dry side. During the heat of summer keep the philodendron away from the sun's rays or the foliage will turn brown. Keep in subdued light or in a north window where there is abundant light but no sun.

Friday, May 25

Insect pests must be kept under control or the plants will be seriously injured. Eradication by dusting is cleaner than when the wet spray is used and the dust is easy to apply.

Two practices in vegetable growing must be adopted and continued regularly to obtain the high grade materials desired. First, thinning plants and second, cultivating them. Delaying cultivation means weeds.

Saturday, May 26

Gardens that cannot be artificially watered may be mulched when hot weather comes or toward the end of June. Mulching is simply covering the ground between plants with materials like decayed manure, grass clippings, peat, leaves, or anything that will decay.

STUDENTS TELL JUNE HOPES AT CATHOLIC HIGHS

for school publications. He is a member of the Harlequin Dramatic society, vice president of the sodality, and a member of the mission staff and the Monogram club.

Football is his favorite sport. Last season he played full back on the St. Ignatius team. He also served as chairman of the annual football frolic.

Since he will be 18 on Wednesday, military service is imminent. After the war, however, he hopes to attend college. In the meantime, he will try to decide between journalism and medicine as a future career.

PROVIDENCE

Mary Lou Hafner, 18, 4059 Monroe st., has been chosen outstanding senior at Providence High school. She is secretary of sodality and vice president of CISCA. She is also a member of the Debating club, and for two years has been on the winning team in the city-wide tournament sponsored by Loyola academy.

Last year she was president of the school flying club. She has taken much ground work, and eventually hopes to pilot her own plane.

English is her favorite subject, with Latin a close second. Milton is her favorite author. Being a Latin major, she find that she is able to get a great deal from his classical allusions, and finds his work more "exalted" than that of most contemporary poets.

Miss Hafner plans to attend college in the fall. Eventually she would like to do radio work.

ST. MEL

John Culleeney, 17, 213 N. Kolin av., is a colonel in the St. Mel R. O. T. C. He won THE TRIBUNE R. O. T. C. medal for four consecutive years. In his sophomore year he was awarded the American Legion medal, and also has won a medal for personal neatness.

This summer he plans to enlist in the navy, but as soon as his service is over he will begin his studies at St. Mary's college, Winona, Minn., where he will take a pre-legal course.

John is vice president of the senior class. His high academic rating has won him membership in the National Honor society. He also belongs to the Officers' club and is a member of the R. O. T. C. Chaplain corps. The high point in his high school career came last Feb. 23 when he was promoted to colonel. "It's an honor I appreciated because I had to work hard for it," he says.

English, history, and religion are his favorite subjects. He also enjoys debating, and hopes that the experience he has had in it will be useful to him when he is pleading his clients' cases later on.

SACRED HEART IN LISLE

Gloria Lorenzi, 18, 1540 S. Kilbourne av., is prefect of the sodality at Sacred Heart academy. In her junior year she was class treasurer, and for four years she has made the All-Stars, leading basketball team.

She is a soprano in the school chorus. Her foremost interest is dramatics. She has been taking speech lessons for the last four years. In April she took part in a dramatic recital, reading the "White Cliffs of Dover."

She enjoys English literature more than any other study, and is particularly interested in the Renaissance period. In keeping with her dramtic interests, Shakespeare is her favorite author.

After commencement she plans to attend De Paul university's school of speech. Her studies there, she hopes, will help her to fulfill her ambition to become a radio actress.

NAZARETH IN LA GRANGE

Lorraine Martini, Berwyn, ranks drama as her chief extracurricular interest. She enacted the role of Our Lady of Lourdes in the senior play, "Song of Bernadette," and also had a leading part in the Lenten drama, "World Without End."

An honor student, she is a member of the Dramatic Art club and the Glee club. After graduation she plans to enter nurse training, a career she decided upon when she served as a nurses' aid during her sophomore year.

TRINITY IN RIVER FOREST

Ranking fifth in a class of 168 at Trinity High school, Marilyn McNamara, 838 Columbia av., Oak Park, has been awarded a scholarship to Rosary college on the basis of her high academic standing. President of the Trinity High School Music club, she has been taking piano lessons for the last six years.

French and mathematics are her best liked subjects. She is also fond of sports, plays basketball and volleyball, and is a member of the T club. Horseback riding is her hobby. Marilyn was vice president of the sophomore class and this year served as prom chairman.

ST. PROCOPIUS IN LISLE

Edward Prieboy, East Chicago, has made an outstanding record in sports as well as in studies during his four years at St. Procopius' academy. An honor student, he has served as captain of the baseball, football, and basketball teams. He was also president of his class for the last three years.

During the summer months he has played American Legion baseball on the team which won the Indiana state championship for 1944-'45. After graduation he will play minor league baseball in Indianapolis, Ind. Since he will not be 18 until December, he will be able to complete the season. When called into active service he plans to join the navy.

FENWICK IN OAK PARK

Highest ranking student in a class of 67, James Wilson, 17, La Grange, is a member of the National Honor society, president of the Fenwick Senior Science club, and a member of the debating team which won first place in the Catholic league tournament.

James was also editor of the student newspaper, Wick, which won all-American honors under his leadership. On June 11, the day after graduation, he will enter the navy. After the war, however, he plans to attend college, taking courses which will fit him for a legal career.

RESURRECTION

A consistently high ranking student at Resurrection High school, Rosalie Maslowski, 17, Berwyn, has been awarded an honor scholarship to Illinois college, Jacksonville.

Editor of the Resurrection newspaper and yearbook, she recently had a poem published in Scholastic magazine. She hopes to develop her writing ability further in college, where she will study journalism.

Elected popularity queen on St. Patrick's day, Miss Maslowski is active in extracurricular affairs. She was a member of the sodality and the literary club and chairman of the social committee.

GRADUATE 245 FROM RIVERSIDE, BROOKFIELD HIGH

Of the 288 boys and girls who enrolled in the freshman class of 1941 at Riverside-Brookfield High school, 245 will be graduated May 29. The small net loss of 15 per cent for the war time class, largest in the school's history, has resulted from the acceleration program which has permitted boys to be graduated at 17 instead of the normal age of 18.

Twelve Are in College

The school has conducted nine week summer schools to enable students to gain 1⅓ credits toward graduation. Attendance at two or three summer sessions has permitted students to graduate in three years with the full 16 units of credit. Thus students have had an opportunity to go to college for a year before entering the service. Supt. I. E. Haebich has seen to it that those being called to service have had an opportunity to qualify for diplomas before leaving school.

Twenty-eight seniors now in service will have their names read on commencement night and receive their diplomas thru their parents. Twelve now in college will get diplomas.

Baccalaureate services for the class of 1945 will be held next Sunday night with the Rev. Wilfred Wakefield of the Brookfield Congregational church preaching. Assisting pastors will be the Rev. John L. Cheek of the Brookfield Methodist church, the Rev. R. B. Grobb of the Riverside Episcopal church, and the Rev. Morrison C. Galloway of the Riverside Methodist church. There will be music by the school orchestra directed by Hubert Edquist and by the mixed chorus directed by Miss Alice Brainerd.

At class day exercises on the afternoon of May 28, Dick Pearson, vice president, will direct the pledge of allegiance as he has at school assemblies. James Olsen, class president, will give the address of welcome. There will be talks by Richard Tippet, salutatorian, and by Dorothy Adams, valedictorian. Vera Kratky will pay homage to members of the class now in service.

Will Accept Senior Gift

William Leonard, president of the junior class, will accept the senior class gift. Betty Marsh will present the Sharclub award. Taking part in the musical program are Barbara Coons, Shirley Wright, Ruth Baker, Barbara Green, Barbara Swikard, Lorraine Coloncino, and Lawrence Whitney. In the evening, a class dinner will be held at the Riverside Episcopal church.

Dorothy Adams, valedictorian, has a scholarship at Cornell college, Mount Vernon, Ia., where she plans to take the liberal arts course. Richard Tippet, salutatorian, who has not yet chosen his college but plans to major in the classics, is awaiting his service call. He will be 18 in August. Both Dorothy and Richard graduates of Gross school in Brookfield.

Dr. Clark Kuebler, president of Ripon [Wis.] college, will give the commencement address May 29. Dr. Paul Turner, pastor of the Riverside Presbyterian church, will give the invocation and benediction. Gloria Cipra, playing the cello, will be accompanied by Dawn Slaby at the piano, and there will be selections by the orchestra and girls ensemble. Supt. Haebich will present the class and Irvin A. Busse, president of the board of education, will award diplomas.

Riverside-Brookfield High Officers

Honor Society

YANKBROADCAST FROM OKINAWA IS FLEA CIRCUS

BY LARRY WOLTERS

When you hear a short wave pickup relayed from Okinawa by way of Meet Your Navy or the Army hour have you ever wondered how much work and danger may go into the making of such a broadcast? A letter has reached this desk from Lt. Bruce Dennis, on military leave from W-G-N's staff, giving some idea of what goes into these programs.

"Our broadcasting studio occupies a former chartroom high on the flying bridge of our ship," he begins, "with just room for the commentator and program officer [which is what I'm known as]. We've crowded as many as eight people in here. Both Adm. Turner and Gen. Buckner have broadcast from our studio and once they were on together in a special army day program. I made my network debut as an announcer on this show which was taken by all four networks.

Plenty of Excitement

"Have had plenty of excitement, especially during the Kamikaze suicide raids. Several have been shot down not far away. We had a navy flyer up here one night waiting to be interviewed by Bud Foster when all the guns cut loose. He said he'd rather get out of here and stick to his Corsair where it was safe!"

Lt. Dennis told of spending two nights on the island to do a broadcast from a captured Japanese cave, with the aid of Joe Hainline of NBC.

A Shrine in Cave

"The cave had been an Okinawa shrine. We reached the cave mouth, picked ourselves up after being floored by the sour smell welling from it, and slipped down a flight of stone steps to the main room. In its center was a wooden shrine that looked like a highboy with steplike shelves leading up to the cabinet where the idol was kept.

"American field artillery near-by kept cannonading away at the Japs and gave us sound effects. The broadcast was set for early next morning so we decided to remain in the cave overnight along with some shell shocked GIs taken from the front lines. Some more soldiers ducked in because an air raid alert was sounded. One was named Gustafson and he came from Genoa, Ill.

Ack-ack fire caused every one to flatten to the floor of the cave, Lt. Dennis said. Every one kept away from the opening of the cave except the bats which were silhouetted by the bright light of a paper moon.

After more gunfire there came "a sudden, rending, tearing crash, then utter silence."

"A sentry showing up at the mouth of the cave announced laconically: 'They got him!'

Close Shave for GI

"It was agreed that if the guy in the foxhole got the pistol that was O. K. One wing of the plane had torn thru the pup tent a doughboy had over his foxhole. He was awakened rudely but was unhurt.

"The broadcast went on soon after daylight with Joe sticking to the previously censored script that had suddenly grown dull to us. But Joe didn't care. He got a clip of machine gun bullets from the Zero. [So did I.]

"What bothered us were the flea bites. The Okinawa flea is a jet propelled job that covers an amazing lot of territory in a short time and he is accompanied by four motored mosquitos which snap at any uncovered part.

"So anyway, that's the way American broadcasting came to Okinawa."

HONOR SENIORS THIS WEEK AT DOWNERS GROVE

216 Will Get Diplomas Thursday Night

Commencement exercises for the war time senior class at Downers Grove High school will be held Thursday night in the school gymnasium. At a recent cap and gown program for the 216 graduates, Principal C. W. Johnson said he was mindful that their studies had been pursued at a time when the world was being shaken by historic events but, regardless of the period, the opportunity always existed for students in the class room to stick to fundamentals that endure.

During the 12 years since the boys and girls, now seniors, had started their schooling, the chill of depression had hovered over many homes. High wages had been ushered in with the war. The graduates were told to retain their balance and consider their worth on a basis that does not depend on fluctuating economic conditions.

Will Pass Down Spoon

Following tradition, Jack Campbell, president of the senior class, handed down the big wooden spoon to the junior class president, Lawrence Andersen. The spoon now has on it the carvings of class dates of the past 20 years.

"Your Job in a Brave New World," will be the topic of the commencement address by Dr. Alfred P. Haake. Presentation of the art scholarship will be made by Mrs. M. D. Abercrombie for the Downers Grove Woman's club, and William E. Hooper will present the historical prizes in behalf of Alexander Bradley Burns post of the American Legion.

There will be music by the high school band and the a cappella chorus. Supt. George E. De Wolf will present the class, and L. L. Phelps, president of the board of education, will award diplomas. Invocation and benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. Harry A. Turner of the Downers Grove Presbyterian church.

Fighters to Get Diplomas

Service men to receive diplomas in absentia are George Drew, Dan Conrad, James Heberling, George Sterka, James McGarvie, Harley Stull, and Charles Nagel.

The Rev. W. H. Sinclair, pastor of the First Baptist church, will preach the baccalaureate sermon at services at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the high school auditorium. Assisting pastors will be the Rev. Hugh McWhorter of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, the Rev. H. K. Taylor of the First Methodist church, and the Rev. Willard A. Giese of the First Evangelical church.

Class night, at which a dance will be sponsored by parents of the graduates, will be held tomorrow night.

Church Forum to Hear Talk by Judge Braude

"Juvenile or Parental Delinquency, Which Is It?" will be the subject of a talk by Judge Braude of the Municipal court at an open forum of First Congregation church, Ashland and Washington blvds., at 8 p. m. Wednesday. The forum, sponsored by the Men's club, is one of a series on current social problems.

10,000 CADETS OF CHICAGO TO PARADE FRIDAY

30 R.O.T.C. Units to March at Noon

To the stirring cadence of staccato drum beats and resounding bugle tones, more than 10,000 khaki clad youths of Chicago's high schools will march thru an avenue of flags from Balbo dr. onto Michigan av. Friday noon, in the 10th annual parade of the nation's largest R. O. T. C. command. Insignia on the sleeves of their olive drab and blue uniforms will signify the participation of 29 public schools and one parochial school in the city-wide event.

Past military, school, and civic dignitaries in the reviewing stand at the Congress st. plaza, and north on a boulevard lined with thousands of applauding parents and other spectators, the colorful parade will proceed up Michigan av. to Randolph and Lake sts. Heading the columns of cadets will be Col. Richard E. Kutz, Waller High school senior, and members of his city corps staff.

Others on City Staff

Northwest area schools are represented on the city staff by Maj. Andrew J. Pach of Foreman High school. Members of the staff were chosen by competitive examination last March.

Colors awarded by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will be borne by the two units, as yet unnamed, which are ranked first and second by officers who have conducted a two week inspection. The American flags and school banners will be presented after a brief speech by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, at Balbo dr. preceding the parade.

Top Units Will Lead

First place in the parade will be taken by these two top ranking units, with St. Mel High school cadets in third place unless they rank first or second. Organized as a separate unit, the parochial school regiment will be a guest of the 3,687th service command unit, to which all Chicago public school R. O. T. C. groups belong.

Pending announcement of the inspection officers' decision, northwest area units are scheduled to march in this order: Roosevelt, Von Steuben, Taft, Schurz, Lane Technical, Foreman, and Steinmetz. R. O. T. C. instructors will march with their units.

Will Wear New Medals

With the poise and efficiency resulting from military discipline, the cadets will display regimental coordination achieved thru long and diligent drill. Many of them will wear medals recently awarded by the R. O. T. C. department, THE TRIBUNE, and various patriotic organizations for outstanding participation in unit activities.

Among military officials in the reviewing stand will be Col. Joseph E. Torrence, commanding officer of the 3d district of the 6th service command; Lt. Col. Lewis C. Gordon, director of the army specialized training division of this service command; Maj. Doris Epperson, WAC director for the 6th service command; Comdr. P. G. Pettersen, commandant of the Chicago coast guard base; Capt. B. B. Wygant, commandant of the midshipman's training school in Abbott hall, and Lt. Col. Michiel Dobervich, executive officer of the central procurement division of the marine corps.

Educators Will Attend

School administrators present will include President McCahey of the school board; George F. Cassell, assistant superintendent of public schools; the Very Rev. D. F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools; Brother James Luke, director of St. Mel High school; Philip L. McNamee, director of war production training with the board of education, and district school superintendents and high school principals.

R. O. T. C. executives in the group will be Lt. Col. Oscar N. Taylor, professor of military science and tactics for Chicago public schools; Maj. John F. Gardiner, military professor at St. Mel, and Maj. Frank L. Beals, R. O. T. C. administrator for the board of education. Mayor Kelly also will be present.

Started Units in 1917

For the public, the R. O. T. C. parade, sponsored annually by the board of education in coöperation with THE TRIBUNE, provides an opportunity for observing and judging accomplishments of the organization which has been called "the backbone of order and discipline in Chicago high schools." Military training was introduced into Chicago public schools in 1917, largely thru efforts of THE TRIBUNE, and since 1919 has been under the national R. O. T. C. program.

Four northwest area high schools—Schurz, Lane Technical, Foreman, and Steinmetz—were visited by 6th service command officers last week in the closing days of the all-city federal inspection. Presentation of awards to outstanding cadets was included in the ceremony at each school.

List Winners at Schurz

Schurz cadets who received awards were:

Department medals—Capt. Harold Wingfield, officer's efficiency; Master Sgt. Henry Polomski, noncommissioned officer's efficiency; Sgt. Robert Vandenbusche, band efficiency; Richard Dunham, Frank Deloncker, Arthur Pries, and Donald Bosch, neatness, and Capt. Peter DeFranco, marksmanship.

STUDENTS TELL JUNE HOPES AT CATHOLIC HIGHS

War Will Postpone Plans of Boys

Boys and girls being graduated this June from northwest side Catholic high schools believe the "bright new world" they've been hearing about since they were first graders in 1933 isn't going to be so bright after all. They fear a recurrence of the depression and they also fear another war.

The students who expressed these opinions were selected as spokesmen for leadership and scholastic achievement by their classmates in 10 northwest Catholic high schools. They had been nominated for the honor by their faculties.

Base Outcome on Conference

The brightness of the promises for the new world, they reason, depends on the outcome of the San Francisco conference, and they are frankly skeptical of its success and they mistrust Russia, altho according her generous credit for her part in the European victory.

The war, they believe, has given them more religious and racial tolerance because it has highlighted and even increased some of the religious and racial problems. They also feel much of the responsibility for rehabilitation rests with them, a burden they plan to assume by getting a college education directed toward assisting in social and economic reconstruction here and abroad.

HOLY FAMILY

One of those students planning a career in a foreign country in the post-war rehabilitation period is Florence Wrzesien, 17, president of the senior class at Holy Family. Florence, daughter of Mrs. Angeline Wrzesien, 846 N. Maplewood av., plans to enroll in De Paul university with the ambition of becoming a laboratory technician in Poland. On the honor roll all four years in high school, she ranks third scholastically in her graduating class. She was also on the staff of the newspaper, a member of the Glee club and Dramatic club, and took part in the senior play.

HOLY TRINITY

Altho the army has mapped his career at present, Leonard M. Pandera, honor student at Holy Trinity, has planned a future as a chemical engineer in the post-war world. He plans to enroll at De Paul university as soon as Uncle Sam permits. When not scratching his head over his mathematics, his favorite subject, Leonard is playing basketball. He was a guard on the varsity and was awarded a trophy last year as the most valuable player. He has two brothers in service, Julius, seaman 1st class, in the South Pacific, and Pvt. Mitchell, in Germany. Leonard lives with his sister, Mrs. Bernard Wojcik, 2943 N. Ridgeway avenue.

WEBER

Another who believes that the demand for engineers to rebuild Europe will be great is Casimir Koziol, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Koziol, 1008 N. Wolcott av. Altho he expects to be in khaki shortly after graduation, he has decided to become an electrical engineer as soon as the Japs are finished off.

An honor student for four years, Koziol was also a member of the student council, editor of the yearbook, co-editor of the newspaper, and member of the French and Glee clubs and the social committee. He was on the Catholic all-star basketball team this year. If math isn't his hobby, he thinks stamp collecting is.

NOTRE DAME

Mildred Herzog, 17, president of the senior class and student council at Notre Dame, prefers to do her part in bettering the post-war world right here in Chicago. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Herzog, 1043 N. Kedvale av., she intends to enroll at De Paul university this fall to major in sociology. Social work among the Negroes here is her aim. Mildred was captain of the basketball team for four years and is a member of the National Honor society.

DE PAUL

John Chrystal, son of John F. Chrystal, 3428 Hirsch st., is a little more fortunate than the other two engineer aspirants. Only 17, John, while awaiting greetings from Uncle Sam, will have time for two semesters in engineering. He hasn't decided whether he will attend Notre Dame university or Illinois Institute of Technology. A stamp collection started when he was 10, introduced John to geography. He hopes that his engineering career—if not the army—will enable him personally to check up on the geography.

An honor student, he has participated in intramural track, baseball, football, and basketball. He is a member of the Chemistry, Engineering, Camera, and Glee clubs, and is a columnist on the newspaper. Outside of school he plays on the C. Y. O. basketball team.

ALVERNIA

To Phyllis Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace, 2538 Marmora av., rebuilding bodies and minds is the basis for post-war reconstruction on a national scale. She has joined the cadet nurse corps and will start classes on July

Fighters' Dads Eager to Buy New GI Bonds

Workers in two more northwest side plants joined the ever growing parade of the Dad to GI Joe clubs last week as the mighty 7th war bond drive swung into high gear.

George Frank Kupel, 20 N. Waller av., father of three sons in service, was named chairman of the Douglas Dad to GI Joe Bond club, and stated that the response among the plant employes was so great the club was expected to be broken down into unit organizations.

Is Family Ritual

Kupel, who has been with the Douglas Aircraft company two years, asserted, "It has long been a ritual of my family to give our sons a bond at Christmas time. I think the Dad to GI Joe plan is a fine movement for the boys deserve it. We should do all we can to help the fighting men in the Pacific. We may think we are working hard but it's nothing compared to what those men are doing."

Kupel's sons are Gerald D., torpedo man's mate 2d class, who recently was home on leave from the Southwest Pacific and purchased a $1,000 war bond at the plant when his father bought bonds for each of his sons; Pvt. Richard E., stationed with the army in Greenland, and Vernon T., yeoman 1st class, in the Atlantic.

A. H. [Hank] Linder, 2913 N. Burling st., plant materials expediter and manager of the Stewart-Warner orchestra, has been selected as chairman of the GI Dads club at Stewart-Warner corporation plant. Every bond purchased by Linder since the first war loan drive lists his son, Alfred, apprentice seaman now en route from Great Lakes to a new base, as co-owner.

Encourages Co-ownership

Linder stated that the organization's purpose would be to bring fathers of service men and women together and to back the sons and daughters with bonds purchased in their names. The club also will encourage the co-ownership plan. William Eichhorn, 2143 Melrose st., is vice president. His son, Leroy, able seaman in the merchant marine, has served in both the Pacific and Atlantic, and receives bonds on his birthdays and at Christmas.

Stewart-Warner employes achieved 170 per cent of their $900,000 goal in the first week of the current drive.

Albany Park Hebrew congregation, 4601 N. Lawndale av., will sponsor the first of its bond rallies in the present drive Tuesday night with a program of entertainment by service men. Admission will be a $100 war bond. More than 1,500 are expected to attend.

Will Give D-day Story

Al Stine, chief boatswain mate in the coast guard, will tell his experiences on Normandy beach on D-day. A decorated war hero, Stine has purchased his limit of E bonds. Cecil Leeson, musician's mate 2d class stationed at Navy pier, will participate in the program. Pvt. Michael Stewart of Fort Sheridan will sing. Joe Rezits will accompany Stewart and Leeson. Jess Olson, magician, also will give a performance.

Dad to GI Joe bond chairmen who were appointed last week by their community chairmen are:

Belmont-Cragin-Hanson Park—Bernard C. Fromm, 433 Parker av., who has purchased a bond for his son, Warren C., motor machinist

GI Meets Ann in Foxhole; We Have a Story

BY NORMALEE RUGAN

The GIs found her in a foxhole. They thought they had seen everything on Anguar Island in the Pacific but this was most extraordinary. After all Corp. Robert H. Hanson, former Austin Y resident, said to himself, "You just don't find French dolls wandering around out here, let alone finding one in a muddy foxhole.

Hanson wanted to claim her for his own. But this brought decided complications as another GI claimed he had found her first. They didn't fight over her. Like gentlemen they orally agreed a price would have to be paid. For days the corporal, when he wasn't fighting, looked in awe at her. She had beautifully fine French hair, an elaborate flower crepe gown—a bit spotted from the mud of the foxhole, but nevertheless still beautiful—exquisite handmade flowers which decorated the dress, well made green satin shoes, and delicately molded, long, crepe de chine fingers.

Boys Come to Terms

He called her Anguar Ann. At last terms of surrender were agreed on. Hanson must forfeit all of the chocolate bars from his K rations. For days the corporal went without his chocolate. But he didn't mind if it meant he could claim full ownership of Anguar Ann.

Hanson had a reason for paying such a high price for Anguar Ann. His sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Hanson, a housewife of Itasca, is a collector of dolls from all over the world. He was certain she did not have one like Anguar Ann, just out of a foxhole in the Palau Islands.

After passing field intelligence inspection she made the five week trip to the United States. Her accommodations? A K ration box, whose prized chocolate Hanson never tasted. Anguar Ann, prize of war, now shares a home with 250 other dolls. Her 24 inches are rather grotesque compared to the others. Especially beside a pair of Mexican dressed fleas which reside in a walnut shell.

She Also Sells Dolls

Mrs. Hanson not only collects dolls but designs them. Her favorites are character dolls representing figures from fairy tale and nursery rhyme books for children.

A few in the group include the Queen of Hearts, Little Black Sambo, Heidi, Alice in Wonderland, an Irishman, a sailor, and an angel. The majority of the dolls she designs have heads of treated felt in a natural skin tone color.

A few of the dolls are made of discarded stockings in bright colors. Facial features are achieved by needlework rather than paint in this type.

Hula Doll Also Sent

Another doll Corp. Hanson sent to his sister-in-law is a 10 inch hula doll made of a pressed woven coconut fiber. The skirt and lei are made of a shredded reed material dyed pink, yellow, and blue. She wears a halo of tiny white sea shells around her head. Oddest in her group of island dolls is the sacred figure of Tjili which dominates all forms of art, worship, fertility, and good fortune in Bali in the Netherland Indies. The native women carry this doll of braided reed with large fan shape head dress as a token when they go to pray at the temple.

Outstanding in the collection is a group of Guatemalan peddler dolls [complete with the wares they sell] and three Mexican dolls engaged in a bull fight. The costumes of the latter figures, which are about 4 inches high, are exquisitely made of silk and fine needlework. Even the bull fighter's jacket, about the size of a human thumb nail, is lined.

Some Nearly Century Old

Mrs. Hanson's oldest dolls date back to the 1850s. The heads in this group are nearly all of bisque and chinaware. She has renovated the bodies and costumes. One, however, an old French lady who holds small steel knitting needles, is dressed in her original costume. "Her dress is priceless; it would be a shame not to keep her as she is," Mrs. Hanson said. The lavender plaid taffeta skirt, which is torn in several places, and the plum colored velvet jacket were made from very expensive materials, she said. The blouse is trimmed with genuine val lace.

In her name group Mrs. Hanson has dolls made by the late Mme. Lanci, famous dollmaker of Italy, and Norah Wellings, equally famous as an English dollmaker.

Home on rotation, she will be reassigned to postal units in this country at the completion of her 45 day furlough.

Among the WAC serving in the Philippines is Dolores F. Fitzgerald, recently promoted to technician 4th grade. Daughter of John A. Fitzgerald, 2413 Cortland st., she was a staff member of the Chicago library before enlisting in April, 1943. She celebrated her first anniversary of overseas service this month as one of the initial WAC contingent which landed in Australia in May, 1944. Since then she has been stationed in New Guinea and the Philippines.

GI LONG ON TALK OUT OF BULLETS BUT NABS NAZIS

Pvt. Carl DeMarchi, 1640 N. California av., broke up a little reunion of some 30 Nazis on the western front, but evened the score by effecting another behind an allied prisoner of war enclosure.

DeMarchi was searching a house somewhere in Germany when he surprised some Germans waiting for some one and he obviously wasn't the one. DeMarchi, short on ammunition but long on talk, persuaded the officer to surrender. The other Nazis just filed out, piling their guns and helmets at the door, DeMarchi said.

Shortly thereafter, a German truck rolled up to the house to pick up friends. DeMarchi with some reinforcements discouraged the driver from a longer career in the German army.

ARMY CONDUCTS JEWISH SERVICE IN TROLLEY CAR

An abandoned trolley was the setting for the first Jewish services to be conducted openly in Neuss, Germany, since the war. Capt. Jacob M. Ott, 3546 Montrose av., Jewish chaplain, set up the altar on the motorman's platform, with the flag of the Star of David waving from the roof.

His congregation in the trolley synagog, wearing purple and white prayer shawls, sat in seats normally occupied by Nazi workers commuting to the nationalized factories. A crowd of curious gathered outside.

The car was located on Adolf Hitler strasse. A slogan boldly splashed in white on the side proclaimed: "Fuehrer und volk sind eins" [The leader and people are one"].

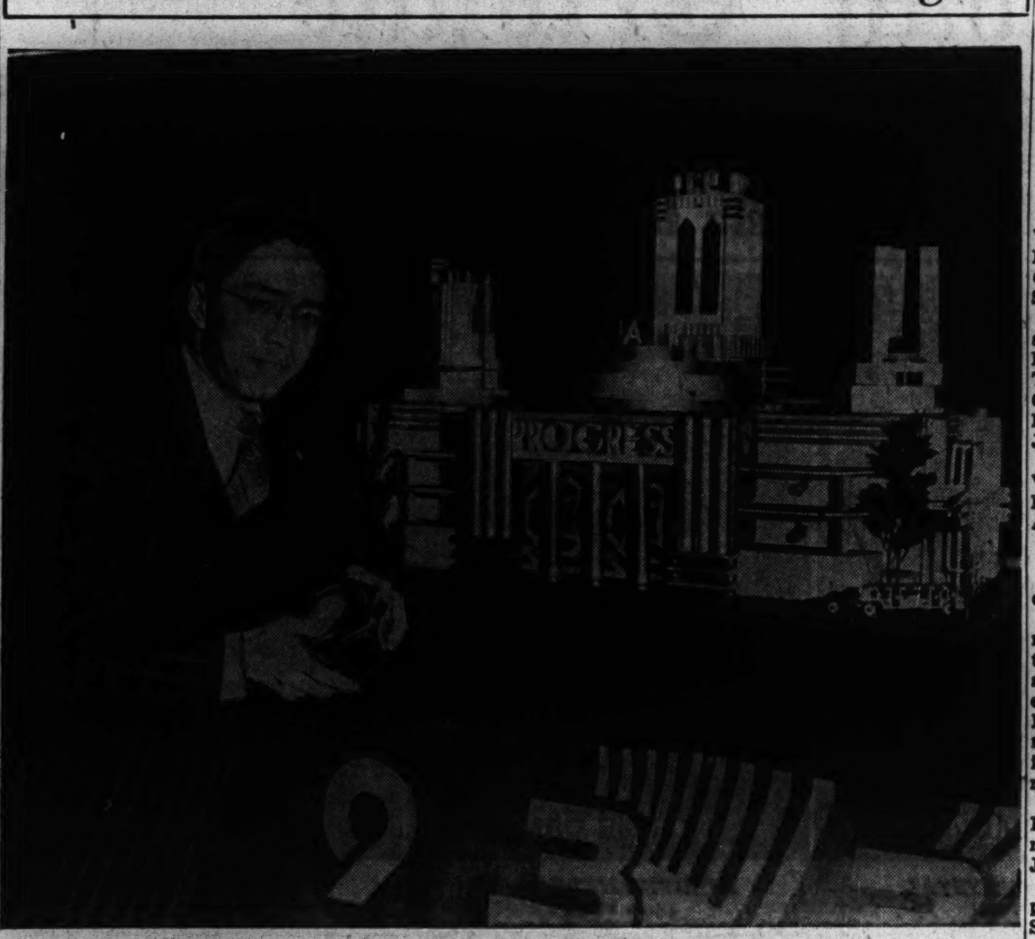
Miniature World's Fair Creates Nostalgia



For Silas A. Fung, 5719 Eastwood av., memories of the Century of Progress exhibition in 1933 have taken a tangible form. For more than 10 years Fung has collected souvenirs from the fair, and he now owns 450 items. His fair building is made of materials gathered from 39 major structures, and incorporates many architectural features of those buildings. Fung holds a giant nut, taken from the Skyride, which was presented to him by one of the fair's directors.

CHICAGO'S FAIR STILL LIVES FOR ONE ATTENDANT

Days of '30s Recalled by 450 Items

Remember the Avenue of Flags at A Century of Progress in 1933 and 1934? Remember the Hall of Science, the skyride, the Llama temple, and the Streets of Paris?

For Silas H. Fung, 5719 Eastwood av., the fair is more than just a memory. It has become a hobby which will last a lifetime. For Mr. Fung collects souvenirs from the fair. He's been collecting them for more than 10 years, and it begins to look like he'll be collecting them for the rest of his life. He believes his is the largest, if not the only, such collection in existence.

Employed at Fair

For several months during the fair Mr. Fung was employed in the Chinese pavilion. The grounds and their colorful buildings held a sentimental attachment for him. When he read the news of plans for wrecking the exhibits he decided to collect souvenirs from each of the buildings. His collection now includes 450 items from 47 major structures and 13 villages of the fair.

The 100-odd trips Mr. Fung made to the grounds during the wrecking operations in 1935 didn't terminate his work. It was then that he accumulated bits of building materials from each of the main exhibit halls and from the villages. Hardly a month has passed in the decade since that he hasn't added some new piece to his collection.

Basement Houses Exhibit

The entire basement of the Fung bungalow is given over to the exhibit. Mr. Fung, a commercial artist, has built modernistic exhibition cases, much in the style used thruout the fair. In these are displayed such items as a portion of the seal from the Illinois Host building, the top of a flag pole and a bit of one of the red flags from the Avenue of Flags, dozens of photostatic copies of letters from fair officials commending Mr. Fung on his exhibit, and a plaster turtle from the Mayan temple.

The front door to his exhibit hall holds the glass panel originally in the offices of the Century of Progress corporation. A six foot window blind which covers his shelf of books on the fair came from the administration building. One of the chairs in his tiny auditorium originally was used by the board of directors at the fair.

Prizes Miniature Building

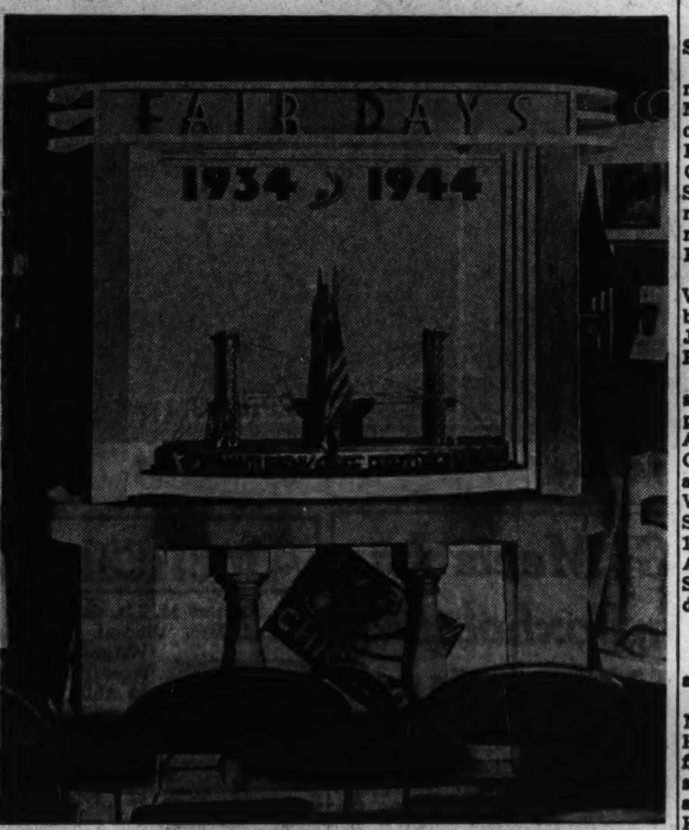
Principal exhibit of the collection is the miniature building which is a composite in style and materials of 39 different structures at the fair. In it are boards from the Illinois Host building, the Hall of Science, and the Hall of Religion. Its glass windows came from the Belgian village and its floor was originally in the Wings of the Century building.

Even the tiny trees and flowers surrounding the miniature building came from the fair. Mr. Fung had six artificial tulips, from the horticultural exhibit. He took these to an artisan friend who made three dozen miniature tulips out of four of the originals. Trees came from the pressed artificial hedges surrounding the Hawaiian village. The curtain which shields this building from view originally flew over the Moroccan village.

One of Mr. Fung's most prized items is a huge steel nut, once part of the skyride. When the skyride was wrecked the nuts were polished and fixed with memorial plates, for presentation to the fair's directors. One of the directors gave his to Mr. Fung.

More than 500 Visitors

Many of the items in the collection have been contributed by interested friends and acquaintances. Others, secured during the wrecking operations, Mr. Fung bought for as little as 5 cents, or as much as $5. He supposed the collection was as complete as he could make it several years ago, but he keeps adding to it, and wonders now if it isn't an endless job.



When Fung is not entertaining guests with a movie of the Century of Progress, the screen in his tiny auditorium holds a miniature of the Skyride. Pillars supporting it came from the Colonial village. The lettering, 1934-1944, was placed above the screen last year to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the closing of the fair. Surrounding the screen are display panels where Fung keeps his collection of souvenirs.

HONOR RETIRING SCHURZ LEADER SATURDAY NIGHT

Dinner Guests to Include Early Students

A. G. Bauersfeld

About 25 men who left Chicago between 1913 and 1915 in straw katies and bow ties for teaching positions in Puerto Rico after training with Albert G. Bauersfeld will be among 200 banquet guests at the Georgian hotel in Evanston Saturday night to honor Bauersfeld on his retirement after 45 years as a teacher.

The spectacled and genial Bauersfeld, whose quick wit and appearance belie his 64 years, has been principal of Carl Schurz High school for the last six years. When he trained the young men for the Puerto Rican enterprise, he was teacher of pattern making and carpentry at Lane Technical High school.

His Boys Still Teaching

Many of his boys, graduates of Lane who left to teach industrial arts, still are teaching. Two of them, Victor Crown and Clarence Garasha, are teachers at Schurz, and two are school principals, Albert Goodrich at Irving Park school and Arthur Uhlir at Foster school.

If you want to chat with Bauersfeld these days, you must catch him some time between his dual role as principal and student. He's back on the taking end of classes, studying Spanish at Schurz, preparatory to settling later in Mexico.

"And I'm not the star of the class," he admitted. "I think the rest of the class just puts in some extra licks to show me up. At least that's the way my teacher consoles me."

Gets Highest Grade

However, he thinks he slipped up on the class recently when he got the highest grade on a test. He missed a perfect score because he omitted an "s" from a word ending.

Altho a grammar school teacher just about had him talked into a teaching career, young Bauersfeld, after his graduation from Chicago Normal school, decided to take a shot at a fortune in the business world. Full of ambition, he worked in a department store at $5 a week for eight months, then lost interest when he discovered old timers were getting only $30 a week.

"First Day" Was Tough

His first teaching position was at McCosh elementary school, in charge of manual training, and his career almost ended the day it began. He was so scared when he faced the class he thought he'd have to go home to recover. But he stayed, and he's proud of his record of never being absent because of illness in his 45 year teaching career.

A visitor at Schurz High school is a welcome excuse for Bauersfeld to take another look at his pet classrooms and the improvements installed since he took over in 1939. Under his direction the new library was decorated with murals painted by the late Gustav Brand, the new social room furnished, the music room, domestic science departments, and shops improved and enlarged, and the new commercial art room readied for dedication this month.

Has Held Many Posts

Bauersfeld has other accomplishments. He was director of technical work in Chicago high schools from 1918 to 1932, supervisor of manual training in grade school at Stout Institute in Wisconsin, president of the Illinois Manual Arts association in 1915, and secretary of the Vocational Education association of the middle west from 1914 to 1921 and president in 1922.

Bauersfeld's hobby is evident on entering his office. His desk is usually adorned with flowers grown at his home in Elmhurst. On retiring to Mexico, he intends to get a job. "I've had a position long enough," he winked.

RALLIES SERIES WILL HONOR GIRL SCOUT FOUNDER

Friends Invited to View Handicraft Work

In commemoration of their Juliette Low World Friendship fund, honoring their founder, northwest side Girl Scouts have scheduled a series of rallies to which parents and friends have been invited to witness the songs, games, and dances of foreign lands and view handicraft work.

Independence and Irving park Scouts will hold their rally from 3 to 5 p. m. today at Independence park fieldhouse with 12 troops composed of 300 girls participating. Theme of the rally, Miss Winnifred Wood, program chairman, stated, will be lullabies of foreign lands. Betty Jane Decker will act as narrator.

Portage Park Rally May 28.

In Portage park the rally will be staged at 7:30 p. m. May 28 at Wilson park fieldhouse with 250 girls participating. A series of five tableaus depicting various phases of Girl Scouting and international dances and games will be presented, Miss Tina Brown, chairman, said.

The Ked-Law-Mont group, which includes part of Albany Park, also will present its entertainment at 7:30 p. m., May 28, at the community center, 4410 N. Troy st. Mrs. A. J. Hausman, chairman, said the program will include a series of tableaus on international friendship. About 150 girls in five troops will participate.

Give Penny for Each Year.

The rest of the Albany Park group will hold its rally at 2 p. m. June 10 at American Legion hall, Kedzie and Leland avs., Mrs. Zelda Fryer, chairman, said.

Girl Scouts contribute a penny for each year of their age to the fund maintained in honor of the organization's founder. Contributions provide support for an orphanage at Koloshan, China; food and clothes for war refugees, milk for Russian children, and medicine for Greek, French, and British war victims.

Two North Park College Seniors to Give Recitals

Harriet Myers, organist, and Dorothy Kurth, contralto, will present their senior recitals at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the college auditorium at North Park college. Miss Myers is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Myers, 3940 Dakin st. and Miss Kurth's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Erwin C. Kurth, 2047 Iowa st. Miss Kurth will be accompanied by Lenore Reeves.

Scouts to Hold District Events Next Week-End

Cub and Boy Scouts of the northwest district are completing plans for participation in two district events this week. Cubs will take part in the annual district show at Lafayette park Friday and Scouts from Humboldt Park community will attend a week-end camporee at Camp Fort Dearborn Saturday and next Sunday.

The cub show is sponsored by the northwest district cub leaders round table with Harvey Schoeman, 4017 Potomac av., in charge. About 20 packs will participate, presenting musical numbers, serious sketches, and comedy stunts.

Plan Scout Camporee

Master of ceremonies will be Emerson Hall, 607 Wrightwood av. Assistant chairman is William Knees Jr., 4117 Nelson st.

Six Scout troops will attend the community camporee, Ralph Sauerwein, 3566 Dickens av., Humboldt park community chairman, said. Troops will camp under their own shelter unless the weather is inclement, in which case they will use cabins, Sauerwein said.

List Troops Attending

Troops and Scoutmasters attending include Troop 20, sponsored by Emmaus Methodist church, Stone Soderstrom; Troop 118, sponsored by North West Community lodge, Ludwig H. Koepke, and Troop 30, sponsored by Atereth Zion Hebrew congregation, Leonard Shabsin.

Others attending are Troop 53, sponsored by United Congregational church, John Sandrik; Troop 108, sponsored by Bethel Evangelical Lutheran church, Frank Dzur; Troop 7, sponsored by Capt. John Clark, Veterans of Foreign Wars No. 3627, R. W. Dumas.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 21

Tomato plants, egg plants, and peppers can now be planted without fear from frost. Use husky plants that are growing, not weak, woody ones that have been kept too long in flats, for these take a long time to become established.

Buy only resistant varieties, such as Marglobe, Pritchard, Rutgers, Pan-American, and others. If only a few plants are needed buy pot plants, for they transplant without being checked. Dig the holes large enough to accommodate the roots, place a little plant food in the bottom and stir it with the soil.

Place the plant so that it is neither too high nor too low, altho tomatoes root along the stems. Fill the holes and water afterward, raking a little fine soil over the moist soil. A starter solution may be used. Firm the soil around the plant to bring the roots in direct contact with them.

Tuesday, May 22

Mark the iris as they come into bloom and discard all poor varieties. Transplant old clumps in June or July or after flowering. Use good divisions and plant shallowly about nine inches apart for early mass effects.

The top side of the rhizomes [the part from which the roots grow] may be exposed to the sun or slightly deeper if in sandy soil. The iris is fine for many purposes. Sow vegetable and flower seeds thinly. Plant the essentials and not too many varieties.

Corn, potatoes, and tomatoes should be planted only where there is sufficient space for them. Soak parsley seed a day before sowing but only a few plants are needed.

Wednesday, May 23

Take good care of all fruits. The common elderberry is ornamental and its fruit furnishes fine pies, jelly, and good wine.

Plunge house plants in a sheltered spot in the garden. Those requiring a shady spot may be plunged beside a shed, beneath an overhanging tree or elsewhere.

These plants include ferns, night blooming cereus, Christmas cactus, fancy leaved caladium, some palms, and others, while the date palm, century plant, hibiscus, gardenia, poinsettia, geranium, and others of a similar nature require full sun.

However, plunged plants need examining every day to see that they do not dry out. It is well also to give them an application of plant food once every three weeks.

Thursday, May 24

Beds of geraniums should not be continually watered or they will grow soft. Keep them on the dry side. During the heat of summer keep the philodendron away from the sun's rays or the foliage will turn brown. Keep in subdued light or in a north window where there is abundant light but no sun.

Friday, May 25

Insect pests must be kept under control or the plants will be seriously injured. Eradication by dusting is cleaner than when the wet spray is used and the dust is easy to apply.

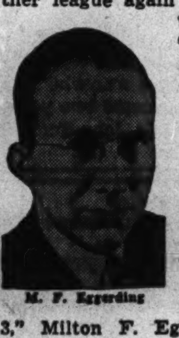
Two practices in vegetable growing must be adopted and continued regularly to obtain the high grade materials desired. First, thinning plants and second, cultivating them. Delaying cultivation means weeds.

Saturday, May 26

Gardens that cannot be artificially watered may be mulched when hot weather comes or toward the end of June. Mulching is simply covering the ground between plants with materials like decayed manure, grass clippings, peat, leaves, or anything that will decay.

STAGE WALTHER TALENT SHOW AT CONCORDIA SOON

Hold Festival Sunday and June 3



M. F. Eggerding

The Northern Illinois district Walther league again will sponsor its talent festival at Concordia college, River Forest, this year. "This year we are staging two separate festivals—one for the parochial school children next Sunday and the other for Walther league and church choir members June 3," Milton F. Eggerding, general chairman, said.

For the last 10 years this organization has set aside one day annually to enable its members and students of the Lutheran schools in the northern district to display their talents before judges.

Events for each of the festivals will begin at 2 p. m. The hobbies will include drawing, painting, poster, and window displays, home movies, collections, handicrafts, music, and oral recitations including Bible story telling, book reviews, mission studies, dramatic reading, oratory, and one act plays.

Participants will appear each Sunday night on a program open to the public. An orchestra from the parochial group will play Sunday and one from the Walther league June 3. Both will be directed by Paul Schmidt.

Those assisting Eggerding with arrangements are Owen Wood, Lois Dreyer, Martin Lucbke, Irma Last, Mildred Kietzer, Hildegarde Weiss, Luther Kolander, Ruth Wilhelmi, Ethel Novak, Arlene Nagel, Richard Schott, Edward A. Lange, Harold P. Wukasch, John M. Roth, Edwin K. Eckert, Lawrence Rush, Selma Soltner, and Adolph Rittmueller.

LIAISON OFFICER IS LINK BETWEEN ARMY, CIVILIANS

Lt. Krisor Has Answer to Every Query

Lt. Krisor

Capt. Stockman

When a north side resident dials Lincoln 6246, chances are that he wants either information or assistance. If the request has to do with military matters, 1st Lt. John D. Krisor, answering the telephone in his office at 2001 Irving Park blvd., will do his best.

It may be a mother wanting to know why her son overseas hasn't yet received the package she mailed in February, or a minister inquiring about arrangements for a patriotic service at his church. Or it may be an anonymous report that a soldier must be AWOL because he's around the neighborhood again, or word from a near-by police station that a service man from out of town has been injured in an accident.

He Knows the Answers

Whatever the message, Lt. Krisor, as liaison officer for the army and Chicago civilians, will know the answer. To the mother he will explain the frequent and necessary delays in shipping to war zones. The minister will be promised full coöperation. The tipster will be assured that a quiet but thoro investigation of the AWOL suspect will be made by military police. For the injured soldier, the nearest military hospital will be notified promptly to send an ambulance.

As an area commander, representing the commanding officer of the 3d district of the 6th service command, who is Col. Joseph E. Torrence, Lt. Krisor has one all-inclusive assignment: To bring the army closer to the people it serves. He works more than 60 hours a week in his office and in war plants, schools, churches, and the homes of service men. With 10 other area commanders working under direction of Capt. Ross Stockman in Illinois and northern Indiana, he represents the war department in the presentation of more than 300 army medals each month, and in the same period apprehends or investigates 400 AWOL soldiers and handles thousands of personal civilian problems.

Makes E Presentations

Lt. Krisor's duties are as varied as are the problems brought him. With his staff of three noncommissioned officers he has assisted in numerous army-navy E award ceremonies and bond rallies, and makes monthly inspections of guard service at Teletype corporation, Western Electric plant, and numerous other war plants.

An important part of the work of an area commander is the presentation of bronze stars, infantryman's badges, and other medals to the relatives of men killed in action, missing, or taken prisoner. Occasionally a medal is presented to a soldier who has returned suddenly from overseas. One such case was that of Pvt. John Bernath, 1114 Drummond pl., who was captured by the Germans while serving with a medical detachment in Italy and was released recently from a prison camp.

When Lt. Krisor, unaware of Bernath's return, visited the home to make arrangements for the presentation of a bronze star to Mrs. Bernath, Pvt. Bernath answered the door.

Citizens Aid Officers

Each area commander is assisted by a committee of key civilians. Among members of the committee appointed by Lt. Krisor, with their business addresses, are William Keith, American Legion headquarters, 205 Wacker dr.; Edward Burmeister, Lake View bank, Belmont and Ashland avs.; Louis Soelter, Kiwanis club, 2516 N. Halsted st.; Robert McMaster, president of Oak Park; Warren Stevens, community newspaper editor, 5625 Lake st.; John Harmon, Illinois Bell Telephone company, 212 W. Washington st., and Oscar Mayer, general manager of Oscar Mayer company, 1241 Sedgwick st. A committee of women has also been organized to call on the relatives of men killed in service.

Lt. Krisor, in civilian life an accountant, has held his present position two years. Since entering military service in April, 1942, he has been stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., Fargo, N. D., and Scott field, Ill.

Began Work in 1943

Organized in December, 1942, as plant guard officers, the area commanders assumed their present titles and took over additional duties in July, 1943. Auxiliary military police serving as guards in many Chicago war plants are still under their supervision, and monthly inspections are conducted. Area commanders in this district have trained more than 32,000 men for guard duty, releasing regular army men for service overseas.

The area commander system originated here, with Capt. Stockman as the first officer in such a position, and has been copied in many parts of the nation. The officers are commissioned in the corps of military police.

City in Two Areas

Metropolitan Chicago is divided into two areas, with Lt. Krisor in charge of the section north of the dividing line, which extends east on Belmont av. from the county line to Harlem av., south to Jackson blvd., east to Pulaski rd., south to Roosevelt rd., and east to the lake. Capt. Frank M. Dolven supervises the south area from his office at 14th st. and Albany av.

Other commanders in this district of the 6th service command are Capt. E. R. Sherwood, whose headquarters are in the Aurora city hall; Capt. G. M. Unsworth, Gary; Maj. Walter G. Mee, Springfield; Capt. Charles McFarland, Decatur, Ill.; Capt. Donet Smith, East St. Louis, Ill.; Lt. John Miller, Carbondale, Ill., and Capt. George Tomlinson, Moline, Ill. In the Camp Ellis and Fort Sheridan areas, the commanding officers of those posts are area commanders, with Capt. Howard Werner, Camp Ellis, and Capt. Jack Marietta, Fort Sheridan, as subcommanders. A suboffice in Joliet is headed by Sgt. H. H. Buell.

YANK BROADCAST FROM OKINAWA IS FLEA CIRCUS

Lt. Bruce Dennis Tells of Radio Rigors

BY LARRY WOLTERS

When you hear a short wave pickup relayed from Okinawa by way of Meet Your Navy or the Army hour have you ever wondered how much work and danger may go into the making of such a broadcast? A letter has reached this desk from Lt. Bruce Dennis, on military leave from W-G-N's staff, giving some idea of what goes into these programs.

"Our broadcasting studio occupies a former chartroom high on the flying bridge of our ship," he begins, "with just room for the commentator and program officer [which is what I'm known as]. We've crowded as many as eight people in here. Both Adm. Turner and Gen. Buckner have broadcast from our studio and once they were on together in a special army day program. I made my network debut as an announcer on this show which was taken by all four networks.

Plenty of Excitement

"Have had plenty of excitement, especially during the Kamikaze suicide raids. Several have been shot down not far away. We had a navy flyer up here one night waiting to be interviewed by Bud Foster when all the guns cut loose. He said he'd rather get out of here and stick to his Corsair where it was safe!"

Lt. Dennis told of spending two nights on the island to do a broadcast from a captured Japanese cave, with the aid of Joe Hainline of NBC.

"Took a jeep with a built-in transmitter along," he said, "for sending the show back to the ship whence it was relayed. The cave was located several feet below flea level and I accumulated 473 bites or 13 more than Tom Morrow [Chicabo Tribune correspondent], whom I met near one of the division headquarters. Tom seems always to be in o rahead of the front lines.

A Shrine in Cave

"The cave had been an Okinawa shrine. We reached the cave mouth, picked ourselves up after being floored by the sour smell welling from it, and slipped down a flight of stone steps to the main room. In its center was a wooden shrine that looked like a highboy with steplike shelves leading up to the cabinet where the idol was kept.

"Stalagtites [or is it mites] depended from the ceiling and water dripped down slowly into silent dank puddles. There was no echoes. From a broadcast standpoint it was as dead as if hung with velvet curtains. No booming, no resonance. Joe and I crept around trying to keep the bats out of our hair.

"American field artillery near-by kept cannonading away at the Japs and gave us sound effects. The broadcast was set for early next morning so we decided to remain in the cave overnight along with some shell shocked GIs taken from the front lines. Some more soldiers ducked in because an air raid alert was sounded. One was named Gustafson and he came from Genoa, Ill.

Bring Down a Zero

Ack-ack fire caused every one to flatten to the floor of the cave, Lt. Dennis said. Every one kept away from the opening of the cave except the bats which were silhouetted by the bright light of a paper moon.

After more gunfire there came "a sudden, rending, tearing crash, then utter silence."

"A sentry showing up at the mouth of the cave announced laconically: 'They got him!'

"A brand new Jap Zero had been shot down and landed 20 yards from the mouth of the cave. Twisted metal, some bright blue and some red from the disintegrated rising sun littered the ground. The oil pump from the engine lay right on the flagstone walk as we came out of the cave. In the midst of the wreckage lay what had been the Japanese pilot. Expressions of sympathy followed:

"'I wonder if the so and so had a wristwatch?'

"'Who got his pistol?'

"'Maybe the guy in the foxhole.'

Close Shave for GI

"It was agreed that if the guy in the foxhole got the pistol that was O. K. One wing of the plane had torn thru the pup tent a doughboy had over his foxhole. He was awakened rudely but was unhurt.

"The broadcast went on soon after daylight with Joe sticking to the previously censored script that had suddenly grown dull to us. But Joe didn't care. He got a clip of machine gun bullets from the Zero. [So did I.]

"What bothered us were the flea bites. The Okinawa flea is a jet propelled job that covers an amazing lot of territory in a short time and he is accompanied by four motored mosquitos which snap at any uncovered part.

"So anyway, that's the way American broadcasting came to Okinawa."

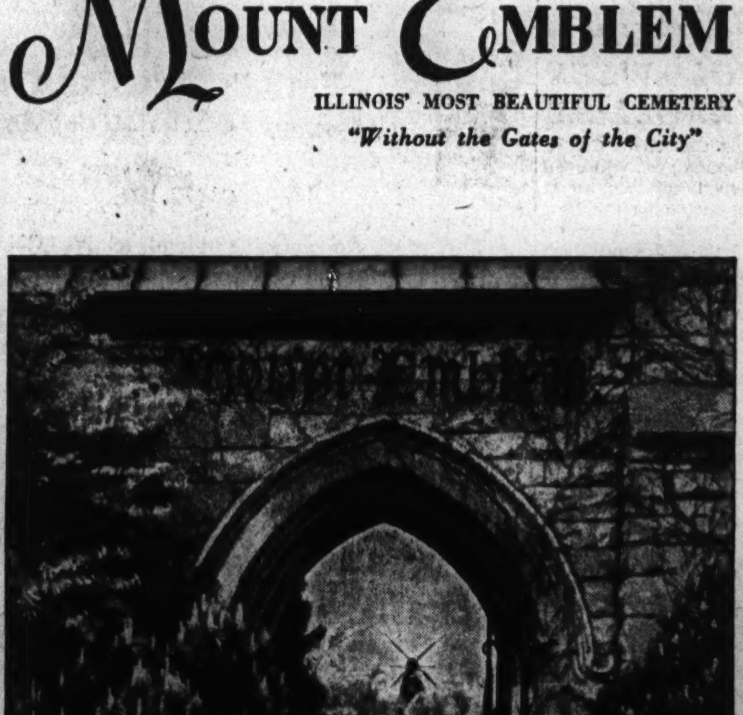
MOUNT EMBLEM
ILLINOIS' MOST BEAUTIFUL CEMETERY
"Without the Gates of the City"



THE natural beauty of thousands of trees and shrubs, artfully landscaped for present and ever greater future loveliness, is paramount in Mount Emblem. The deep foliage and the fragrance of its many blooms will make a lasting impression upon you.

MOUNT EMBLEM is the site of the Old Dutch Mill, built in 1850. This mill is a rare tribute to the ingenuity, perseverance, and craftsmanship of a past age. The grist mill machinery is in place, just as it was many years ago when grinding grain. It is an interesting exhibit.

Enjoy the quiet loveliness of an evening at Mount Emblem during the week. An hour spent in the solace of shadows cast by the setting sun will be long remembered.

Each evening Sacred and Concert music is broadcast across the cemetery from the Old Dutch Mill, which serves as a Chime Tower. The gates are open until dusk.

WRIGHT GRADS MARK YEAR OF AMATEUR BAND

Capt. Barabash Sees an Idea Developed

Capt. J. H. Barabash

A proud group of northwest siders—former high school and college bandsmen—recently celebrated the first anniversary of their organization, the Wright Junior College community band.

The band is the dream of Capt. John H. Barabash, director of bands at Wright Junior college for the last five years. Barabash tired of seeing his band proteges wrap their cornets and trumpets in green felt on graduation and determined to do something about it.

Sees Worth in Idea

He thought of the small town band concerts and the bond with which it unites a community. He conceived the idea of a community band for the Portage Park district, which would act not only as the center of the community but would give these inactive bandsmen an outlet for their training after termination of their school careers. He went on a speaking tour of the district, interesting college faculty members, high school directors, the Portage Park Chamber of Commerce, and others in his idea.

Letters were sent Wright Junior college alumni, and to Harrison High school where for 16 years the band was under his direction and won many Chicago and national championships. Many of his former pupils are now prominent musicians in school, swing, and symphony orchestras. But many others had no opportunity to continue their band work after graduation.

Group Still in Office

When he walked into the first rehearsal last year in May it was the latter group which greeted him, reinforced by the butcher, the baker, and candlestick maker who had heard about his new band and wanted to be part of it.

Officers elected that night and still holding office are Eugene Jablowicz, president; Dr. Mark C. Spencer, vice president; Mary Hengst, secretary, and John Zima, treasurer.

Will Play at Schurz High

Barabash whipped his new organization into such shape that within a few weeks the band was asked to play at the May festival in the community. Later it played the Portage Park Chamber of Commerce air show, a festival in November, gave a concert in December at Wright Junior college, and another in March for the Red Cross. The band will play at Schurz High school at 3 p. m. today for the Wright Junior college music festival, and will present another concert at 8 p. m. Tuesday at the Portage Park school, Long and Berteau avs.

Membership in the band is open without charge to any one who can play a musical instrument.

DES PLAINES SCHOOL'S BOYS' BAND TO PLAY CONCERT ON TUESDAY

The Rev. Mulcahey

The boys' band of St. Mary's Training school in Des Plaines, directed by Thomas Fabish, will present a concert Tuesday night in the Proviso High school auditorium. The band has several times won high honors in the Chicago Music festival and other contests. A program has been prepared of classical, march, and novelty selections.

A group of girls from the school will present specialty dancing numbers and other entertainment.

It long has been the wish of boys and girls at the training school to have a grotto and stations of the cross erected on their school grounds. With this in mind, the Rev. Eugene V. Mulcahey, superintendent of the school; the Rev. Martin E. Muzik, pastor of St. Eulalia's church in Maywood; and pastors of other Catholic parishes in the west suburban area have arranged for the concert as a means of helping the school's dream come true.

AREA FIGHTERS WIN GALAXY OF SILVER STARS

Several Awards Made Posthumously

Pvt. Joseph Zboralski, husband of Mrs. Gertrude Zboralski, 4043 N. St. Louis av., was one of several northwest side service men recently awarded silver stars for gallantry in action.

Zboralski crawled across "four hundred yards of exposed terrain under intense enemy artillery, mortar, and machine gun fire" to carry a wounded soldier to the cover of a wood in Belgium and then administered first aid until litter bearers arrived, according to the citation.

Corp. Virgil W. Britton, son of Mrs. Anna Britton, 5106 Sunnyside av., was cited for similar action in Belgium. He probed his way thru a German mine field to rescue two wounded infantrymen, helpless in an area dotted with buried explosives.

Probes Foe in Building

In Italy, 1st Lt. Eric E. Rodewald won the award by leading a combat patrol to investigate enemy held buildings. Because of the success of the patrol, reads the citation, serious damage was inflicted on the enemy. He is the son of Mrs. Irene Rodewald, 2845 Belmont av.

Sgt. William A. Lindgren, 2728 Wellington av., with the 744th light tank battalion in Germany, was awarded the silver star for moving an M-8 assault gun into a bridgehead under heavy enemy fire. Thru this action troops were able to get rations and water and evacuate the wounded. He is the son of Mrs. Marjorie Nelson.

A posthumous award of the medal to Staff Sgt. Joseph Schacatano has been made to Mrs. Mary Schacatano, 3104 Fullerton av., his mother. The sergeant was with the 12th armored division of the 7th army on the western front.

Aids GI Tho Dying

Altho fatally wounded near Herrlisheim, France, Schacatano, leader of a machine gun squad, remained at his gun to cover his company's withdrawal to more favorable terrain. His accurate machine gun fire pinned down the enemy, enabling the company to withdraw with a minimum of casualties.

First Lt. Robert J. Jensen, son of Mrs. Josephine Jensen, 4832 Lowell av., was cited for gallantry in Belgium. Overseas with the cavalry for more than a year, he is now convalescing at Winter General hospital, Topeka, Kas., from wounds received in action.

Capt. William M. Blatt, whose nearest relative is Dr. M. L. Blatt, 6128 N. Knox av., was given the award when he roused his men, suffering from prolonged exposure to cold and severe casualties, to further effort by acting as lead scout on a dangerous mission.

Assists Wounded Men

Altho knocked down repeatedly by the concussion of shells, Pvt. Richard W. Schroeder continued to render assistance to wounded men in Italy. For his "courage and devotion to duty," Schroeder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Schroeder, 2109 N. Western av., was awarded the silver star.

Lt. Col. August R. Schmidt, husband of Mrs. Alice Schmidt, 4251 Ottawa av., was cited posthumously for his courage in personally leading his men to an exposed forward position for attack in Italy.

Buried in Wreckage

The following day, Schmidt entered a dangerously weakened building to call for counter-battery fire and order materials for the improvement of front line dugouts. He was fatally injured when a direct hit demolished the building, burying him in the wreckage.

Pvt. Sidney Doe's disregard for personal safety and courage in repairing communications lines in shelled areas in France and in ministering to the wounded earned him the silver star. His home address is 4347 N. Keeler av.

Wounded Aiding Injured

When fierce enemy resistance to a major attack caused the evacuation of all aid men except himself, Pvt. Frank A. Mueller, of Arlington Heights, administered first aid to all wounded in his company. On one occasion, he went out under heavy fire to a wounded man and histily constructed a stretcher from tree limbs to carry him back to the aid station. Mueller, son of Mrs. Margaret Mueller, was wounded during his efforts to aid others. For this he was awarded the silver star.

A volunteer aidman in the Philippines, Pvt. William J. Nosal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Nosal of Niles, was cited posthumously. Nosal was wounded twice by Jap fire while evacuating a patient. Altho he could no longer crawl, he remained with the patient for 16 hours, administering morphine and re-dressing his patient's wounds. At dusk aidmen reached the two, removing them to the rear where Nosal died.

Crosses Dense Mine Field

Corp. Marvin P. Long, son of Jack Long, 5014 Kimball av., was given the award for volunteering to cross a dense mine field in Germany to evacuate several casualties. He carried on until all of the wounded were removed.

The silver star went to Corp. John J. Coyne when he went to the aid of a wounded officer in Germany. He is the son of Mrs. Laura Skach, 5934 School st.

Three others also were given the award: Sgt. Christopher J. Lorenz, son of Mrs. Frieda Lorenz, 5753 Patterson av.; Corp. Marvin M. Sortino, 3815 Division st., and Pvt. Stanley A. Casella, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cassella, 1446 N. Leavitt st.

AWARD BRONZE STAR TO SERGEANT; PRAISE MAKING OF GUN PITS

Dominick Armato

Sgt. Dominick Armato, 2234 N. Keating av., serving with the 531st anti-aircraft artillery in Europe, was awarded the bronze star recently for meritorious achievement in service from last June 16 to Nov. 30 in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany. The citation said Armato showed unusual judgment and untiring service in seeing that gun pits were constructed to insure safety of personnel.

Armato entered service in March, 1941 and has been overseas since January, 1943. His wife and son, Melchior, are living in Boston until his return. In addition to the bronze star, Armato wears three battle stars.

BESTOW LEGION OF MERIT FOR WORK IN MAPS

10,000 CADETS OF CHICAGO TO PARADE FRIDAY

30 R.O.T.C. Units to March at Noon

To the stirring cadence of staccato drum beats and resounding bugle calls, more than 10,000 khaki clad youths of Chicago's high schools will march thru an avenue of flags from Balbo dr. onto Michigan av. Friday noon, in the 10th annual parade of the nation's largest R. O. T.C. command. Insignia on the sleeves of their olive drab and blue uniforms will signify the participation of 29 public schools and one parochial school in the city-wide event.

Past military, school, and civic dignitaries in the reviewing stand at the Congress st. plaza, and north on a boulevard lined with thousands of applauding parents and other spectators, the colorful parade will proceed up Michigan av. to Randolph and Lake sts. Heading the columns of cadets will be Col. Richard E. Kutz, Waller High school senior, and members of his city corps staff.

Others on City Staff

Cadet officers from southwest area schools who are included on the city staff are Lt. Col. James E. Jones, Lindblom High school; Maj. William R. Smith, Fenger High school, and Maj. Russell Moy, Tilden Technical High school. All were chosen by competitive examination last March.

Colors awarded by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will be borne by the two units, as yet unnamed, which are ranked first and second by officers who have conducted a two week inspection. The American flags and school banners will be presented after a brief speech by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, at Balbo dr. preceding the parade.

Top Units to Lead

First places in the parade will be taken by these two top ranking units, with St. Mel High school cadets in third place unless they rank first or second. Organized as a separate unit, the parochial school regiment will be guest of the 3,687th service command unit, to which all Chicago public school R. O. T. C. groups belong.

Pending announcement of the inspecting officers' decision, southwest area units are scheduled to march in this order: Calumet, Fenger, Kelly, Englewood, Morgan Park, Tilden Technical, Harper, and Lindblom. R. O. T. C. instructors will march with their units.

Will Wear Medals

With the poise and efficiency resulting from military discipline, the cadets will display regimental coordination achieved thru long and diligent drill. Many of them will wear medals recently awarded by the R. O. T. C. department, THE TRIBUNE, and various patriotic organizations for outstanding participation in unit activities.

Mayor Kelly and Col. McCormick will be in the reviewing stand, as will Lt. Col. Oscar N. Taylor, professor of military science and tactics for Chicago public schools, Maj. John F. Gardiner, military professor at St. Mel High school, and Maj. Frank L. Beals, R. O. T. C. administrator for the board of education.

Other Leaders to Attend

Among other military officials present will be Col. Joseph E. Torrence, commanding officer of the 3d district of the 6th service command; Lt. Col. Lewis C. Gordon, army specialized training division director; Maj. Doris Epperson, WAC director; Comdr. P. G. Pettersen, commandant of the Chicago Coast Guard base; Capt. B. B. Wygant, commandant of the midshipman's training school in Abbott hall; and Lt. Col. Michiel Dobervich, executive officer of the central procurement division of the marine corps.

School officials present will include President McCahey, of the board of education; George F. Cassell, assistant superintendent of public schools; the Very Rev. D. F. Cunningham, superintendent of Catholic schools; Brother James Luke, director of St. Mel High school; Philip L. McNamee, director of war production training with the board of education, and district school superintendents, and high school principals.

Started Units in 1917

Fifteen bands and nine drum and bugle corps will march in the parade.

For the public, the R. O. T. C. parade, sponsored annually by the board of education in coöperation with THE TRIBUNE, provides an opportunity for observing and judging accomplishments of the organization which has been called "the backbone of order and discipline in Chicago high schools." Military training was introduced into Chicago public schools in 1917, largely thru efforts of THE TRIBUNE, and since 1919 has been under the national R. O. T. C. program.

Two southwest area schools, Lindblom and Fenger, were visited by 6th service command officers last week in the closing days of the all-city federal inspection. Presentation of awards to outstanding cadets was included in both ceremonies.

STUDENTS TELL JUNE HOPES AT CATHOLIC HIGHS

War Will Postpone Plans of Boys

Young people who were prosperity babies, entered kindergarten and grammar school in the depression era, and were freshmen in high school when war was declared, soon will be graduated from the city's parochial high schools.

Typical of teen-age attitudes toward life are those of the senior students interviewed by THE TRIBUNE. Altho each was voted by his classmates the most outstanding member of his class, the students probably reflect the spirit of their classes.

These students who have gone thru two major world upsets look to education as the pathway to peace and post-war security. The majority of the girls plan to enter college this fall while the boys, altho they expect to be in a military uniform before long, intend to resume their education after the war.

MERCY

Lillian Dunbar, 6852 S. Paulina st., hopes to enter nurses' training at St. Xavier's college in the fall. Lillian has decided since the nursing field may be overcrowded after the war she will take college training, too, so as to be fitted to teach. She is active in the Mercy Athletic association, the Physics and Science club, and the Dramatic Art club. Her favorite subject at school is an extra-curricular one—a preflight course with the civil air patrol. After graduation she hopes to make this her hobby and join in a neighborhood patrol squadron. She intends to look for summer employment.

ACADEMY OF OUR LADY

Mary Leona Merrick, 8927 Racine av., aspires to be a newspaper writer; specifically, a foreign correspondent. During her senior year her writing activities included co-editorship of the newspaper and membership in Quill and Scroll. In addition, Mary won a $1,000 war bond as second prize in a national history essay contest. Her subject was "America's Future Role in the Pacific."

Because she maintained a straight A average thruout the four years, she will be graduated with the highest average in the class. She has been awarded a scholarship to Mundelein college where she hopes to major in English and write for the college newspaper.

Mary says that making 14 scrapbooks on the war has given her a better over-all picture of the various fighting fronts. These scrapbooks also will be useful during her college career, she maintains, and, of course, a permanent history of the war years.

ST. RITA

Wallace Dal Santo, Evergreen Park, enlisted in the marine corps in April and expects to leave for active duty in July. He selected the marines because he feels that his two years experience as center on the St. Rita High school football team would be of most use to him there. At the close of the last football season he was chosen one of the two most valuable players on the team. At present baseball occupies his sporting interest. He plays on the Evergreen Park village team.

After the war Wallace plans to attend Purdue university at Lafayette, Ind., where he wants to earn an engineering degree. Then he plans to go to South America and help develop the mining industry. Collegiate football will interest him, but preparing for the engineering profession will be his chief aim at Purdue.

In addtion to his athletic activities, this 772 pounder was a member of the National Honor society four years, vice president of his home room, and a member of the lettermen's club. He also works part time at a paper company at a rolling mill.

Wallace is the second member of the Dal Santo family to be interviewed by THE TRIBUNE as the most outstanding senior of the class, his sister, Mildred, having received the honor three years ago as a Fenger High school graduate. She will be graduated this June from St. Bernard's school of nursing.

ST. MARY PERPETUAL HELP

Rita Mikos, 3637 S. Hermitage av., intends to enter De Paul university next fall to prepare for a teaching career. Since English and history are two of her favorite subjects she intends to major in English and minor in history.

Her school activities include the co-editorship of the newspaper, working on the annual, and memberships in the History and Glee clubs. Reading biographies, especially about American figures, is Rita's favorite pastime. Religious novels also interest her. She is discriminating in her selection of movies, choosing them for their story value rather than because of the stars. Basketball and volleyball interest Rita from a spectator's viewpoint.

ST. LOUIS

Elizabeth Frigo, 1306 97th pl., will be graduated with the highest average in her class. She has been an honor student four years, was prefect of the Sodality of Our Lady as a junior, chairman of the Civics

Fighters' Dads Eager to Buy New GI Bonds

Southwest side communities have taken hold of the Dad to GI Joe Bond plan with enthusiasm. Catching the spirit of the idea offered by THE TRIBUNE and since adopted by the treasury department and the OCD, they have held a series of rallies from which clubs of "GI Dads" have been springing up.

Treasury Regional Chairmen Sarsfield P. Byrne and Walter Lozier have appointed district chairmen on a community basis. Stanley C. Lovick, 3316 S. Halsted st., has been appointed for Bridgeport. He has two sons in service. Corp. Raymond S. Lovick, 25, is convalescing in the general hospital at Fort Custer, Mich., from wounds received in Germany and has been in the army four years. Seaman 2d Class Norman Lovick, 22, is stationed in the Aleutians and has been in the navy 32 months. Both boys will receive war bonds from their father.

Has Son in Coast Guard

Clarence N. Lithio, 5427 64th st., has been named chairman in the Clearing-Garfield Ridge district. He will purchase a bond for his son, Thomas, who has been in the coast guard 33 months. The Town of Lake chairman, Dr. P. O. Peemueller, 1536 W. 47th st., has bought a bond for Lt. Paul Peemueller, serving with an army medical administrative corps in New Guinea.

The son and daughter of the Beverly-Morgan Park chairman, S. R. Davidson, 1633 W. 95th st., each will receive a bond from their father. Maj. Robert Davidson has been stationed with the 5th army in Italy for two years. His sister, Lois, recently received her lieutenancy in the nurse corps. Joseph Frank, 813 W. 79th st., chairman of Auburn Park-Brainerd-Gresham district, has purchased a war bond for his son, Seaman 1st Class Jack S. Frank, 18, who enlisted in the navy recently.

Roseland Theaters Aid

The assistance of eight theaters in the Roseland area has been enlisted by Community Chairman Alwin L. Pearson to acquaint fathers with this special drive. He has purchased bonds worth $2,175 for his son, Capt. Robert, 22, who has been awarded the air medal and Presidential citation in the European theater. Capt. Pearson has been in service three years and overseas 16 months.

Other southwest side fathers who are organizing Dad to GI Joe Bond clubs are: Carl Madory, Harvey; James Magrine, Homewood; Gustaf Huber, Dixmoor; Walter H. Bradisch, Martin Azinga, Herbert Potter, Thomas O. Buikema, Norman Sluis, John Leo, and Charles Voss, all of Evergreen Park; Rufus Orr, William Herring, and B. J. Schwoeffermann of Chicago Heights.

List Other Organizers

All that is needed to become a charter member of a Dad to GI Joe club in a community, place of business, church, club, lodge, store, or group is to sign a Dads to GI Joe card which may be obtained from general headquarters, room 202, 105 W. Adams st. In return a red, white, and blue membership card, symbol of the purchase, will be mailed from the treasury department.

Mass to Mark 90th Year of Old St. James

Services commemorating the 90th anniversary of its founding will be held at 11 a. m. Sunday at Old St. James church, 29th st. and Wabash av. The Rev. Fr. Francis I. Lavin is pastor.

Presiding at the memorial services will be Archbishop Stritch. The mass will be sung by the Sisters choir of Chicago, a group of 90 nuns from 23 religious orders, trained by the Paulist choir director, the Rev. William J. Finn.

Old St. James, known as the mother church of all south side Catholic churches, was instituted in 1855 by Bishop Anthony O'Reagan. It served principally the settlement then located at 26th st. and the lake, known as Carville. This settlement was near the division repair shops of the Illinois Central railroad.

First Baptism in 1855

The first mass was celebrated in St. Agatha's Convent of Mercy at 26th st. and Calumet av., which was a forerunner of the present Mercy hospital at that address. Parish records show that the first infant baptism in the church was William Patrick Whalen on May 27, 1855—90 years to the day of the memorial mass.

The first church building, a wooden structure at 27th st. and Prairie av., was completed in 1858. The archives of Old St. James' which are extant disclose many interesting historical events. Camp Douglas, a prison camp for Confederate soldiers at 33d st. and the lake, was within the St. James parish, since parish limits at that time included the whole south side. Baptismal records show that between 1863 and 1865 almost 500 of these Confederate prisoners were baptized by the Rev. Thomas Kelly, pastor, who later became chaplain of the Illinois Irish brigade.

Once a Society Parish

Construction on the present edifice was begun in 1879 and completed in 1880. During the '80s and '90s it was one of the socially prominent parishes of the city. Its elementary and high schools received favorable comment thruout the country and the high school was the first such Catholic institution on the south side. An exhibition by its elementary school pupils during the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893 brought commendation to the parish.

It is one of the few Catholic churches in America to be consecrated—having been so declared in 1895. Thus it must be preserved and if not used as a church must be demolished. The massive stone edifice is still in excellent condition and the stained glass windows, representing gifts from many early Chicago families, are in a fine state of preservation.

Altar Boys to Attend

From 1880 to 1920 one of the best known of its parish activities was the Altar Boys society. Many former members of this society are still living and about 40 will be present at the altar for the memorial mass.

South siders who are on the arrangement committee for the memorial include Judge Igoe, 5120 Hyde Park blvd.; Elmer J. Whitty, 6529 Kenwood av.; Dr. Joseph F. Kerwin, 8342 S. Paulina av.; Edward R. Tiedebohl, 6822 Euclid av.; Eugene C. Coyle, 7439 Clyde av.; George C. Hall, 7314 Bennett av., and Philip F. De Marais, 7828 Euclid av.

JUBILEE TODAY WILL MARK 80TH YEAR OF CHURCH

Trinity Lutheran Will Hold Two Services

Trinity Evangelical Lutheran church, 31st st. and Lowe av., will celebrate its 80th anniversary with special services this morning and tonight. The Rev. Arthur H. Both, pastor, has announced that the Rev. Ernest G. John will speak at the morning service and the Rev. Martin A. Pfotenhauer in the evening.

The present estimated value of the church property which consists of church, school, and parsonage, three buildings, is $150,000. The Rev. Mr. Both, who has been with the church 45 years, conducts two services every Sunday, one in English and the other in German for the old time members of the congregation.

Started Church in Store

Records of the church reveal that the Rev. J. P. Beyer, founder, started his congregation in an empty store with only $3 worth of lumber to use in making benches. This building, located in the district now known as Chinatown, was used for both church and school services for several years.

The first permanent structure was built on the corner of Canal st. and 25th pl. From this site the congregation moved in 1906 to 31st st. and Lowe av. where the present church now stands.

Founded Several Missions.

Both the congregation and school grew rapidly. A staff of nine teachers was hired. Missions were founded in Lake, Bridgeport, Brighton, and other communities farther south. All of these have since become independent congregations.

The Rev. Mr. Both says that in addition to being the oldest Evangelical Lutheran congregation on the southwest side.

The highest average of the graduating class belongs to this four year honor student. Other honors include vice presidency of the Choral club, art editor of the newspaper, and a lead in the Passion Play.

LOURDES

Phyllis Trusk, 5959 S. Richmond st., president of the senior class, expects to find herself a secretarial position after graduation and then go to night school, where she may study commercial art.

During the last year she worked part time as an elevator girl at the Morrison hotel. This did not prevent her taking part in other school activities. She was prom chairman, assistant editor of the yearbook, and a member of the sodality and the Civics club. However, between now and June 12, graduation day, Phyllis says she will concentrate entirely on final examinations.

VISITATION

Among the honors bestowed on Rosemary Sullivan, 5600 Peoria st., was the presidency of the senior class. She belongs to the following clubs: Camera, Biology, Chemistry, and Aeronautics, and to the student council.

Dog pictures have a special fascination for Rosemary. She has a collection of more than 500 pictures clipped from newspapers and magazines.

During the school year Rosemary has worked part time sorting mail in the postoffice. Next fall she intends to enroll at Rosary college in River Forest and major in sociology. In this field she hopes to aid the fight on juvenile delinquency.

AWARD OF $400 SPEEDS A YOUNG CHEMIST ON WAY

George Whipple Clark doesn't pretend to be a quiz kid, or does he think it unusual that he became interested in science when, in 6th grade at Flossmoor school, he picked up his father's college chemistry text. He read it thru, even performing some of the experiments.

George Clark

This scientific bent has flourished and now, a senior at Thornton High school at 16, he is the recipient of a $400 scholarshap in a nationwide talent search conducted by Westinghouse Electric Co. In addition to the scholarship he won a five day trip to Washington, D. C.

In Field of 15,000

More than 15,000 high school seniors took part in the contest. About 3,000 completed all the requirements, including a science aptitude examination and an essay on "My Scientific Project." George was one of 40 finalists sent to Washington with all expenses paid to attend a five day science talent institute and be interviewed.

Clark talks glowingly about the Washington trip. Particularly outstanding was a meeting with President Truman, then Vice President. As one of four runners-up he hopes to attend Harvard university and major in physics.

His Mind Is Made Up

He knows what he wants: Master and doctor's degrees in mathematical physics and a college position teaching physics with plenty of time for research.

Two experiments this young scientist has been working on for over three years are responsible to a large degree, for winning the scholarship. One of them, a six inch reflecting telescope will be completed within a month. The other, separation of chemical elements, an experiment in pure science, is nowhere near an end.

It is in this latter experiment his basic interest lies. For investigating rare earths, a group of closely related chemical compounds, Clark has devised his own method of extraction and has succeeded in obtaining samples of pure pale yellow cerium dioxide and pure white thorium nitrate. In explaining his method, he refers to the crystallization process for radium, shown in the movie "Madame Curie."

Plays Cello in Orchestra

The chief chemical in the experiment is monazite sand which comes from Brazil and India. Working in his basement laboratory Clark has succeeded, thru a boiling and condensing process, in obtaining two pounds of crystalized material. He is continuing this process in an effort to fractionalize the four remaining elements.

Altho his chief interest is chemistry, Clark has other fields of endeavor. His scholastic average places him in the upper 10 per cent of the class. He plays cello in the school orchestra and was president of Purple X, a school loyalty organization. George looks forward to high school graduation in June followed by a summer of swimming and sailing and, after that, entering Harvard to begin his scientific career in earnest.

Group of Third District Legion to Install Officers

Junior members of 3d district American Legion auxiliary will install officers next Sunday afternoon at Square Post hall, 70th and Elizabeth sts. Music and refreshments will follow the meeting.

SOUTH AFRICAN ALL FOR YANKS WHO FREED HIM

Liberation in Leipzig after three years imprisonment seemed like a dream to a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Waylett, 6314 S. Albany av. In a letter which arrived on V-E day, H. C. Waylett, 36, of Capetown, South Africa, wrote of 3d army Yanks who liberated him: "They're great guys and were kind to us! I cannot believe my good fortune yet."

He and several other prisoners were in a coal cellar when an American soldier poked his head in to say, "Buddies, you're liberated." "As if that weren't enough," writes the South African, "the soldier also provided cigarets and service piled upon service."

Finally came the greatest thrill of all—getting into a plane which reached London six hours later. Waylett, who is convalescing from his experience, declared: "I cannot praise your boys too highly."

First Services in Store

Organized by the Rev. D. D. Vaughn in 1900, Thoburn Methodist church services first were held in a store at 6154 S. Ashland av. On Nov. 18th of that year trustees began erection of a church building on the corner of 64th and Paulina sts. The church was dedicated Feb. 24, 1901, by Bishop J. M. Thoburn, whose name the church bears.

During the first 10 years, eight pastors served the congregation. The building was destroyed by fire in 1908 and once again a store served temporarily as the house of worship.

In March, 1910, Dr. De Lacy was appointed. The cornerstone of the present building was laid the first day of 1911 and was dedicated in March by the Rev. H. V. Holt. The church was constructed to give it the largest seating capacity of any protestant church in the 63d st. and Ashland av. district. Membership at that time was 200. An auditorium was added to the building group in 1920.

5 Reasons Why
You Had Better SAVE This Dollar

This is a wartime dollar. It looks just the same as it did before the war. But it is not the same.

Here are 5 things it can not do:

1. It can't help you buy a new car now.
2. It can't help you buy a new radio now.
3. It can't help you build a new home now.
4. It can't buy the quantity it could before.
5. It can't buy the quality it will later.

But you can make this wartime dollar do these things later just by saving it. Plan your spending, plan your saving. Work it out in black and white, to assure better spending control, greater saving. Saving means helping to keep the dollar sound, to maintain its buying power. And saving means buying War Bonds regularly and putting money in the bank for emergencies.

PLAN YOUR SPENDING • FOR YOUR COUNTRY • YOUR FAMILY • YOURSELF • PLAN YOUR SAVING

Help the nation's efforts to keep your living costs DOWN, the buying power of your dollar UP.

LIAISON OFFICER IS LINK BETWEEN ARMY, CIVILIANS

Capt. Dolven Has Answer to Every Question

When a resident of west or south Chicago dials Crawford 1119, chances are that he wants either information or assistance. If the request has to do with military matters, Capt. Frank Dolven, answering the telephone in his office at 14th st. and Albany av., will do his best.

It may be a mother wanting to know why her son overseas hasn't yet received the package she mailed in February, or a minister inquiring about arrangements for a patriotic service at his church. Or it may be an anonymous report that a soldier must be AWOL because he's around the neighborhood again, or word from a near-by police station that a service man from out of town has been injured in an accident.

Will Promise Action

Whatever the message, Capt. Dolven, as liaison officer between the army and Chicago civilians, will know the answer. To the mother he will explain the frequent and necessary delays in shipping to war zones. The minister will be promised full coöperation. The tipster will be assured that a quiet but thoro investigation of the AWOL suspect will be made by military police. For the injured soldier, the nearest military hospital will be notified promptly to send an ambulance.

As an area commander, representing the commanding officer of the 3d district of the 6th service command who is Col. Joseph E. Torrence, Capt. Dolvan has one all-inclusive assignment: to bring the army closer to the people it serves. He works more than 60 hours a week in his office and in war plants, schools, churches, and the homes of service men.

Three Enlisted Men Aid

Capt. Dolven's duties are as varied as are the problems brought him. With his staff of three noncommissioned officers, he has assisted in numerous army-navy E award ceremonies and bond rallies, and has shown war films to workers at the Crane Co., Western Electric Co., and other war plants.

Each area commander is assisted by a committee of key civilians. Among members of the committee appointed by Capt. Dolven are Arthur G. Goyer, 1110 W. 35th st., bank cashier; John M. Haffner, 5100 S. Ashland av., community newspaper editor; State Sen. McDermott [4th], 5445 S. Ashland av.; William J. Warfield, 706 E. 50th pl., and H. J. Beggins, 4100 S. Kedzie av., auxiliary military police chief. A committee of women has also been organized to call on the relatives of men killed in service.

In Occupation Army

Organized in December, 1942, as plant guard officers, the area commanders assumed their present titles and took over additional duties in July, 1943. Auxiliary military police serving as guards in many Chicago war plants are still under their supervision and are inspected monthly. Area commanders in this 32,000 men for guard duty, releasing regular army men for service overseas.

City Divided Into Two Areas

The area commander system originated here, with Capt. Stockman as the first officer in such a position, and has been copied in many parts of the nation. The officers are commissioned in the corps of military police.

Metropolitan Chicago is divided into two areas, with Capt. Dolven in charge of the entire section south of the dividing line, which extends east on Belmont av. from the county line to Harlem av., south to Jackson blvd., east to Pulaski rd., south to Roosevelt rd., and east to the lake. Lt. John Krisor supervises the north area from his office at 2001 Irving Park rd.

Other area commanders in this 6th service command district are Capt. G. M. Unsworth, whose headquarters are in the Carnegie Illinois plant at Gary; Capt. E. R. Sherwood, Aurora; Maj. Walter G. Mee, Springfield; Capt. Charles McFarland, Decatur, Ill.; Capt. Donet Smith, East St. Louis, Ill.; Lt. John Miller, Carbondale, Ill., and Capt. George Tomlinson, Moline, Ill.

SCOUTS TO HOLD 2 DAY POW-WOW THIS WEEK-END

2,000 to Pitch Camp in Marquette Park

Two thousand Boy Scouts and Scout leaders of the southwest district will encamp Saturday and day at Marquette park, 71st st. and California av., where a district pow-wow will be held. This event, considered the most important of the Scouting year, will include outdoor demonstrations of Scout activities of the last year.

Chief Whirling Thunder

A council fire will be held Saturday night which 4,000 parents are expected to attend. Demonstrations will begin at 10 a. m. Saturday and continue until 3:30 p. m. Sunday. Competitions between the troops will take place during this time and 700 awards, ranging from ribbons to large plaques will be conferred on outstanding performers.

Will Show Link Trainer

One of the outstanding exhibits of the pow-wow will be a Link trainer built by Gage Park Air Scouts who will demonstrate its use in learning how to handle airplane controls under simulated flying conditions. Plane models also will form a part of this exhibit.

Special emphasis has been placed this year on Cub Scouts participation in the pow-wow. An Indian village constructed by them will be on display. Chief Whirling Thunder of the Winnebago tribe, associated with the park district recreation department, will tell Cubs about Indian lore.

Plans have been made for the campers to attend outdoor church services. Chaplains from the various faiths will be present to conduct worship services.

Several hundred volunteer Scout leaders will guide the activities, under direction of Sidney Wanzer, 130 W. Garfield blvd., district chairman, Russell Savage, 8943 Claremont av., general director, and F. W. Gareiss, 9346 Elizabeth st., Scout commissioner.

On Community Basis

Most activities during the week-end will be on a community basis with the following chairmen: Raymond Schuster, Archer rd. community; Eugene Holland, Bridgeport; Franklin Kahn, southwest center; Edward Bradford, Englewood; John Carr, Ridge; James Corey, Tri Parks, and John Egan, West End.

Additional Scout leaders assisting in pow-wow plans include: Casimir Kucharski, Arthur F. Haigh, Lucein Wisinewski, George Stone, Otto Schenk, W. D. Huffnagle, Clyde Hayden, Harold Larsen, Oscar Swanson, Melvin Brockman, W. E. Lingo, and M. V. Mahlke.

Recent Bride

MRS. RICHARD NOBLE

Lorraine Wahlen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Wahlen, 6347 S. Troy st., was married recently to Richard Dorsey Noble, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Noble of Kansas City, Mo., in Marquette Park Presbyterian church. The bride was graduated from Lindblom High school. The bridegroom was graduated from the University of Illinois and is employed as a chemical engineer.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 21

Tomato plants, egg plants, and peppers can now be planted without fear from frost. Use husky plants that are growing, not weak, woody ones that have been kept too long in flats, for these take a long time to become established.

Buy only resistant varieties, such as Marglobe, Pritchard, Rutgers, Pan-American, and others. If only a few plants are needed buy pot plants, for they transplant without being checked. Dig the holes large enough to accommodate the roots, place a little plant food in the bottom and stir it with the soil.

Place the plant so that it is neither too high nor too low, altho tomatoes root along the stems. Fill the holes and water afterward, raking a little fine soil over the moist soil. A starter solution may be used. Firm the soil around the plant to bring the roots in direct contact with them.

Tuesday, May 22

Mark the iris as they come into bloom and discard all poor varieties. Transplant old clumps in June or July or after flowering. Use good divisions and plant shallowly about nine inches apart for early mass effects.

The top side of the rhizomes [the part from which the roots grow] may be exposed to the sun or slightly deeper if in sandy soil. The iris is fine for many purposes. Sow vegetable and flower seeds thinly. Plant the essentials and not too many varieties.

Corn, potatoes, and tomatoes should be planted only where there is sufficient space for them. Soak parsley seed a day before sowing but only a few plants are needed.

Wednesday, May 23

Take good care of all fruits. The common elderberry is ornamental and its fruit furnishes fine pies, jelly, and good wine.

Plunge house plants in a sheltered spot in the garden. Those requiring a shady spot may be plunged beside a shed, beneath an overhanging tree or elsewhere.

These plants include ferns, night blooming cereus, Christmas cactus, fancy leaved caladium, some palms, and others, while the date palm, century plant, hibiscus, gardenia, poinsettia, geranium, and others of a similar nature require full sun.

However, plunged plants need examining every day to see that they do not dry out. It is well also to give them an application of plant food once every three weeks.

Thursday, May 24

Beds of geraniums should not be continually watered or they will grow soft. Keep them on the dry side. During the heat of summer keep the philodendron away from the sun's rays or the foliage will turn brown. Keep in subdued light or in a north window where there is abundant light but no sun.

Friday, May 25

Insect pests must be kept under control or the plants will be seriously injured. Eradication by dusting is cleaner than when the wet spray is used and the dust is easy to apply.

Two practices in vegetable growing must be adopted and continued regularly to obtain the high grade materials desired. First, thinning plants and second, cultivating them. Delaying cultivation means weeds.

Saturday, May 26

Gardens that cannot be artificially watered may be mulched when hot weather comes or toward the end of June. Mulching is simply covering the ground between plants with materials like decayed manure, grass clippings, peat, leaves, or anything that will decay.

YANKBROADCAST FROM OKINAWA IS FLEA CIRCUS

Lt. Bruce Dennis Tells of Radio Rigors

BY LARRY WOLTERS

When you hear a short wave pickup relayed from Okinawa by way of Meet Your Navy or the Army hour have you ever wondered how much work and danger may go into the making of such a broadcast? A letter has reached this desk from Lt. Bruce Dennis, on military leave from W-G-N's staff, giving some idea of what goes into these programs.

"Our broadcasting studio occupies a former chartroom high on the flying bridge of our ship," he begins, "with just room for the commentator and program officer [which is what I'm known as]. We've crowded as many as eight people in here. Both Adm. Turner and Gen. Buckner have broadcast from our studio and once they were on together in a special army day program. I made my network debut as an announcer on this show which was taken by all four networks.

Plenty of Excitement

"Have had plenty of excitement, especially during the Kamikaze suicide raids. Several have been shot down not far away. We had a navy flyer up here one night waiting to be interviewed by Bud Foster when all the guns cut loose. He said he'd rather get out of here and stick to his Corsair where it was safe!"

Lt. Dennis told of spending two nights on the island to do a broadcast from a captured Japanese cave, with the aid of Joe Hainline of NBC.

"Took a jeep with a built-in transmitter along," he said, "for sending the show back to the ship whence it was relayed. The cave was located several feet below flea level and I accumulated 473 bites or 13 more than Tom Morrow [Chicabo Tribune correspondent], whom I met near one of the division headquarters. Tom seems always to be in o rahead of the front lines.

A Shrine in Cave

"The cave had been an Okinawa shrine. We reached the cave mouth, picked ourselves up after being floored by the sour smell welling from it, and slipped down a flight of stone steps to the main room. In its center was a wooden shrine that looked like a highboy with steplike shelves leading up to the cabinet where the idol was kept.

"Stalagtites [or is it mites] depended from the ceiling and water dripped down slowly into silent dank puddles. There was no echoes. From a broadcast standpoint it was as dead as if hung with velvet curtains. No booming, no resonance. Joe and I crept around trying to keep the bats out of our hair.

"American field artillery near-by kept cannonading away at the Japs and gave us sound effects. The broadcast was set for early next morning so we decided to remain in the cave overnight along with some shell shocked GIs taken from the front lines. Some more soldiers ducked in because an air raid alert was sounded. One was named Gustafson and he came from Genoa, Ill.

Bring Down a Zero

Ack-ack fire caused every one to flatten to the floor of the cave, Lt. Dennis said. Every one kept away from the opening of the cave except the bats which were silhouetted by the bright light of a paper moon.

After more gunfire there came "a sudden, rending, tearing crash, then utter silence."

"A sentry showing up at the mouth of the cave announced laconically: 'They got him!'

"A brand new Jap Zero had been shot down and landed 20 yards from the mouth of the cave. Twisted metal, some bright blue and some red from the disintegrated rising sun littered the ground. The oil pump from the engine lay right on the flagstone walk as we came out of the cave. In the midst of the wreckage lay what had been the Japanese pilot. Expressions of sympathy followed:

"'I wonder if the so and so had a wristwatch?'

"'Who got his pistol?'

"'Maybe the guy in the foxhole.'

Close Shave for GI

"It was agreed that if the guy in the foxhole got the pistol that was O. K. One wing of the plane had torn thru the pup tent a doughboy had over his foxhole. He was awakened rudely but was unhurt.

"The broadcast went on soon after daylight with Joe sticking to the previously censored script that had suddenly grown dull to us. But Joe didn't care. He got a clip of machine gun bullets from the Zero. [So did I.]

"What bothered us were the flea bites. The Okinawa flea is a jet propelled job that covers an amazing lot of territory in a short time and he is accompanied by four motored mosquitos which snap at any uncovered part.

"So anyway, that's the way American broadcasting came to Okinawa."

By Claudia Cassidy

Now that the theater season is just about over, a backward look is a little terrifying. I haven't actually gone thru the files for the usual checkup—that comes in a week or two—but I have the apprehensive feeling that it would be fatal to look over my shoulder. Suddenly I begin to wonder how I stood such evenings as "Catherine Was Great," "Star and Garter," "School for Brides," "That's a Laff" [it wasn't] and what the late Otto Kahn, who lisped, once called "thimilar thour thubjects." Nor is that the half of it. My real concern these spring days is not the inevitable trash thrust upon us by shoestring producers and their more prosperous tho no less shoddy brethren, but rather the dangerous slump in what we get from higher quarters.

Perhaps it wasn't Herman Shumlin's fault that "The Searching Wind" turned out to be a flatulent bore. But the fact that he kept on presenting it gives you pause in connection with the highly selective man who staged "The Little Foxes" and "Watch On the Rhine." Perhaps it wasn't Helen Hayes' fault that "Harriet" was such a load for her a more true than tactful friend said after the opening, "Gosh, Helen, you must be worn out!" Still, it did suggest that Miss Hayes had more interest in a vehicle than in a play, in which case it served her right to have to pull the creaky contraption.

But my major concern is with the Theater Guild, which I have loved in my fashion—my fashion being to pick such high spots as Nazimova in "A Month in the Country," Claude Rains in "Volpone," Judith Anderson in "Strange Interlude" and the Lunts in almost anything, but for choice the gossamer ribaldry and otherwise heady stuff of "Amphitryon." The Guild, as every one knows, suffered a bad slump, and I'm not talking about that at all. There are ups and downs in every business, and show business is a roller coaster with more dips than swoops. I'm talking about the "Oklahoma!" and "Carousel" boom days of right now.

It seems to me the Guild is just possibly playing us for suckers. This year's subscription list of five proposed plays was cut to four when the fifth didn't materialize, and I doubt any one will quarrel about that. But take a look at what we did get: "The Cherry Orchard," "Sing Out, Sweet Land!," "Othello," and "Jacobowsky and the Colonel." Sounds okay on paper.

Happy Days again—as Betty Linley and Carl Benton Reid prepare to advance on the Erlanger as Vinnie and Father himself in the inexhaustible classic, "Life With Father." Opening night is Tuesday, May 29.

In the theater? "The Cherry Orchard" was a down at heel version of the New York revival, with 13 cast changes, most of them inferior. "Sing Out, Sweet Land!" was a second rate musical retrieved from utter failure by that magnificent minstrel, Burl Ives. "Othello" is a moot point. Few Shakespearean productions in our time have had such buildup, and the fact that many of us considered it pedestrian in no way minimized the Guild's gesture in keeping the production as fresh as possible for our benefit. Margaret Webster went to the coast to redirect it for the Erlanger engagement.

If anything of this sort was done for "Jacobowsky and the Colonel," the results escape me. I would recommend the play to any one because of Louis Calhern and Oscar Karlweis, and for the extraordinary charm of that enchanting second act, but Elia Kazan ought to get to work on some of the more crowded scenes, or ask that his name be removed from the billing. Paul Bowles' name is off, and I apologize for anouncing that he wrote a special score. He did, but you don't hear it at the Blackstone, and that billing of it in the souvenir program is about as accurate as the sign over Milwaukee's Davidson the week the play was there. It said "Original New York Cast," pure sucker bait. There are 14 changes in that cast, just in case you are statistical about things.

Maybe the loss of Mr. Bowles' music doesn't matter, but considering the faith Chicago's 15,000 subscribers display in the Theater Guild—they pay their money in advance for a blind date with playgoing—I rather think it does. Eliminating it means cutting down on the quality of the original article for which the tickets were sold. I am told that when Margaret Webster saw "The Glass Menagerie" she said it didn't need the music. That was Mr. Bowles', too, and without it a fragile play would have lost much of its evocative charm. Just mentioning it here sent that sound of crystal bells tinkling in my ear, and suddenly I saw the play as clearly as if I again were caught in its spell at the Civic. If Mr. Bowles did anything comparable for "Jacobowsky," I want to know about it. In fact, being a curious soul, I want to know, anyway.

Speaking of the Guild, the "Menagerie" and the alleged comment by Miss Webster, perhaps you remember some weeks ago when I quoted George Jean Nathan as saying Theresa Helburn turned down "The Glass Menagerie" as a Guild subscription play because "it was too delicate for her to take a chance on." Miss Helburn, the Guild's adored "Terry" of the impish brown face under that queenly swirl of white hair, writes in indignant rebuttal. She mentions "Mr. Nathan's canards about the Theater Guild and myself," his "one sided vendetta," his "irresponsible reporting," and adds, "Nathan's remarks are so discredited by now among New York theatergoers that what he says or does not say does us no harm whatsoever."

To clear things up, Miss Helburn encloses a copy of the letter she wrote Eddie Dowling about "The Glass Menagerie" as a Guild subscription show, dated during the play's run in Chicago. Here are the pertinent paragraphs:

"The play certainly has unusual quality and Laurette [Taylor] gives a gorgeous performance. How clever of you to put her in it. It is hard to know what New York will do to a play that has that fragile beauty. I remember how the critics raved about 'My Heart's in the Highlands' and how the public did not support it! Of course, Laurette and you have a following. Just the same, I think you should try to get the production costs back before you risk the uncertainty of New York.

"As to the matter of the Guild subscription, it looks now as if we would have a fifth play of our own to take care of [the abandoned revival of 'The Winter Tale'] which would prevent our offering the subscription to any outside management. I am sorry."

Maybe I'm batty, as any drama critic has a right to be after a hard season, but to my feeble brain Miss Helburn is saying just what Mr. Nathan said she said. And I still say what I said, to wit, or if the opposition pleases, to halfwit, if major producers are afraid to take a chance on a play like "The Glass Menagerie," viewed not in manuscript but alive and quiveringly lovely on the stage, I'm afraid to take a chance on the producers. No wonder we get so much junk.

HOLLYWOOD—The seven months that Robert Stanton served with the cavalry recently at Ft. Riley, Kas., stood him in good stead for his first scene in "Blondie from Brooklyn." He found he had to ride a hobby horse on a merry-go-round in the picture's night club sequence.

Why Not Give City a Chance—on Both Sides of Footlights?

SITTING wearily thru "Mme. Du Barry" the other night, I kept remembering the reiterated statement of James C. Thompson, who runs both the Civic Opera house and the little Civic theater next door, that he wants to give Chicagoans a chance. Theatrically speaking, that's a fine idea, with two major reservations. The Chicagoans must have something to offer the theater, and they must have a decent chance to prove it. When I say "Mme. Du Barry" isn't a decent chance, I don't just mean it is a vulgar show. Vulgar it is in the cheaper sense of the term, but a vulgar show can be technically a good one. "Du Barry" isn't. It represents a pitifully low ebb of theatrical taste, in writing, staging, and direction. Offering it to the stagestruck as a solution of their theatrical ambitions is like suggesting they hitch their wagon to a star, and neglecting to point out that the star is not the genuine article but its murky reflection in a mud puddle.

Several of the Chicago girls in the show are pretty as freshly painted magazine covers, and one or two of them could dance if the choreography, flossy word, didn't trip them up. For all I know they may have a theatrical future. But neither we nor they will find out while their chores include such dubious exhibitions as girls in a bawdy house who appear in a dance so coarse it's clumsy and so clumsy it's ridiculous. With the clean breeze of "Oklahoma!" still blowing in the musical air, the atmosphere of "Du Barry" is like an unaired, upswept room crowded with stale jokes almost too feeble to leer.

If the opera house is to be used as a production center focused on local talent, why not give that talent a break? Why not throw out the broken down formulas for cheap shows and hire among other things a casting director with eyes in his head, a stage director who knows his business, and a dance director whose roots are at least in the 20th century? Why not decline the discards of the Shubert office and why pretend that grand opera scenery lavishly used in a wild conglomeration of periods will impress any one who isn't blinded by footlights? And most of all, why not pick some good shows? Show business isn't a happy accident. It's the hardest kind of hard work, acutely specialized and fiercely competitive. Movies aren't a joke any more, if you pick your movies, and if they ever get to be as good as "Fighting Lady," look out. Theater can't afford to make itself ridiculous at a $3 top. When I say give Chicagoans a chance, I mean on both sides of the footlights.

What Goes with Our Opera Scenery?

Speaking of opera scenery, what goes? It is being used at the Civic Opera house for concerts, for Tarbell's magic show, and in "Du Barry" it pops up from "Tosca" to "Rosenkavalier," with furniture and props to match. Time was when our resident opera had fabulous wealth at its disposal. When Harold McCormick and Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick withdrew as its munificent patrons, they turned over all operatic assets free of charge to the Chicago Civic Opera company, headed by Samuel Insull. Those assets of scenery, costumes, and other properties were valued at $1,000,000, and during the Insull regime some notable additions vastly increased that valuation. Properly cared for, operatic trappings are a long time investment, and Chicago's are celebrated as among the finest in the world. But when the Insull structure toppled, they were involved in litigation and now are in control of the building corporation thru the 10 year deal with the music foundation. At this rate, there won't be much left in 10 years. Chicagoans interested in a salvage job might consider getting busy.

For Hollyday, Melchior Will Go to Alaska Hunting

One of the larger items really missed during the Metropolitan Opera's visit was Lauritz Melchior, far too busy reaping a fortune in movies and radio to don Wagnerian garb for our pleasure. However, neither he nor his family has changed, witness this excerpt from a birthday letter to Fredric Chramer. By way of explanation, the letter is written by Mrs. Melchior, affectionately known as Kleinchen, a former movie and circus star in Europe, and the Mutti referred to is her mother.

"Lauritz," she writes, "did not start the new picture. He is learning the music for it, beautiful music all List and Mendelson. He enjoyes it. Mutti will appear in Lauritz's next picture, too. She loves the idea. M-G-M offered me a part in a other picture. I refused. I have enough around my ears. Lauritz could have done his first star picture at once after this coming, but we sayed no at once. It would mean no hollydays for Lauritz. He needs vacation and will go from Sept. 1 to Oct. 1 to Alaska hunting. He can do 'Gentleman's Gentleman' April 1st." How about a Tristan tucked in there somewhere?

Vaudeville Idea of Divertissements

What do you make of the Leonide Massine Ballet Russe about to be booked by Fortune Gallo? Appearing with Massine will be Irina Baronova, Rosella Hightower, André Eglevsky, Yura Lazovsky, Anna Istomina, and Kathryn Lee, with Franz Allers conducting. As I understand it there will be no corps de ballet, and the program will consist of high spots from several productions. It sounds like the old vaudeville idea of divertissements, which might not make your true balletomane too happy. An occasional pas de deux can be isolated from its ballet for trimming, but too much of that sort of thing would be like a recital of Shakespearean soliloquies without their plays.

Motherhood for Mary Martin

When "One Touch of Venus" ended its tour the other night, Mary Martin went not to Hollywood, but home to have a baby. At the farewell party she sang her first hit, "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," but had to be prompted on the lyrics, whereupon her old company manager wired her he would have to hold out her salary until she learned her part. Next spring should find Miss Martin in "Lute Song," the Chinese play Ethel Barrymore will direct. Meanwhile, Miss Barrymore will appear in a revival of Philip Barry's "The Joyous Season," which Lillian Gish did about 11 years ago. It will mark Miss Barrymore's second appearance in nun's habit. The first was in "The Kingdom of God."

Okay Only If Invisible

Hedda Hopper suggests Pat O'Brien as the man for Chicago's "Harvey." If you mean actually as Harvey the invisible rabbit, okay, Miss Hopper. But in Frank Fay's part? Never!

All Concerts Will Be Given on Saturdays

By Albert Goldberg

Lauritz Melchoir

Artur Schnabel

The music lover operating on a modest budget will be embarrassed next season not by a dearth of bargain offerings, but by the difficult choice of five major money saving subscription series. The latest to lure prospective subscribers has been christened the Zelzer Concert series, a project of Harry Zelzer, one of the most active and energetic of Chicago concert managers. Altho Mr. Zelzer has been presenting concerts to the Chicago public in considerable numbers for more than 10 years—there were 23 events on his roster during the season just past—this is his first venture into the subscription field.

The major novelty of Mr. Zelzer's plan is that all the seven concerts in his series will be held on Saturday nights at Orchestra hall. Time was when symphony orchestras thruout the country were obliged to change their Saturday night subscription concerts to other days of the week because of the automobile minded public's propensity to flee to the country for week-ends. But now that war time restrictions have largely curtailed that tendency, Saturday night again appears a profitable time to do business with a music hungry population.

Argentinita

Jascha Heifetz

The new series will open on Nov. 10 with the Gen. Platoff Don Cossack Russian male chorus, directed by Nicholas Kostrukoff. This will be followed in order by Lauritz Melchior, noted Wagnerian tenor, now a full fledged Hollywood film star since the release of M-G-M's "Thrill of a Romance," on Dec. 1; Argentinita, Pilar Lopez and their company of Spanish dancers and musicians on Dec. 15; Jascha Heifetz in violin recital on Jan. 19; Paul Draper and Larry Adler in one of their popular combinations of tap dancing and harmonica playing, on Feb. 2; Helen Traubel, famous Wagnerian soprano of the Metropolitan opera, in recital on March 9, and a piano recital by Artur Schnabel to close the series on April 6. Both Heifetz and Schnabel will be making their only Chicago appearances of the season in the Zelzer course, a major argument for many enthusiasts.

Subscription tickets to the series represent a saving of 25 to 50 per cent on single admission costs. The entire main floor and boxes are priced at $16.80 for the seven concerts; balcony seats cost $12.60 for the first nine rows, and $10.50 for the 10th thru the 19th row; the entire gallery of unreserved seats, $6.30. These prices include the 20 per cent government tax. Subscriptions may be purchased by mail from the Harry Zelzer Concert Management, 20 N. Wacker dr., Room 330.

Larry Adler

Helen Traubel

Mr. Zelzer also has on his schedule for next season some 11 other musical events, with a number of bookings still pending. All these attractions will be on a single admission basis. There also is a hint of a program of summer musical activities sponsored by this management.

Rosenwald Fund Fellowships Worth $85,500 Listed

29 Negroes, 1 Indian, Among Those Named

By The Rev. John Evans

The award of 46 Julius Rosenwald Fund fellowships for 1945 was announced yesterday by Edwin R. Embree, president of the fund. The fellows include 29 Negroes, one Indian, and two individuals in a new category opened this year to residents in the north—the field of race relations. The grants totaled $85,500.

Dean Dixon, a symphony conductor among this year's fellows, will devote his fellowship period to developing the American Youth orchestra, which he organized last year, into a major symphonic institution. He proposes to give youth, regardless of race or creed, greater musical opportunity and to foster good music everywhere and particularly in underprivileged areas.

The grant to Woodrow Wilson Crumbo, an American Indian, will enable him to continue, thru his paintings, to portray his native culture in its rites, ceremonials, and everyday life. Among authors to receive awards were Elizabeth Harding, whose first novel, "The Ghostly Lover" was published this month, and Bucklin Moon who wrote "The Darker Brother."

Richard Hamme, president of his local of the United Transport Service Employes of America was given a fellowship to permit him to study under the Trade Union fellowship project at Harvard university.

Dean Frank C. Whitmore of Pennsylvania State college has been awarded the 1945 Willard Gibbs medal of the Chicago section of the American Chemical society. The award was announced by Dr. R. E. Zinn, chairman of the section. The medal award was founded by William A. Converse, secretary of the Chicago section from 1901 to 1909. It is made annually "to any one who, because of his eminent work in, and original contributions to, pure and applied chemistry, is deemed worthy of special recognition."

Dean Whitmore, formerly head of the chemistry department, Northwestern university, is an authority on mercury drugs, has developed a general theory on molecular rearrangements in organic chemistry and is now doing research on aviation fuels, anti-malaria, and penicillin.

Two years ago when Greek was dropped from the curriculum of Colgate university, Hamilton, N. Y., Dr. J. Curtiss Austin, chairman of the department of classics, made the following prediction: "Reaction of students to war time course, plus the appreciation that the classics have an intangible value for which there is no substitute, will result in a post-war survival of Greek and Latin.

His prediction has been fulfilled. The current class in elementary Greek at Colgate university is the largest since 1932 with two marines, five navy men, and four civilians.

Notes of the Theater

Carl Benton Reid, the newest Father Day to descend upon Chicago—that will be Tuesday evening, May 29, when "Life with Father" invades the Erlanger—first came to our admiring attention during the world's fair when he played Shakespeare at the Old Globe and made a swashbuckling hit as Petruchio in "The Taming of the Shrew." A Michigan boy from Battle Creek, he had prefaced that lively adventure with a round of business studies, but all that changed when he discovered the theater at Carnegie Tech. This sent him into several stock companies and into Broadway plays from "The Greeks Had a Word for It" to "Her Man of Wax," with Lenore Ulric. But the Old Globe was his passport to fame, and tho Petruchio was his best role with audiences, he preferred Bottom the weaver in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." His first New York success was in "The Little Foxes," and since then he has played in "The Cherry Orchard" and "Papa Is All." Movies also cast him in "Tennessee Johnson" and "North Star."

Jane Cowl will return to the stage in the fall as Beatrice in her own production of "Much Ado About Nothing." This will be her third Shakespearean role. The most famous was her Juliet with Rollo Peters and Dennis King, and much later came Viola in "Twelfth Night."

Leona Powers

Leona Powers, who plays the mother in "Dear Ruth," has made a cycle of Chicago appearances which began with her debut around the turn of the century when she played the child, Dick, in "Lovers' Lane," at McVickers'. She went on to New York, playing child parts with Richard Mansfield, and toured with Maude Adams in "Peter Pan." Retiring briefly to outgrow the so-called awkward age, she came back in a Denver stock company and has had a busy life ever since.

Ruth Chatterton also plans a fall comeback, in a play about the declining fame of a movie star, which is called "You Twinkle Only Once."

That second company of "The Glass Menagerie" is now slated to open in Detroit Sept. 3, with Pauline Lord in the Laurette Taylor role and possibly Janet Blair in the Julie Haydon part. Meanwhile, box-office returns in New York have boosted Miss Taylor's salary along with the acquisition of 5 per cent of the profits. Eddie Dowling now has 20 per cent as co-producer, 3 per cent as director, and 7½ per cent of the intake against a weekly guarantee.

Uniformly Excellent Revues Brighten City's Cafes

Ted Lewis and Co. Superb at Latin Quarter

By Will Davidson

Ted Lewis

You can look back in the book a long way before you'll find a period in which Chicago's cafes have had such uniformly excellent shows to offer. From the Edgewater Beach hotel to the Stevens, there is a stack of talent on display.

Newest entries are those of the Hotel Sherman, the Rio Cabana, the Latin Quarter; and the La Salle hotel. Space doesn't permit full description of all of them this week, but mark it down in your book that most of those spots have never had better shows.

You have to give the prize, however, to Ted Lewis and his superb Latin Quarter show. The Hat is at his peak, with a very good band, a host of talented assistants, and the time tried showmanship that has always been his mark of excellence.

Ted's formula for entertainment is simple—it is Basic Bistro. He uses nostalgia and well ripened corn as a base. Into that he stirs youthful beauty—a commodity he always has used generously—comedy, good music. All are blended with speed and deft smoothness into as delectable a dish as you could ask.

Take them one by one: There are in the youth and beauty category, the Reed sisters, his harmony trio who work with the band at all times, blending voice with music in unusual effects similar to an especially beautiful string selection. The Reed sisters also give "Ac-Cent-Tchu-Ate The Positive" a nice airing in the show.

SONGSTRESS

One of the attractions offered by George Olsen's orchestra in the Empire room of the Palmer House is the singing of beautiful little Judith Blair. George's band shares star billing with Henny Youngman.

There are the Dewy sisters, two limber girls whose contortion and acrobatic dances are amazing. There is Patti Thomas, the GI angel who has served so long on the foxhole circuit. Her Hawaiian war chant tap dance is a honey. There is beautiful Geraldine DuBoise, who, introduced by Ted's "Isn't She a Pretty Thing?" sings with excellent phrasing and a lot of charm. And there is Audrey Zinns, just about the best of the baton twirlers.

For comedy Ted offers Paul White and Elroy Peace, two of the most agile and funniest Negro dancers in the business. Whitey is a long time Lewis aid. Elroy is a young newcomer, replacing the famous Snowball Whittier who now is in the army. He is wonderful, and a future "Snowball" himself. Whitey is a large lipped zany with the elegant sense of hilarious humor. His version of "Ac-Cent-Tchu-Ate" is great, and his tearful interlude a masterpiece of broad comedy.

Ted himself is the cohesive agent that binds this show together—and he doesn't forget any of his standard bits. This, my friends, is a show for your money!

The Rio Cabana has put together one of its very best revues, but it isn't yet quite complete, and for that reason I'm going to wait until next Sunday to go into it more in detail. The change will be made next Tuesday when Donn Arden installs his own line numbers featuring the songs of Jerry Abbott, who is doing a single in the current show.

Stars of the Rio riot are Frances Faye and Lenny Kent. Lenny holds over from the previous show, with very good reason. Frances is in top form, and you can still hear her sing that wonderful satire, "A Man Will Always Be a Dog." Maurice and Maryea are suave and delightful as ever, and Cee Davidson continues his good music making.

• • •

The Hotel Sherman is offering a large size show package, too. The big feature, of course, is Jimmy Dorsey's band and its group of entertainers. Jimmy was a little too much of a decibelringer on opening night, and the shock of his emphatic brass section destroyed some of the beauty of his good arrangements. Noise, of course, always is a problem in the low-ceilinged College Inn, and Jimmy probably is rationing lung power by now.

The orchestra starts the show with a better than average version of the famous "King Porter Stomp," and at intervals during the revue comes up with such choice bits as "John Silver," "Lover," and "Holiday for Strings."

Jean Cromwell, youngest of the former sister trio, is a featured vocalist, being especially effective in "I'm Beginning to See the Light."

As extras, the Sherman offers the wildly wonderful dancing of Derby Wilson and Frenchy, the songs of the Dinning sisters, and the piano impetuosities of Robert Crum. Robert is gauging his audiences much better now, and his extremely interesting improvisations are finding the response they deserve. The Dinnings belie their name by being very easy on the ears. They are clever and well supplied with talent and arrangements.

• • •

With Del Courtney still its untoppable star, the Blackhawk is presenting now its best show in a long time. Pretty Marjorie Lane has been held over and does her fresh, airy routines with a very laudable ease and simplicity. I especially like her work for its lack of pretense. Marjorie is a very pretty girl who knows quite a lot about dancing. Enough, certainly, not to force herself to attempt at once routines that she someday will be able to handle with ease.

The newest attraction in the Blackhawk revue is the Imaginators, that young trio of phonograph-pantomimists. I have never found this form of entertainment too exhilarating, at least since the Makebelieves first revived it, but the Imaginators do a good job of straight playing. Their most original effort is Beatrice Kay's "Italian Street Song." It is quite funny.

Dotty Dotson is doing her wonderful songs, as usual.

Tommy Dorsey will play a one-night stand at the Aragon next Saturday and the Trianon will introduce Benny Strong's orchestra on May 29.

• • •

The Edgewater Beach hotel, while marking time until Wayne King's return in June, is presenting a show that stars one of the really fine marionette acts — Arthur Nelson's. Mr. Nelson is well known in Chicago, and always welcome. His dolls are masterpieces of his own design, and his manipulation has a fineness of touch and a sensitivity of feeling that is missing from most such acts. Imagination is a strong point with him, as witness the delightful quality of his clown routine, or the pathetic situation of his unhappy toper.

Making up in enthusiasm what he lacks in finish, Terry O'Donnell is doing the song chores in this show. His "Oklahoma!" medley is by far his best. The Dorothy Hild dancers offer several typical numbers, best of which is done to Chopin's "Fantasie Impromptu."

Boswelling the Bistros:

End of the curfew and signing of Carl Brisson for a six week run starting June 1 probably saved the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel from at least a summer shutdown. . . . Willie Shore, who did such a good job at the Chicago theater, goes into the Oriental soon, a record of some sort—and much deserved. . . . One of the funniest shows in town was an impromptu one given a week ago by Victor Borge at a cocktail party in his honor. Victor's wonderful specialty is ad librettos.

Now It's 'Girl We'd Like to Take Long Walk With'

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — Sergeants John Christenson and Gene Meller, editor and associate editor of the "Desert Bomber," base newspaper at Tonopah army air field, have picked Isabelita, clever Latin-American singer and dancer, as "the girl we'd most like to have a long walk with," after seeing her in "Pan-Americana."

Notes of Music and Musicians

Leon Fleischer, 17 year old California pianist described by Pierre Monteux as "the pianistic find of the century," will make his midwestern debut at the Ravinia festival on Tuesday, July 31, and will be heard again on Saturday, Aug. 4, with Leonard Bernstein conducting. Fleischer, a pupil of Artur Schnabel, made his debut with the San Francisco Symphony orchestra under Monteux's direction in 1943 and followed this last season with several appearances with the New York Philharmonic during Monteux's period as guest conductor. As previously announced, the 10th annual Ravinia Festival of concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra will open on Saturday evening, June 30, with Désiré Defauw conducting his only concert of the season. Mr. Defauw's contributions will consist of the overture to Wagner's "The Flying Dutchman" and Tschaikowsky's Fifth symphony. Two musicians now in navy service at Great Lakes will be the soloists at this concert in Brahms' Concerto for violin and cello: Oscar Chausow and Frank Miller, the former on leave from the Chicago Symphony's first violins, and the latter before his enlistment Toscanini's first cellist with the NBC Symphony.

• • •

The concert of the Chicago Piano Symphony orchestras at Orchestra hall on Friday at 8:15 will be a tribute to Herman Devries, noted retired music critic of the Chicago Herald-American. Two of Mr. Devries' compositions will be played. Soloists will be Geraldine Amber, coloratura soprano; Edward Merkley, violinist, and Julius Robinson, pianist.

• • •

Elva Merideth, pianist of Denver, Colo., will make her debut here in recital at Kimball hall on Friday at 8:20. Her program lists Mozart's Sonata in A major, the Bach-Tausig Toccata and Fugue, Beethoven's "Appassionata" sonata, a Prelude and Etude by Chopin, Liszt's transcription of Schubert's "Am Meer," Rubinstein's "Staccato Etude," the Verdi-Liszt "Rigoletto" paraphrase, and Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2.

• • •

The De Paul University Symphony orchestra, conducted by Richard Czerwonky, and the university choir, Arthur C. Becker conducting, will appear in a joint concert under the auspices of the De Paul Alumni association at Orchestra hall on Tuesday at 8:15. The orchestra will play Dvorak's "New World" symphony and Sibelius' "Finlandia," and will be joined by the chorus in a scene from Grieg's "Olaf Trygvason." Rose Goldberg will be the piano soloist in Tschaikowsky's B flat minor concerto.

• • •

The American Daughters of Sweden chorus, Harry T. Carlson director, will give a concert next Sunday afternoon, May 27, in the Swedish club, 1258 N. La Salle st., at 3:30. Charles Sears, tenor, will be the soloist.

• • •

Subscription tickets for next season's Musical Arts Piano series will be placed on general sale May 21, as the renewal period for old subscribers ends. Series tickets range from $1.50 to $5, including 20 per cent tax for a course that includes Egon Petri, Percy Grainger, Josef Hofmann, Robert Casadesus, Alexander Uninsky, and Jeanne Panot. Orders should be sent to the Adult Education council, 224 S. Michigan av., Chicago.

• • •

The Chicago Singing Teachers guild offers the ninth annual W. W. Kimball company prize of $100 for a song for solo voice with piano accompaniment, text to be selected by the composer. In addition to the prize the Guild guarantees publication of the prize winning manuscript. Rules of the competition may be obtained from E. Clifford Toren, North Park college, 3225 Foster av., Chicago. Winner of this year's competition was Sydney King Russel, with a song entitled "Harbor Night."

• • •

The Chicago Umbrian Glee club under the direction of William H. Jones will give its 50th anniversary concert at Orchestra hall next Sunday afternoon, May 27, at 3:15. Jacqueline Gladys Palmer, soprano, and John Greene, baritone, will be the soloists.

• • •

De Paul university school of music is sponsoring an Inter-American Chopin contest for pianists, the finals of which will be held in Chicago in May, 1946. The major award will be $1,000 and an appearance with an unspecified major orchestra. A board of governors will operate the contest, consisting of Sergei Tarnowsky, Rudolph Ganz, Felix Borowski, Désire Defauw, Arthur C. Becker, and Olin Downes.

Critic Flays Critics Who Flay Critics

By John Chapman

NEW YORK [Special] — Play reviewers, as usual, are coming in for a deal of chiding—and something new has been added: They are snooting themselves. Not each other; themselves.

A reader has given me a severe curry-combing for not having gone crazy over Edward Chodorov's "Common Ground," which she found inspiring, important drama. She says the notices have all but ruined a great play; at least, the night she was there the audience wasn't very big — but it was, she said, the most enthusiastic audience she has seen recently.

If her report on the enthusiasm of her neighbors is correct, neither she nor Mr. Chodorov, the author, need worry about the future of "Common Ground." It will get along no matter what the reviews were.

• • •

As a matter of fact, my notice was as good as I could make it. I thought the writing, acting, and direction were pungent and direct, but was not vastly impressed by the theme so familiar in the movies of a cross-section of Americans facing death, or by the more-than-occasional philosophical soliloquies. I am a little like Elliott Nugent in "The Voice of the Turtle." He and Betty Field are getting acquainted by talking about themselves and they get on the subject of plays. Nugent says he doesn't like plays where people go very mad, or plays about men who are paralyzed from the waist down, or "plays where a lot of people all get caught together in a catastrophe — a flood, or an earthquake, or an air raid—and all face death in a lump."

SALOME

Yvonne De Carlo has the leading role in "Salome, Where She Danced." Palace.

Well, the lady who disapproves of me on "Common Ground" thinks I have taken an unserious attitude—and of course everybody always says that a critic will kill a play for the sake of a good gag [a highly mistaken public belief].

And now some of the reviewers, whose minds have been enlarged by some kind of service in the war, are beginning to belittle the trade they once followed and look down their noses at the drama because it doesn't seem to be very important after all. Richard Watts Jr., once the play judge of the Herald Tribune and more recently a correspondent and OWI man on many fronts, has written a piece in a magazine called "Go" in which he says the theatergoing isn't what it used to be. And the American stage is pretty flimsy.

J. Brooks Atkinson, once the critic of the Times, spent a long, long time on the China front, has returned, and has shown no inclination to return to an aisle seat. Reports are he wants to do some more corresponding in Moscow. John Mason Brown, once of the World-Telegram and latterly of the navy, has returned to civilian pursuits as roving reviewer for the Saturday Review of Literature—but Mr. Brown has insisted that he must have something in addition to the stage to occupy his mind and can cover movies, books, and other subjects, too.

The excitements and values of foreign correspondence are immense, and I have had a share of such pursuits. But I find, too, that the excitements and values of playgoing are considerable, and feel no shame either for self or the stage. Perhaps it is because I do not demand too much of the drama.

As a molder of opinion the play has sometimes done important work, but not often. It is cumbersome, and cannot by its physical limitations be as up to the minute or as roundly detailed as the printed word. When Abraham Lincoln called Harriet Beecher Stowe the little lady who started a war he wasn't thinking of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the play; he was thinking of the novel.

Every reviewer of conscience does his utmost to encourage whatever there is of thought and literature in the stage—but I think one should face the fact that plays appeal to emotions rather than to intellect; even the great tragedies move one's soul rather than one's mind. The drama is more entertainment than it is instruction—but I am not one to look down upon it on this account. One of this country's three cardinal aims has been "the pursuit of happiness," and to provide a good time is one of the finest works of man.

I envy Messrs. Watts, Atkinson, and Brown their travels, their experiences in the world's most tremendous and horrible event, the insights they have gained. But I won't let them feel sorry for me. And I won't insist that the theater beat its poor brain around trying to think all the time.

As to writing about the theater with humor—this is fine if one is up to it and the humor has a point other than plain cruelty. Even a truly great critic would have a limited audience if he lacked it; an audience limited to professionals and devotees. Only professionals and devotees, I think, remember much about Boston's H. T. Parker, who once wrote a 3,000 word review of "Mourning Becomes Electra" and then said at the end that space didn't permit discussion of the performances by Nazimova and Alice Brady. But everybody remembers Percy Hammond.

Hammond was sensitive to the fine things in the theater—but what makes us remember him were his rapier-pointed wit, his highly flavorsome style, and his brevity. We remember Alexander Woollcott, too—before he took to doing needlepoint on a typewriter and overdecorating anecdotes—for the bubbling, happy quality of his first night reports.

The stage, I am afraid, is not as serious as some people think it ought to be. Thank goodness.

Sensational Old Mystery Re-examined

"ELIZABETH IS MISSING: An Eighteenth Century Mystery," by Lillian de la Torre. [Knopf, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Here at last, one fancies, we have the definitive study of a classic British mystery. Elizabeth Canning, a servant girl of London, disappeared on New Year's night, 1753, and was not seen again until she stumbled home, bleeding, emaciated, and half naked, on Jan. 29, when she reported that she had been set upon by footpads, robbed, and dragged to the house of one Mother Wells at Enfield Wash, where, refusing to become a harlot, she was abused by an old gypsy and imprisoned in the garret on bread and water.

Susannah Wells was sentenced to six months in Newgate and branded upon the thumb. The gypsy, Mary Squires, was sentenced to death.

But the gypsy had an alibi; and it convinced the lord mayor of London. On his instigation the case was reopened and the gypsy cleared. Elizabeth Canning was tried for perjury, adjudged guilty, and sentenced to seven years' banishment.

She came to Wethersfield, Conn., where she married and had children and where she died in 1773. To the end of her life she maintained that she had told the truth.

The Canning mystery was one of the sensations of the 18th century. It divided London between Canningites and Egyptians; and some of the partisans were so ardent that they would not even mingle with their opponents socially.

• • •

Betty Canning convinced the great Henry Fielding, who was drawn into her orbit in his capacity as magistrate, of the justice of her cause, and a hundred years later she convinced Andrew Lang.

Arthur Machen, on the other hand, in one of his least significant books, "The Canning Wonder," went over to her enemies. Mr. Machen's speculations on the case agreed with those of the anti-Canningites of the 18th century in taking the ugliest sexual turn possible.

Miss De la Torre combines the detective story writer's gift for hypothesis with the scholar's zeal for the examination of evidence. Her method is to tell the story as a story in minute detail and then to sift the evidence before the reader's eyes. Her conclusion is that Elizabeth Canning's story was a web of truth and falsehood, but that Betty herself was hardly aware of the element of falsehood in it. "She never told her secret; she never knew what it was." She was abducted; she was placed in Mother Wells' garret; she did escape. But she was an hysterical subject and she spent most of her time at Enfield Wash in an amnesic state; ignorance, fear, and imagination—not mendacity—supplied these details of her testimony which do not accord with the known facts of the case.

There is much that is speculative in all this, much which reminds us that the author is a writer of fiction. But she plays fair with her reader; she withholds no clews. And hers is perhaps the only theory so far which covers all aspects of the case. She steers her way between the Scylla of the sentimentalists, who ignore the discrepancies and contradictions in Betty's story, and the Charybdis of the defamers, whose explanations are quite out of harmony with what we know of the girl's character. Moreover, her explanation has the merit of agreeing with the medical evidence.

In short, "Elizabeth Is Missing" is an indispensable book—for connoisseurs of mystery, for students of the 18th century, for those who enjoy exploring the byways of history, and [last but not least] for all who love a beautifully made and illustrated book. Miss De la Torre generally writes very well, but somebody should tell her that one does not achieve colloquial ease by forgetting one's literary manners some four or five times in the course of 250 pages. The really appalling taste she shows on these occasions is the only serious fault in an excellent book.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

IT seems clear at this writing that the death of Adolf Hitler is destined to be one of history's most perplexing riddles. Whatever happens now, whether or not a corpse is discovered that will satisfy official inquiry, future historians will raise doubts about the hour and the manner of his passing. Our great-grandchildren are certain to read some interesting conjectures.

At the moment, four bodies found in Berlin have been tentatively identified and set aside for further inquisition. It is a brilliant beginning for a mystery story, and a mystery story is precisely what is in the making. In the event of a "no decision" verdict, possibly the four skulls should be distributed among the principal museums of the allied nations in the interest of post-war tourism. The situation would not be without precedent. Several skulls of the late Christopher Columbus are exhibited around the world, I believe. Mark Twain saw two of them on his travels, years ago—"one when he was a boy and one when he was a man," the humorist explained.

For that matter, I can produce from my own files categorical accounts of two separate and distinct skulls of Oliver Cromwell. They are in private collections, but are shown on request.

Heroes Become Myths

Be all this as it may, anybody—hero or villain—who has been ostentatiously in the public eye, has an excellent chance of becoming a myth if his taking-off is sufficiently picturesque, more particularly if there is some mystery about the proceedings. The age of mythology is not over, and there is as yet no housing problem in Valhalla. It might appear, indeed, that there is not even a segregated district in the place for scoundrels. Hero and villain dwell together in neighborly consanguinity, for the most part, in this romantic, sentimentalized country of the mind. There's always room for one more—even for a gangster like Hitler.

Hero worship, overt or tacit, manifests itself in strange ways. One of the most curious is the reluctance of certain minds to credit the passing of a commanding figure in human affairs. It is a form of superstition, and one of the most deeply rooted of human instincts. For years the legend was current in Europe that the Napoleon who ended his days on St. Helena was a substitute figure, that it was the body of some obscure guardsman that was placed in the great marble tomb in Paris. Bonaparte, said those who claimed to be in the know, died and was buried in Italy. There were once persons in number, in our own country, who believed that Jesse James lived out a long life, white-bearded and benevolent, in some leafy hole in the Ozarks.

Survival of Charles I.

One of the most famous "survivals" in popular superstition was Charles I., king of England. Soon after the last scene on the scaffold at Whitehall, in 1649, a remarkable rumor began to spread. People whispered that it was not Charles but one of his devoted followers who had suffered under the axe. The king himself, they said, had been smuggled away and had assumed the personality of Elias Ashmole, the bibliophile and antiquary who founded the Ashmolean museum at Oxford.

It was not difficult to obtain credence for such stories in the days when the mass of the people was illiterate and every rumor gained strength and color as it passed from mouth to mouth; but the history of human credulity contains some revealing chapters in the 20th century, too. Until the end of World War I. proved them wrong thousands of persons refused to believe that Lord Kitchener had gone down in the Hampshire; and even afterward there were some who thought of him as living on, inexplicably, in some German village.

The mendacity of history is notorious, but it is ourselves who are responsible for it. Centuries ago Plutarch complained of the difficulty of finding out the truth of anything. It is still difficult enough—and when it isn't we make it that way.

World's Greatest Book Giver

Some delightful inscriptions are found in second-hand books. One, the most famous of all, may be found in every bookshop, repeated in a thousand and one volumes, with a single change of phrase in each. It is this: "Horace, with love from Mamma." The change substitutes Wilbur for Horace, or Burton, or Llewellyn, or Stanley, or Paul or Betty, or Virginia, or Dorothy, or perhaps Mary Alice. The number of volumes so inscribed is prodigious—incredible—and reveals a phenomenon which, I think, has escaped the attention of Holbrook Jackson and other anatomists of bibliomania.

It is obvious that "Mamma" has given away more books than any person who ever lived; and the question is: Who was—or is—this "Mamma" whose dispensations aggregate more than the total registration of all the Carnegie libraries of the world? Borrow carried the Bible to Spain and made an admirable job of distribution, but "Mamma" has spread the printed word from China to Peru in a hundred languages and dialects.

"Mamma," greatest of colporteurs, dean of all free library movements, is entitled to wider celebrity and recognition than—I venture to think—she ever has received. I am surprised that I should be, as I believe, the first to call this matter to public attention.

Author Suppresses Himself

Among the interesting legends that have grown up about Joel Townsley Rogers, author of "The Red Right Hand," one of Simon & Schuster's fine mysteries, the most fabulous, say his publishers, is the one about the attic in which he stores the manuscripts he refused to sell because they fell short of a self-imposed standard. For such spartan judgment—if the legend be true—this department has only admiration. Most writers wish, too late, that they had possessed a similar fortitude, and some even try to buy up and abolish their early works. For these latter Somerset Maugham has a word of comfort in "The Summing Up." He is speaking of two novels, carrying his name, which had been made from unsuccessful plays:

"For long they lay on my conscience like a discreditable action; I would have given much to suppress them. But I know now that my qualms were unnecessary. Even the greatest authors have written a number of very poor books. Balzac himself left a good many out of the 'Comedie Humaine', and of those he inserted there are several that only the student troubles to read. The writer can rest assured that the books he would like to forget will be forgotten."

Authors are not always good judges of their own work, however, in view of which Miss Lee Wright, Simon & Schuster's famous hatchet woman, is planning a raid on Mr. Townsley Rogers' attic.

CHARLESTON'S PRIDE AND BYGONE GRANDEUR

Two Sisters Spend Lives in Feuding

"PRIDE'S WAY," by Robert Molloy. [Macmillan, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Charleston in 1910, with its past as alive as its present; Charleston before the days of hordes of northern tourists who settled on its famed gardens like bees on their blooms; Charleston long before the recent war time Yankee awakening of a city which had the serenity and loveliness of the Sleeping Beauty; Charleston in which pride was part of the social currency is the scene of one of the season's most delightful light novels.

Its heroines are in their seventies and its events no more adventurous than the shifting about of their aged and tenuous footholds on comfort and spiritual grace. But Mr. Molloy has made the two old ladies more vivid than the heroines of most tales of high adventure, and its events more amusing.

Of Charleston and its psychology, Mr. Molloy has done a tenderly satiric sketch. The pride, the supersensitiveness, the fear, the gossip, the subterfuges to cover up the "queerness" in the family, the actual spiritual nourishment which the old ladies get out of the memory of their former Gerard grandeur, the simple religious faith is all pictured with deeply tender understanding but satiric glee.

The two old ladies are sisters. The elder, Miss Julie, lives comfortably with her daughter and her son-in-law. The younger by two years, Miss Tessie, a widow, whose six children have died—partly thru her stubbornness, her sister declares—lives proudly by herself and goes out nursing. The sisters have not spoken for six years. Their long lives have been punctuated by such quarrels. They meet in church on the day that Father Dodd talks about the family bickerings in Charleston. His eloquence, lost on the many, profoundly moves the two old ladies and altho they royally snub each other from habit, by the next morning they are both determined to make up the quarrel.

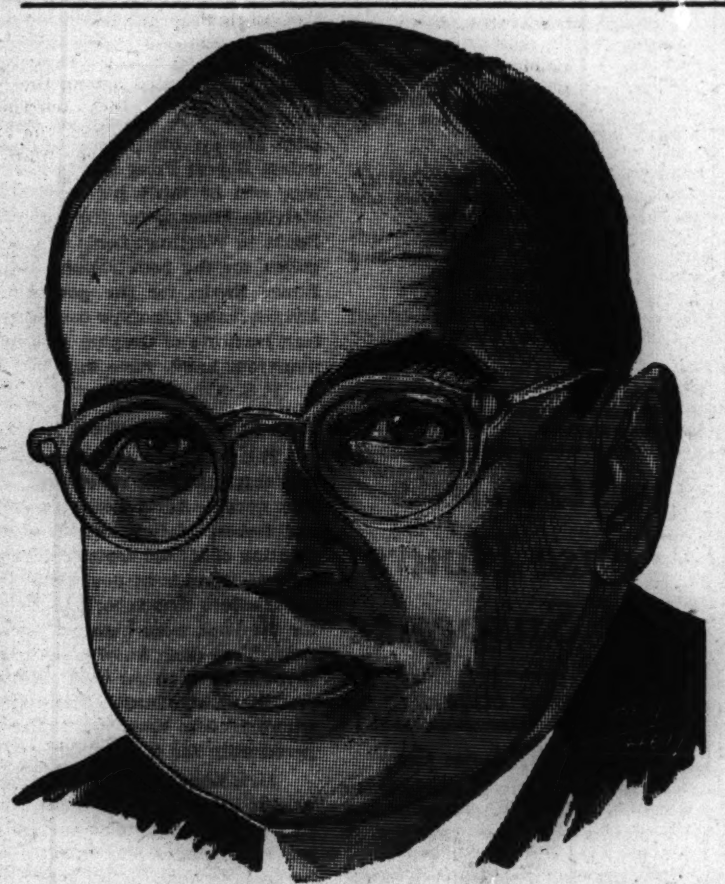
Miss Tessie, as mean-tongued and difficult and stiff-necked an old lady as delighted readers could hope to find in literature, happens to be present when for the first time Miss Julie, very deaf, hears of her son-in-law's purchase of a new and much more luxurious house. Miss Julie's hurt pride at not being consulted, prodded by her sister Tessie's sharp tongue, becomes so tender that she finally does what Miss Tessie wants. She leaves her comfortable home, and goes to live with Miss Tessie. A year of increasing discomfort and squabblings and a final blowup follows, but pride still triumphs, tho every one is distressed emotionally, socially, and economically because of the gossip.

But it is Miss Tessie who really proves the rending thorn in the social side of the house, for she becomes the butt of local gossip as "queer."

How she gets queerer and queerer and how Miss Julie finally reacts to her sister's becoming the center of the stage is tenderly and understandingly pictured with no loss of its inherent humor.

• • •

"Pride's Way" is subtle and delicious satire of the whims and stubbornness of the aged as well as of the social and private prides of a proud city. It has the inimitable fragrance of the opopanax blossoms which Charleston housewives dry to scent their linen. Unlike those home loving yellow blooms, however, which mysteriously refuse to travel, "Pride's Way" will probably prove even more delicious to northern readers than it will to Miss Julie's and Miss Tessie's and the author's fellow Charlestonians.



Robert Molloy, author of "Pride's Way," reviewed on this page by Fanny Butcher.

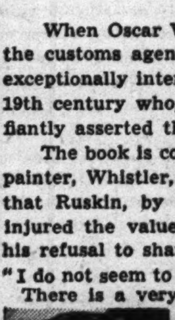
Writers and Artists Whose Ways Disturbed Victorians

"THE AESTHETIC ADVENTURE," by William Gaunt. [Harcourt, Brace, $3.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle

When Oscar Wilde arrived in America for a lecture tour he informed the customs agent that he had nothing to declare but his genius. This exceptionally interesting book is about people like that—those men in the 19th century who, in the face of a rising and successful materialism, defiantly asserted the rightness of pure art.

The book is concerned with such things as the lawsuit of the American painter, Whistler, against the English critic, John Ruskin, on the ground that Ruskin, by calling Whistler a "coxcomb" and a "Cockney," had injured the value of his paintings. It is about Walter Pater explaining his refusal to share in snowball fights at school in Canterbury by saying, "I do not seem to want a black eye."



William Gaunt

There is a very amusing account of Ruskin trying to carry out his dignity of labor ideas by taking a group of idealistic young men out to a village near Oxford [some of them in cabs, carrying their own picks], to mend a stretch of road. And Ruskin himself built a brick pillar on the new Oxford museum, to show that construction was a noble art. The pillar was torn down after he left and rebuilt solidly by the workmen. There is the fine anecdote about Whistler who, when a dear old lady said to him, "I am sorry to hear you are in difficulties," replied gayly, "O, don't pity me. Pity the poor devils that won't get their money."

Whistler moves thru the book a strange and vigorous figure, an American living in England but admiring only the French. A man of admirable energy, he could shake his fist at the teeth of British conservatism and announce that the Academy artists had tried to drive him out of the country, remarking, "And if I hadn't had the constitution of a government mule they would."

As a history of the aesthetic movement in the last half of the 19th century this is probably the wittiest and fullest account. Thru its pages moves a succession of curious men, from Wilde snarling back at the questions of the opposing lawyer at his trial [when one of Wilde's epigrams was read in court, with the imputation that it might corrupt the young, Wilde replied, "I should think that the young have enough sense of humor"], to the French artist Degas commenting on some of Whistler's inferior later work, "It must be very tiring to keep up the role of butterfly. Better to be an old bull like me."

• • •

And there is the pitiful tale of James Thomson, author of "The City of Dreadful Night," who was sentenced to two weeks in jail so that he could be admitted to the jail hospital for treatment. The book is full of that kind of thing. It shows, in an unexpected way, how far we have come in the general acceptancce of the artist by society. With the result that there is no longer need for the artist to flaunt his difference in the dazzled eyes of his country.

Ontario, the Orphan Member of Our Great Lakes Family

"LAKE ONTARIO," by Arthur Pound. [Bobbs-Merrill, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Lorado Taft's symbolic fountain of the Great Lakes which stands beside the Chicago Art institute shows Lake Ontario as turning away from her sisters, heedless of the source of the water which flows from their vessels into her own. She is not contained in the midland basin; her currents and commerce are directed toward the St. Lawrence and the open sea.

That conception is borne out in Mr. Pound's solid and substantial history of the Lake Ontario region. Cut off from the other lakes by the plunging fall of Niagara, this lake was originally a separate body with scant part in the trade that grew on the upper lakes. With a series of stony rapids at the other end, it was cut off from the St. Lawrence. Even the canals, the capacious Welland canal by-passing Niagara and the inadequate St. Lawrence canal skirting the rapids, have not opened it to the enormous trade of the other lakes, because the coal and iron commerce links the coal regions of Lake Erie and the iron ranges of Lake Superior. Ontario is left as a way out to sea, and since the St. Lawrence canal has a depth of just 14 feet, it is a strictly limited way.

Arthur Pound

For these reasons Ontario is the least related subject in the American lakes series, and this volume remains apart from the chronicle of a trade in fur and lumber, coal and iron, and of multitudes of new settlers thronging lake vessels on their way to the northwest. And the record of Ontario is less marine than that of the other lakes. Most of this volume remains ashore.

There was, however, an abundance of significant events in the Ontario region. The Indian wars, the see-saw naval struggle in 1813, the opening of the Erie canal are presented here in living terms. Toronto and Rochester are subjects of illuminating chapters, and there runs thru the book a sense of the common aspiration and common destiny that link the United States and Canada. There is a detailed account of hydroelectric development, but one wishes there were a fuller discussion of the projected St. Lawrence seaway which would bring to Lake Ontario the unimpeded flow of world trade.

Why Nippon's Army Perils World Peace

"JAPANESE MILITARISM, Its Cause and Cure," by John M. Maki. [Knopf, $3.]

Reviewed by Philo M. Buck Jr.

One of the galling experiences of American prisoners of war and civilian internees who are held by the Japanese is the rule that they must salute the Japanese private soldier. The barbaric victor's pride. But there is more in it than that; the gesture is a liturgy, and behind it are more than a thousand years of history and tradition.

• • •

A few weeks ago I reviewed Otto Tolischus' "Through Japanese Eyes," a documented description of the Japanese mind as it acts and thinks today. This book by Mr. Maki, an American Japanese, scholar and teacher, reviews the Japanese past to show the long-ago beginnings and the consistent growth of the dominant tradition that is military Japan today. It is history and interpretation. It is a long story of a military oligarchy that more than a thousand years ago became the dominant power of a totalitarian state.

It nursed the idea of the divine emperor; it edited the old myths that made Japan a sacred country; it found gods that fathered the Japanese people.

• • •

The Japanese soldier-sentry is the modern samurai, a member of the warrior oligarchy, super-excellent in his person and of an exalted race. To salute him is to acknowledge his superiority, physical, moral, and spiritual. For there is an essential difference between him and all other soldiers. He is a warrior first and last. Our soldiers are citizens first, and warriors only "for the duration." He is close to the descendant of the goddess of the sun. It is this double uniqueness, his own, and his emperor's, that has made the Japanese soldier, until he is reëducated, an ever present danger to world peace.

V-E Broadcast by Corwin Is Poetic

"ON A NOTE OF TRIUMPH," by Norman Corwin. [Simon and Schuster, $1.50.]

This is Norman Corwin's V-E celebrational broadcast, translated from sound to black on white. While it lacks the moving reading of Martin Gabel, the narrator on the radio, the vivid sound effects, and the original music of Bernard Herrmann, it is still an eloquent and forceful prayer that we will build a better world. Corwin insists it is not a poem, but it is poetic in style, suggestive of Walt Whitman and Stephen Vincent Benet. It has power and punch.

Place of Korea in Culture of Orient

"KOREA AND THE OLD ORDERS IN EASTERN ASIA," by M. Frederick Nelson. [Louisiana State University Press, $3.75.]

Korea's peculiar relation to China and the rest of the world can be understood only by comprehending Korea's place in the pattern of Confucian culture, and by tracing the puzzling dealings between men of western thought and men of eastern thought—when each was Greek to the other. In his Ph.D. thesis, Lt. [j. g.]] Nelson, really a Texas A. & M. history professor, carefully expounds the Confucian fundamental ideas and shows how these ideas, with their powerful ethical sanction, must be respected in any enduring settlement of the Korean problem.

Australia's Tense Hours of Suspense

"THE LITTLE COMPANY," by Eleanor Dark. [Macmillan, $2.75.]

Reviewed by James Gray

When Japan began gleefully to overrun the Pacific, Australia was threatened by invasion; her thin and scattered population faced, with what stoicism it could find, the possibility even of extinction. It is to that little company of vulnerable people that the title of Eleanor Dark's impressive new novel refers.

Eleanor Dark

It is, however, with a smaller company still that Mrs. Dark's book is really concerned, the intellectuals who saw with agonizing clarity that war in the Pacific threatened more than mere security. The whole pattern of society, its design for years to come, was involved. To Gilbert Massey, interpreter of the human drama in fiction form, it was a war of ideas upon which the world was launched.

Thru the eyes of this liberal minded man, Mrs. Dark follows the spectacle. His wife, Phyllis, personifying in her petulant, bungling snobbery the philosophy of reaction, helps him, by negative suggestion, to formulate a new faith in the future. For as the false values on which his private life is based begin to disintegrate, he discovers foundation stones on which a new belief in the future may be based.

"The Little Company" is a sort of symposium of the intellectual conflicts of our time. But it is also a solid and well constructed narrative. Mrs. Dark touches each of her characters to life with the spark of intuition. Gilbert Massey and his sister, Martha, prophets of a just society, are not mere personifications of attitudes, nor is Phyllis simply the embodiment of a slavish devotion to the past. They act and interact upon each other, humorously, touchingly, and with a great deal of unhackneyed drama.

Publishers' Weekly Editor Honored with Dinner Party

By Harry Hansen

New York.

NEW YORK'S publishing and literary world joins tomorrow in its dinner for Frederic A. Melcher at the Waldorf. Registrations with Mrs. Ruth Page of the Book Publishers' bureau indicate that 700 will sit down to celebrate Fred's first 50 years in the book business, over 25 of them passed as editor of the Publishers' Weekly. There will be guests from Chicago, San Francisco, Boston, and upstate New York, as well as New York City. Most of the publishing houses have taken tables. Christopher Morley, toastmaster, will be there with an entirely new line, but unless Robert Frost says something ironic and amusing, all the proceedings will be fairly heavy. The speakers are earnest men, for instance: Melville Minton, for the publishers; W. W. Norton, for the Council on Books in Wartime; Louis Greene, for the Publishers' Weekly; Joseph Margolies, for the book sellers; Harry M. Lydenberg, for the librarians, and Elmer Davis, for the government. Harry Gage, vice president of the Mergenthaler Linotype company, will present the gold medal of the American Institute of Graphic Arts to Mr. Melcher. A handsome book, to which numerous hands have contributed, will also be presented to him.

P. S. I'm afraid they will serve duck.

New Best-Seller Authors

This has been a busy week in publishing and as a result new names will enter the best seller lists. Two authors are expected to make it with first novels—Adria Locke Langley, author of "A Lion Is in the Streets," and Robert Molloy, author of "Pride's Way." The Langley book had a printing of 155,000 copies before publication, of which 105,000 were advance orders. There is no doubt that the book will be important, but I hear from book sellers that reports of their professional readers were mixed. Those for the book were highly enthusiastic; the others had a wait-and-see attitude. They don't know how the public will take to the vernacular, of which there is heaps in the book. If it goes over, it may mean a revival of dialect stories, which flourished in father's day. Mrs. Langley is now in Chicago, where readers have had a chance to learn what a cheering, high spirited personality she is.

Mrs. Langley's next novel will deal with Nebraska, where her family used to live, and I have a suspicion that her grandfather, who was a robust, pioneer cattleman, may become the hero of it. In that case, Mrs. Langley and Mari Sandoz, author of "Old Jules," will have a remarkable symposium on grandfathers.

The Battling Grandsires

Old Jules, if you remember Mari Sandoz' story, was a grandfather to be proud of. He bossed his domain and nobody could hold him. But the report I have is that once upon a time he crossed the path of Mrs. Langley's grandfather and the two fought it out. Mrs. Langley's grandpa beat the stuffing out of Old Jules.

As for Robert Molloy, author of "Pride's Way," he's really a book critic; a modern, self-effacing gentleman with a cultured taste in reading and fine standards of criticism, in charge of the book columns of the New York Sun. The advance on his book was near 600,000—counting a heavy contribution by the Literary Guild. On Tuesday he was the guest of honor in Macmillan's drawing room, and instead of coming in quietly, greeting the guests, and leaving, as was his custom, he found himself the center of attention and the object of many questions, among them those from his fellow critics: "How did you manage to write a novel?"

Send Books for Good Will

Over 300 editors, authors, and librarians interested in children's books attended the Restoration of Books luncheon at the Roosevelt, which was part of the Treasure Chest campaign of the Women's Council for Post-War Europe. Frederic Melcher presided. Mme. Ninon Tallon, a niece of Eduard Herriot, who first had the treasure chest idea, said it was launched May 10, 1944, with the object of presenting chests of 30 to 100 books to foreign organizations as a token of goodwill. Up to now about 200 complete chests have been sent to China, Belgium, Denmark, France, Greece, Yugoslavia, and Italy, and 100 are pledged. This is merely a beginning and from now on the organization hopes to send hundreds of gaily painted chests filled with children's books to the countries that have suffered.

Speaking at the luncheon were Mady Christians, star of "I Remember Mama," and Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, who described the implications of Nazi book burnings and the need of vigilance over cultural objects. The publishers have donated a treasure chest to be sent to the British Council of Christians and Jews.

Now that "The Best from Yank" is giving civilians a chance to see what fine battle stories soldiers read, Yank is coming in for special attention. On Monday evening, Town Hall, with George V. Denny Jr., its president, in charge, will put on recognition day ceremonies honoring Yank, the army weekly. Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. will preside; there will be addresses by Ralph A. Bard, undersecretary of the navy; Maj. Gen. Joe N. Dalton, and Brig. Gen. John F. Davis. Charles Edison, former secretary of the navy, will make an award to Yank, and Sgt. Joe McCarthy, managing editor of Yank, will accept it. Other Yank staff speakers will be Col. Franklin S. Forsberg, Sgt. Marion Hargrove, Sgt. H. N. Oliphant, and Pvt. James P. O'Neill.

Cookbook Writer Tests Herself

Cookbooks should not only be read, they should be tried out. That's the belief of Mrs. Buwei Yang Chao, author of "How to Cook and Eat in Chinese." Mrs. Chao is a doctor in her own right and her husband is a philologist on the staff of Harvard university. The other day Mrs. Chao decided that if her book was to be properly sampled she would cook a dinner out of it herself, so the Lin Yutangs offered her the kitchen of their Gracie square apartment and Mrs. Chao cooked a wonderful meal for a number of distinguished guests, including Pearl S. Buck, William Ernest Hocking, and Hu Shih. Dr. Lin Yutang tells me that Mrs. Chao's husband, Dr. Chao, is the most learned Chinese philologist, for he can recognize and understand practically every Chinese dialect, a faculty that rivals anything Dunninger can produce, for the nuances in Chinese are incredible.

Writer Hits Railroading Monopolists

"JUSTICE IN TRANSPORTATION," by Arne C. Wiprud. [Ziff-Davis, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

This is not so much a plea for justice as an exposé of monopoly control in transportation. It is the work of a special assistant to the attorney general in the anti-trust division of the department of justice, who has conducted an investigation for three years into monopoly in American transportation, all the time that the carrier facilities were receiving wide acclaim for their magnificent contribution to the war.

Mr. Wiprud was hired to expose and he is to be commended for persevering in his task with scholarly disregard for the outer world of war, famine, pestilence, and death. In fact, his effort is reminiscent of a college thesis, say for a master's degree.

• • •

Naturally, he gives the case against the railroads because this is what he was employed for. And it must be said that he lashes fearlessly against anti-competitive philosophy, denouncing rate fixings; discouragement of air, water, and motor transport, and other instruments of suppression of competition, which protect the earning power of 26 billion dollars of railroad capitalization. Then he gibly predicts a rosy future for railroads if the incubus of fixed charges is removed and equipment modernized.

• • •

This review is not concerned with the railroads' defense against Mr. Wiprud. It is only concerned with recognizing that from the view of department of justice theorists he has done his work well. There is an impressive marshaling of provocative facts, so much so that this reviewer is headed for the interstate commerce commission, the senate interstate commerce committee and the Association of American Railroads to get the other side of the story.

Churchmen Needed in Labor Movement

"LABOR AND TOMORROW'S WORLD," by G. Bromley Oxnam. (Abingdon-Cokesbury, $1.50.]

Bishop Oxnam of the Methodist church in this book, comprising the Fondren lectures for 1944 at Southern Methodist university, recounts the prodigious influence of practicing Christians—largely Methodists—in launching and in giving character to the British labor union movement. To this influence he attributes the ethical and reasonable attitudes of British labor, and he warns that if ethical and reasonable attitudes are to govern labor in the future, Christians had better be in that movement pitching, getting justice for workers, and edging Marxians out of leadership.

Oklahoma Darker Since Death of Kenneth Kaufman

By Foster-Harris

Kenneth C. Kaufman

Norman, Okla. [Special] — About the time millions of hands in the western world were reaching for the switches to proclaim the end of a war, a light went out in Oklahoma. Ken Kaufman, one of the kindliest catalysts western American literature knew, passed on. The big University of Oklahoma where he taught is still wondering how on earth it is going to replace him.

Kenneth C. Kaufman, chairman of the department of modern languages in Oklahoma university, author of "Level Land," translator of several books in foreign languages, managing editor of Books Abroad, literary editor of the Daily Oklahoman, editorial adviser to the Bobbs-Merrill company, publishers; poet; contributor to many periodicals, including THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S book section, Esquire, Southwest Review, Poetry — Ken, as the southwest called him, was something more than all this. He was also the man you went to when you had a literary problem. Any kind of problem, from finding an obscure quotation in some foreign language book to selling a poem, learning to write a wild western, or help with a literary and maybe "best seller" novel.

He had the answers, too. He knew more poets and prose writers, present and potential; in his brief, crowded life he probably helped more writers over that first hard step to print and fame than any 10 other men the southwest has yet produced. He was the big reason Oklahoma university now is producing two or three times as many selling writers of fiction as any other institution of higher learning in the nation.

• • •

So they're mourning the passing of a Good Man down Oklahoma way. Born in Leon, Kas., April 30, 1887, Prof. Kaufman had lived in Oklahoma since the family had moved into the Cherokee Strip in 1898. He was a graduate of Southwestern Normal and held two degrees also from the University of Oklahoma. He was a Phi Beta Kappa, Acacia, Mason, listed in Who's Who in America, member of the American Association of University Professors, of the Modern Language association, and so on.

• • •

But what Oklahoma remembers is he was the kindly soul you—anybody!—could go to when you had a writing problem. And he didn't let you down.

In a Colorado prisoner-of-war camp, he had to choose between Nazism and death...

THIS novel takes you behind the scenes in American prisoner-of-war camps and shows you how the Nazi Secret Courts of Honor operate . . . How, in full view of American guards, they bend and break the young men of Germany who no longer worship the Fuehrer — young men like Toni Fritsch, who, though trained in the fanatical Hitler Youth, braved death in the prison camp to denounce the terror and injustice of Hitlerism.

While studying in Vienna to be a doctor, Toni had been falsely accused of theft. Unable to prove his innocence, he was deserted by his schoolmates, doubted by his friends and even his mother. Only Anna, his sweetheart, believed him, and worked until she discovered evidence that he had been framed by a fellow student with political connections. Appealing his case to one high authority after another, the corruption of the Nazi regime unfolded before his eyes.

Yet, as a member of the Hitler Youth, he had one last card to play —to go direct to the Fuehrer for justice. And it was at the gates of Berchtesgaden that he got his final brush-off, and the command to enter the army . . .

Toni was captured on the Normandy beachhead. Now he lived under a double compulsion—a fatalistic fear of the secret disciplinary court operated by the Nazis imprisoned with him, and a fierce determination to tell his story before the merciless hand of that court silenced him.

Thus Ernst Lothar's new novel, THE PRISONER, is more than a shocking revelation of Nazi methods within the walls of American PW camps. It is the whole dramatic story of the unmaking of a Nazi—the rude awakening of a young Austrian who discovered the truth about Nazism. With him you learn about the most evil underworld mankind has ever known, whose tentacles reach even into the prison camps of its conquerors.

Pride's Way

By Robert Molloy

"I suppose you'll steal that daguerreotype again!" Miss Tessie shouted at Miss Julie the last time they quarreled. "You bet your sweet life I will!" Miss Julie yelled back. They were two vigorous old ladies of Charleston, S. C., in 1910, and pride was at the bottom of their troubles.

Nice Author Writes About Mean People

"LET US CONSIDER ONE ANOTHER," by Josephine Lawrence. [Appleton-Century, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan

This is far and away the most interesting of Josephine Lawrence's stories; its treatment of the racial problem is pretty convincing.

As in "Earth and High Heaven," a Jewish boy and a Gentile girl fall in love, and the surrounding relatives pass their opinions on the matter of racial differences, causing a great deal of conversation, but not altering the course of true love.

They are strange people, all on the prejudiced side except Grandpa, a humorous old gentleman with a heart of gold, who understands his granddaughter's insistence on leading her own life. Her Presbyterian mother had married a Catholic and just as much rumpus had risen over that misalliance. With the new generation the Catholic-Jewish combination is slated for the family rocks, and there's talk, talk, talk.

Josephine Lawrence

Josephine Lawrence knows the strangest lot of characters. Her books abound with these pedestrian creatures who never seem to get out of the kitchen, the office, or the poor house. A personable young woman herself, it seems as tho she must have met some cheerful, attractive men and women sometime, but she seldom allows one of them to creep into her books.

Mean, overbearing, hard-hearted women and drunken, lazy men drag her noble plots downward and make her stories as hard going as a fleet of canoes in a hurricane. When and if she ever writes about some lovely people, she'll find she has a masterpiece on her hands, for she has all the qualifications.

Radio Comedies Offer Readers a Few Chuckles

"THERE'S LAUGHTER IN THE AIR," by Jack Gaver and Dave Stanley. [Greenberg, $2.]

Reviewed by Larry Wolters

The radio comedian is the king of the kilocycles. He attracts the most listeners, hence draws the most money. Comic shows invariably lead the Crosley and Hooper surveys. [Bob Hope and Fibber McGee and Molly have headed the parade for four years.]

Unlike Broadway and Hollywood comedy hits, radio shows, once aired, are gone. The objective of this book is to bring back some of the best shows, so that they may be "heard" again. While many of the scripts are chuckle-provoking in their printed form, in the main edited dialog without the artistry of the performer, sound effects, musical cues, and background is a poor substitute for the original.

A fragment from Abbott and Costello sounds pretty much like Joe Miller. On the other hand a Burns and Allen script, in which they had Charles Boyer as guest, seems just as sprightly as the night they played it. Probably the credit should go to Paul Henning, their head writer, a master at situation comedy. Incidentally, while satisfactory biographical sketches of the comedians are included, the book fails to mention their writers. Radio isn't too liberal that way, either. Fibber and Molly credit Don Quinn and Phil Leslie, and Jack Benny used to mention Bill Morrow and Ed Beloin before the war took them away. Since this book must inevitably stand [or fall] on the work of comedy writers it would have been nice if these accessories before the fact—these aspirin and bicarbonate gluttons — had been given their due.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN, editor of "Doctors at War," which tells the exciting story of man's conquests against war time deaths, had a busy nonmedical day last Saturday. . . . He autographed copies of his book for a crowd of eager buyers at the Marshall Field store. . . . There are countless G. P.'s [grateful patients in doctor's slanguage] who buy for their own physicians every popular book written by a doctor. . . . Then he was guest of honor at a cocktail party given by James F. Heidelberger of E. P. Dutton & Co., publisher of "Doctors at War," in one of those private rooms on the third floor of the Palmer House, in whose corridors are hidden some of the lushest marble cupids and the most startling bronze hunting scenes in captivity—relics, probably, of the days of the old Palmer House. . . . Pretty Mrs. Fishbein received Mr. Heidelberger's guests with her husband. . . . The guests were not only from the world of books, but also from a meeting of the American Medical association, of whose Journal Dr. Fishbein is editor.

One of the out of town medicos was Dr. James Edgar Paullin of Atlanta, Ga., who was summoned to Warm Springs when Roosevelt was stricken. . . . Dr. Paullin arrived exactly seven minutes before the President died, he told me. . . . His patient was unconscious when he arrived and never regained consciousness. . . . Dr. Paullin's ride from Atlanta to Warm Springs of approximately 75 miles was as near flying as an earthbound motor is capable of. . . . He drove his own car, he said, with the accent on drove. . . . Dr. Paullin is an old friend of Rear Adm. Ross T. McIntire, Roosevelt's personal physician. . . . The two doctors will undoubtedly appear in each other's memoirs when [and if] they are written.

Some Famous French Names

Dr. Max Cutler, author of two technical medical books, is going to Tahiti or some other Lethe island to write his next book, he said, if it ever gets written. . . . He is director both of the Chicago Tumor institute and of cancer research at Edward Hines Veterans' hospital. . . . But we talked about persons, not pathology. . . . He had known and worked with Mme. Curie. . . . The 12 summers before the war he spent mostly in Paris. . . . He knew intimately the great Dr. de Martel, head of the American hospital at Neuilly, who committed suicide just as the Germans entered Paris. . . . For many years Dr. de Martel and I exchanged Christmas greetings. . . . Our ties were literary rather than surgical, because, altho I met him first when he saved the life of a friend of mine by an operation, our close mutual interest was in his mother. . . . His mother was the famous novelist Gyp, whose typically French tales were translated into dashing English which delighted those readers who felt they were "seeing life" in them. . . . Gyp was the French inventor of the "enfant terrible." . . . Her real name was Sybille Gabrielle de Riquette de Mirabeau [a famous family name in French history] and she became the Comtesse de Martel de Janville. . . . The name Martel is historic, also. . . . Charles Martel, the grandfather of Charlemagne, literally cut a swath among the invading Moslems in southern France in 1732.

The most typically French of all feminine Parisian writers, Colette, has emerged, at the age of 72, from the five years of Paris prison sentence apparently still unbowed by either time or terror. . . . Her face in her latest photographs, haloed by a mist of wiry hair, seems little changed from the charming and intelligent one which I first saw some 15 years ago when I called on her in her charming little apartment in the Palais Royale. . . . Colette was no passive accepter of the Germans. . . . She worked in the resistance like a young woman.

Easterners Fear the West

Le Baron R. Barker, editor in chief of Doubleday, Doran & Co., came to Chicago for his first real visit when he launched Sophie Tucker and her autobiography, "Some of These Days," at an autographing party at Marshall Field & Co.'s book section. . . . When I first met Lee Barker many years ago he had, incredibly, never been west of the Hudson, altho Europe was as familiar to him as Boston, Mass., where he had gone to school and lived. . . . He was typical, it seemed to me, of the delightful and irresistibly honest eastern seaborderites who thought nothing of braving the Atlantic, but looked with horror upon the unknown terrors of travel in uncivilized America west of Albany. Lee Barker is now as at home in America as he was then on the streets of Cambridge, Mass. . . . He served his editorial apprenticeship as a publisher's salesman, the best possible education in the reading habits of a country.

A Literary Treasure

The MS. of Sophie Tucker's book, written in longhand in pencil on stationery from hotels all over the country, lies in permanent state in the New York Public library. . . . They asked for it to add to their fine collection of original MSS. . . . The typewritten MS. of "Some of These Days" is being auctioned off in her home town of Hartford, Conn., for the 7th war loan.

"THE GIANT KILLERS," by Alan Hynd. [McBride, $3.]

Reviewed by Walter Trohan

Unquestionably Elmer Lincoln Irey, who operates under the somewhat turgid title of chief coördinator, treasury enforcement agencies, is the most efficient if not the most spectacular law enforcement official of this era. From his belt dangle the scalps of Al Capone, Bruno Hauptmann, Enoch L. Johnson, Thomas J. Pendergast, William [Five Aces] Frad, Waxey Gordon, and other underworld and political figures. Mr. Irey and his agents are even more adverse to publicity than some of their notorious characters they have brought to the bar of justice and put behind the stouter bars of penitentiaries from Atlanta to Alcatraz.

• • •

Unfortunately in "The Giant Killers" Irey and his men have not found a chronicler remotely approaching either the painstaking accuracy of Mr. James Boswell or the fictional genius of Mr. Daniel Defoe. Where Mr. Hynd runs a bit thin on fact—and be it understood that drawing facts from Mr. Irey is like pulling alfalfa by the roots—he glosses over with fiction. To one who in his police reporter days was an eyewitness to some of these investigations, the fictionizing is a sorry gilding of the lily. It must also be noted that claims to the disclosure for the first time of such items as the operations of treasury agents in the Capone gang and the appeal of Charles A. Lindbergh to the intelligence unit of the treasury on the kidnaping of his son are old stuff in yellowing newspaper files.

• • •

Nevertheless, Mr. Hynd is to be commended for bringing a little known and highly efficient American before the public for attention and in publicizing some of the highlights of a dramatic career.

Mr. Ernst Chats of a Variety of Men and Affairs

"THE BEST IS YET . . ." by Morris L. Ernst. [Harper, $3.]

Reviewed by William Shinnick

Morris L. Ernst

A lawyer of wide experience and interests, Morris Ernst here presents a series of practical essays on what goes on in New York and other cities, with some little attention to national affairs. It's a chatty book without formal arrangement and it proves the author is a many sided man; he'd just as soon discuss sailboats and the stars as birth control or how to catch the voices of the ancient Greeks that may [he indicates] he bottled up by nature in the deep recesses of the sea.

Perhaps the most intriguing passages deal with the important personages he has met and communed with. Ernst used to like Fiorello LaGuardia, but doesn't any more. His great admiration goes to Justices Brandeis and Holmes. He has a marked predilection for Sumner Welles, Leon Henderson, and the creators of the TVA. His estimate of President Roosevelt, written while F. D. R. was living, is eulogistic.

For those who like a sophisticated, liberal [but anti-commie] approach to subjects like censorship and its often odd concepts of obscenity, this book will have appeal. It is doctrinaire and lacking gaiety only in the parts dealing with Ernst's dislikes, one of which is the press.

"A narrative told with great skill and one which deserves mature reflection . . . a good book—time could do worse than adjudge it a great book—and one which should have been written long ago . . . This book examines the career of a great American from an entirely different angle, with reverence, scholarship and ability . . . BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery

THIS column, gazing into its crystal ball, sees the world's reading table for the first few post-war years loaded with a vast tonnage of memoirs. Voices that have been choked by tyranny and terror will pour out the stories we have been waiting for. Diaries written at the risk of torture and death will be brought from their hiding places and rushed to eager publishers and thirsting readers. Censorships will die.

Much of the output of nowitcanbetolds will be, unfortunately, trash, born of hysteria, nourished by defective memory, colored with political propaganda. But some of it will be pure history and will live forever. For the purpose of limiting the trash and cultivating the crop of truth, I now propose a plan—which nobody, I fear, will adopt.

I call it the reverse Scheherazade or don't shoot too quick plan, for the treatment of war criminals. Scheherazade, you remember, was a queen who faced with reluctance the prospect of having her head cut off, a fate which she was able to postpone for 1,001 nights by telling lies. My reverse plan would simply substitute truth for fiction.

Every morning after breakfast I would assemble the condemned in a huge hall like a schoolroom, with rows of desks. Each desk would be equipped with a pen, an inkwell, and a pad of paper. At the sound of a bell they would all be required to start writing the truth about all the things they had done, seen done, or ordered to be done in the course of the war.

Since truth is hard to write, I would not require haste. A thousand words per day per man [or half that amount per woman] would suffice.

Monitors would gather up the papers, which would then be examined. Writers who were found to have told the truth and nothing else would be safe until the next day, when they would resume writing. Thus the interests of history would be served.

Liars, of course, would be shot—not for lying, but for the crimes of which they had been previously convicted.

• • •

One friend with whom I have discussed my plan is against it because, he says, "a really clever truth-telling criminal might escape justice for an indefinite period, might even come to a natural death." But I think that chance is worth taking. The accumulation of truth would justify the cost—and I think the escapes, if any, would be few. Surely a man like Hitler would have found it impossible to tell nothing but truth for more than a day or two. The average quisling would probably not last a month. Mussolini would have failed in an hour. And in any event the longer they lasted the more the world would know. We might even find out what really happened at Pearl Harbor. Ladies and gentlemen, what do you think?

• • •

Well, as I have already indicated, I do not expect my plan to be adopted. But I still believe that some very important books full of good history will be coming from the world's presses before long. There must be a genius or two straining at the leash in Germany. Russia undoubtedly has a great writer waiting only for the liberation of the press. Freed Frenchmen are tapping their typewriters. Norwegians, and Danes, and Poles have tales to tell. And [pardon me if I groan] think of all the volumes of letters, and agreements, and confidential dossiers that retiring diplomats will soon be releasing!

• • •

Anyway, a time will come when you—or your grandchildren—will know just what did happen to the world between the day of the first shot in Poland and the day of Hirohito's hara kiri.

POSTSCRIPT ON FOOD

Wistfully thinking of some post-war day when the American dinner table may be again what it used to be, I picked up an old essay of Agnes Repplier's, "Humors of Gastronomy," in which she cites the British exhortation at the battle of Cadiz: "You Englishmen, fed upon beef, don't surely mean to be beaten by a damned lot of Spaniards who live on oranges!" And a Frenchman's boast, in offering a delicate sauce at the Duke of York's table: "Avec cette sauce là, on pourrait manger son grand-père."

It reminded me of a scrap of talk between two women overheard on V-E day:

First woman—Now that the Germans are licked, I suppose we'll be called upon to feed them.

Second woman—Let 'em eat werewolves!

Young Girl Cuts Loose from Family

"34 CHARLTON," by Rene Kuhn. [D. Appleton-Century, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Arno L. Bader

When Katherine Conant, 18 and with a will of her own, enrolls in a secretarial school, she comes in conflict with her tradition bound family. For three generations the Conants have lived in their brownstone house in Greenwich Village and no Conant daughter has ever worked. Why, then, should Katherine? But the secretarial course is only Katherine's first move toward independence. She gets a job in an advertising agency, she falls in love with Joe Santoni, a commercial artist, and she takes her first hesitant but exhilarating steps in the larger world which the Conants have never known.

It is conflict all the way. Grandfather Conant, whom Katherine revered, had told her: "Always remember your life and what you do with it is your own affair." But Grandfather is now dead, and Katherine finds her domineering grandmother, two maiden aunts, and her own mother leagued against her. Eventually she leaves the family for an apartment of her own. When she finds that the family would sacrifice her in the interests of a parasitic uncle, she makes her final break for love and happiness.

"34 Charlton" is not grimly realistic, nor is it all sunshine without shadow. A first novel by a 21 year old girl, it records the surface of life with a quiet convincingness.

Wacky Family's Antics Make Up Laughable Story

"I MARRIED THEM," by Janet Van Duyn. [Howell, Soskin, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

If wacky families are what you like, this is your dish. Take Dr. Mac, for instance, noisy and choleric, who spends his time between operations in the enjoyment of solitaire and frequent Manhattans. And his wife, Carrie, a warm hearted individualist who cleans house looking like a George Price cartoon and appears at her own parties in her husband's army uniform, all ready to entertain her guests by kicking the chandelier [she succeeds, too, after three tries].

• • •

Then there's George, their son, also a doctor and a "strange blend of Groucho Marx and the more swashbuckling aspects of Tyrone Power." An uninhibited soul, he delights in practicing medicine at the movies, playing tennis like a mountain goat, and doing medical research with the aid of a nearby radio loudly proclaiming the latest war news. His young sister, Pim, spends her time falling dramatically in and out of love, filling the vacuum between affairs by strenuous participation in Junior league theatricals.

• • •

A large rundown "Greek temple" of a mansion, guarded by two ferocious bronze lions, houses the eccentric MacLeans, the most nonsensical family you have read about and laughed over in a long time.

Essays Are Praised for Their Grace

"REFLECTIONS IN A MIRROR," by Charles Morgan. [Macmillan, $2.50.]

Reviewed by John Abbot Clark

Charles Morgan

Most of the essays in this volume appeared originally in the literary supplement of the London Times during the last several years. The author, the well known novelist, critic, and man of letters, writes on such diverse topics as "The Integrity of Pascal," "The Uncommon Man," "Emily Brontë," "Tolstoy," "A Leisured Civilization," and "The Return of France." Twenty-three little causeries in all, and all of them richly rewarding.

They can be read with the same apparent ease and facility with which they were composed. But the sanity, grace, and clarity, the impassioned defense of civilized values, the courageously unflagging concern for the dignity and integrity of the human soul, which, whatever the subject, permeate these essays, make them eminently worthy of careful study and sober meditation. What Mr. Morgan says of some one else's book might very aptly be observed of his: "The book is, then, to be considered as a whole, for its flavour, the direction of its thought, above all for its special relevance to the study of contemporary values."

Here is a sample of what one finds on nearly every page of "Reflections in a Mirror": "What Pascal thinks of indifferentism has, then, precisely what we should not expect it to have—a link in motive with totalitarianism: the link being a refusal to ask questions, a desire to suspend criticism, an incapacity to supplement reason with faith, and faith with reason, a slave's willingness to separate them, a fanatic's longing to keep them apart. This particular complex of motive, this black despair of which the negative expression is indifferentism and the positive totalitarianism, is the sin that Pascal does not forgive."

• • •

"Reflections in a Mirror," altho modest in proportions and unpretentious in content, is truly a book to shore against the intellectual ruins and spiritual chaos of a world that, perhaps, we never made, but one we blandly and conceitedly allowed to be brought into hideous being.

Bayreuth Childhood

These Bedside Readers Should Entertain You

"READER'S COMPANION," edited by Louis Kronenberger. [Viking Portable Library, $2.]

"CARL VAN DOREN," edited by himself. [Viking Portable Library, $2.]

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Carl Van Doren

Here are two fat little books that almost any one can take to bed with him and stay awake reading. Both are anthologies, the first that part of the world's literature which Mr. Kronenberger feels is best designed "to catch the eye at its most wandering and the mind at its most irresolute," the second the bits of Van Doren that most appeal to Van Doren.

The "Reader's Companion" is full of odds and ends selected for rereading as well as reading, both verse and prose, the noble and the light of each. If you want a dash, but just dash, of Montaigne, Hazlitt, Henry James, Max Beerbohm, Swift, Dostoevski, Boswell, La Bruyere, or even the Rev. Sidney Smith, here it is, as well as a long excerpt from Mark Twain's "Life on the Mississippi," Tolstoi's extraordinary "The Death of Ivan Ilyich," and Flaubert's "The Simple Heart."

• • •

You will also find here three of the noblest death scenes in literature—Socrates drinking the hemlock, Petronius opening his veins, and Ridley and Latimer burning at the stake. If you find these too depressing, you can always turn to the light verse or to the letters of Lady Mary Montague, Byron, or Horace Walpole. The latter, while hardly gay, are diverting.

Mr. Kronenberger included no novels in his selections, for he contends a novel should be read in its entirety. The Van Doren book, however, contains two complete books, his life of Swift, written in a Van Doren adaptation of Swift's own biting, compelling style, and his short "What Is American Literature?"

• • •

In addition to sketches, essays, and entire chapters from other books [his autobiography, "Three Worlds," with its absorbing chapter on Elinor Wylie; "The Life of Benjamin Franklin"; "Secret History of the American Revolution"], the Van Doren volume includes one hitherto unpublished work, "Spy to Paris," which originally was intended as the opening chapter of "Secret History." To this reader it seemed heavy and hard to get into and its original omission a boom. But the anthology, in general, is excellent and rewarding reading.

First Novel Shows Talent Well Above Average Level

"EAST OF MIDNIGHT," by Forrest Rosaire. [Knopf, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil

It always is a pleasure for a reviewer to be able to say that a novel is a topflight performance, and when it is a first novel the pleasure is heightened. In "East of Midnight" Forrest Rosaire shows us a talent well above the average run of novelists.

"East of Midnight" has for one of its principal characters a girl who began life with two strikes on her, the daughter of an invalid mother and an alcoholic father. A housekeeper-nurse hired to take care of her mother completed the mental upset of her early childhood, and when this nurse told her she had killed her mother [who had risen from her sickbed and fallen down the basement stairs in an attempt to save the little girl from a brutal beating] her personality was warped for life.

• • •

While this girl, Dru, was growing up on Chicago's north side, a boy, Grey Manning, met her. Grey thought Dru the most beautiful creature he had ever known, and promptly fell in love with her. There was nothing to this romance but a high school boy's infatuation, but he, a dreamy youth, thought of it as a great passion. At least it was strong enough to carry him into marriage with her.

The wedding took place when, after a separation of some years, Dru and Grey met in California. Dru married him only to deceive him with another man's baby. From then on, she dragged him thru some unlovely years.

Reading her story, one realizes that Dru was not entirely to blame for the demon in her which made her destroy things, and that Grey was not entirely free from fault. That is the author's triumph, and while I personally don't care much for the stream of consciousness technique that Mr. Rosaire employs so freely, it must be admitted that hardly otherwise could we penetrate Dru's diseased mind and understand Grey's weakness.

• • •

The best quality of the story is its extreme mobility; it moves rapidly despite the impedance of the transcribed thoughts of Grey and Dru. It has a vitality, too, and an element of suspense that holds the reader to the end.

The writer was born in Chicago and graduated from the University of Chicago. He has been writing short stories under the pen name of J.-J. des Ormeaux.

JUSTICE IN TRANSPORTATION

an Expose of Monopoly Control

By ARNE C. WIPRUD
Special Assistant to the Attorney General in the Anti-Trust Division of the Department of Justice
with an Introduction
By THURMAN ARNOLD

A fearless, two-fisted attack on monopolistic controls over America's transportation systems and on Government regulations in the interests of existing carriers. An unvarnished expose of the ruthless exploitation of the American people by railroad, motor, water and air carriers. The revelations are startling.

Competition among carriers and new legislation in the public interest are shown as the basic remedies to insure the creation of a truly modern transportation system.

HENRY A. WALLACE says,
"But here is the whole story of monopoly control of transportation—thoroughly documented."

SENATOR HENRIK SHIPSTEAD says,
"Brilliantly written expose of reprehensible management practices of our transportation system."

ELLIS ARNALL, governor of Georgia, says,
"A compelling analysis of the stranglehold monopolistic transportation now has on the full effulgent economic development of our country's potentials."

AMONG THE AUTHORS

REMEMBER the Sinclair Lewis-Bernard De Voto literary feud of a year or so ago? . . . Next month James T. Farrell, one-time Chicagoan, will come out with a blast against some of the critics, including Van Wyck Brooks, J. Donald Adams, and Lewis Mumford. . . . The blasting is to be done in his "The League of Frightened Philistines" [Vanguard]. . . . In the Publishers' Weekly Alice Hackett notes that "the famous novelist of the realistic school" [Farrell] charges these critics with "reaction, medievalism, and false and misty idealism." . . . Sounds sprightly, but isn't there enough war these days without starting another one?

Dorothy Langley, Chicago author of "Wait for Mrs. Willard" and "Dark Medallion" [Simon and Schuster], has gone to Hollywood to write scenarios for Sidney Franklin at M-G-M. . . . THE GOLDEN TOTEM

BY BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

(Copyright: 1945: By Barrett Willoughby)

INSTALMENT XX.

NEXT morning at 11 Lynn had breakfast ready; but no one appeared. She rang the chimes twice, then sat down to the table alone.

She was finishing her coffee when Perry came in, red eyed and apologetic. He waved away the coffee Lynn offered him. "Just a quart of iced tomato juice with lemon in it, darling," he said.

Lynn put it before him and he drank deeply. "Ah! Now I'm as fit as a fiddle. I heard Stella getting up but don't wait for her, Lynn. I'll walk as far as the office with you and then bring Troubador back with me to carry our plunder to the mine. As soon as her ladyship has had something to eat, we'll go on over to the Golden Totem."

They walked thru the woods to the office and paused outside the door. The sun was shining brilliantly, but without warmth. Alder leaves rode the crisp, chill wind. On Lynn's bare head short silky curls slid about in golden confusion. Perry took hold of the lapels of her white pea jacket and drew them together under her chin, lifting her face a little. His long lashed hazel eyes were soft with regret. "I'm sorry—about last night, Lynn."

"I know."

"Thanks, for being such a — a gentleman about it. . . , No matter what fool thing I do, Lynn, I love you. I'll never love any other woman. I want you to remember that."

"Why, Perry!" Lynn forced a laugh. "You talk as tho you're saying 'Good-by forever' instead of 'So long until dinner time.'"

He grinned. "That's right. It must be my hangover, darling. But I'm promising you now, on my honor, I won't fall off the wagon again. Tonight we'll have a gay evening—without the benefit of liquor. The way we used to down in Carmel. Remember?"

"I remember."

Lingeringly, he released her coat lapels and let his hands drop to his side. "W-e-l-l, I'll be getting along to the barn for Troubador. I'll take Stella over to the mine by the front trail, so I won't be seeing you till you get there, Lynn. But come the minute you finish your work, darling. Come right away. By that time, with Stella in my hair I'll be about coo-coo."

"I'll come right over."

He made no move to go, but stood looking wistfully into her face. "Would you—kiss me. Lynn?"

Lynn went into his arms. They kissed gravely, and for a long moment stood in the autumn wind clinging together the way parting couples cling on steamer decks while the "All ashore" is sounding.

• • •

When Lynn entered the office she felt an aching pity for Perry that was like a physical pain.

It took longer than she had expected to finish the work Greer had left for her. When she finally closed the office door she paused outside for a moment to consider how she should go to the mine. She wanted to walk, and it was a perfect afternoon for walking—sun, wind, fast white clouds, and clean air acrid with fallen leaves. But already she was more than an hour overdue at the Golden Totem. Stella, with nothing to drink over there, would certainly be in Perry's hair by this time.

I'd better ride and rescue him as soon as possible, she decided.

She hurried to the barn, threw a saddle on the roan, and set off.

When she emerged from the forest into the Golden Totem clearing, she expected Perry to run out any moment with his glad shout of welcome. He didn't. And Troubador wasn't in sight. The only sign of life was a raven sitting mute on top of the sign Bachelor's Hell. The only sound, the creak of a loose board swaying in the wind. The tall mill building, the long, low cook and bunk house, the framed square of the tunnel mouth higher on the slope, all looked queerly bleak and silent in the September sun.

As Lynn walked her horse forward she felt that peculiarly forlorn sense of pause that attaches to places that have once teemed with human activity, but are now abandoned.

She dismounted in front of the cook and bunk house, and went inside. The place smelled close. As she went searching thru the big rooms her footsteps echoed lonesomely on the bare floors.

When she came out of the building, one thing was clear to her—no one had been in there today, but herself.

She told herself this was nothing to be perturbed about, yet she kept glancing around uneasily as she walked to the door of the mill,

She tried to enter. The door was locked.

She called Perry's name.

Silence . . . then the macabre creak of the loose board swinging in the wind.

When Lynn saw Troubador peacefully standing under the big cedar on the terrace, loaded with the overnight bags and other things destined for the outing at the mine, she felt ashamed of her panic. Ashamed, and tremendously relieved. She might have known that Stella, after last night's drinking, would not get out of bed until late today. But it was just as well. Now, before going to the mine with the others, she, Lynn, could take the imprisoned MacFarlane from her room and give him a run.

She went thru the open French doors into the living room calling cheerfully, "Hello! Hello! Hello!" She could hear a queer pounding but at first could see no one.

"Where's everybody?" She started to walk on thru to the dining room, and then saw Stella, still in her pale green chiffon negligee, kneeling on the hearth. With a chisel and hammer she was doing her best to gouge gold from the quartz in the fire place.

"For the love of Mike!" ejaculated Lynn, walking toward her. "What goes on?"

Stella suspended operations long enough to look up and say, in a thick voice, "None-a your damn business." Her mahogany-red hair, oily and uncombed, hung on each side of her flushed face. Her kneeling body was unsteady. She resumed her chiseling.

Lynn felt as tho her footing had slid out from under her. No wonder Perry couldn't get Stella started to the mine. Lynn had never seen her like this before. She must have been at it since morning, for the coffee table was crowded with glasses, siphons, and empty whisky bottles.

Lynn drew a small sigh and went out to the kitchen, expecting to find Perry.

He wasn't there.

She passed on to her own room beyond the kitchen to get MacFarlane. Her door stood wide open. The pup's bed was over-turned and the rug wrinkled, as tho he had been scrambling about. But MacFarlane was gone.

• • •

She refused to entertain the uneasiness that came upon her. Perry, of course, must have taken the dog for a run.

She came down to the living room. "Stella, do you know where Perry went?"

"Naw, I don't know where Perry went," Stella repeated in sing-song mockery. "And what's more," she added in her natural voice, "I don't give a hoot."

"Didn't Perry tell you where he was going, Stella?" Lynn put her hand on the other woman's arm. "And—did he take MacFarlane with him?"

Stella lunged confidentially toword Lynn. "Listen, sister," she said thickly. "Better give Perry the heave-ho. Just between you and me, he's a softy and a lusher and no good. Don't you care where he is. He—Ha! Wha's that you say about MacFarlane? Oh, MacFarlane! Ha! Ha!" She doubled over in a spasm of drunken laughter. "Yes. I saw him—an' how! I gave him a hair cut. Promised him I would and did. He needed hair cut; I need shampoo and finger wave. But do I get it? No. Nobody cares whether I——"

"Surely, you haven't hurt my dog. Stella! You wouldn't dare—" Lynn bit her lips, realizing that this was no way to handle a woman as far gone in drink as Stella. She forced a laugh and patted the other's arm. "I see. You're just trying to tease me. You really don't know anything about MacFarlane, or Perry, either." She turned as tho to go back to the kitchen.

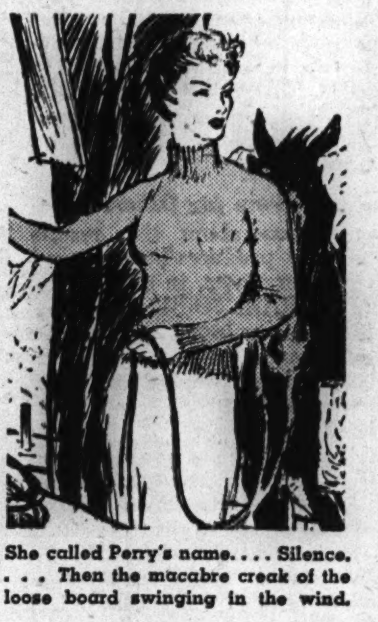
"Hey! Wai' a minute! Who says I don't know? I cut his hair. Honest, you'd a died laughing to see the purp when I set him down in front of the long mirror over there to look at himself! Ha! Ha! Stella doubled over and pointed to the spot in front of the pier glass under the gallery. "Ha! Ha! He was ashamed of himself, like a human——"

"Listen, you!" Lynn was now clear headed, coldly furious. "Did Perry help you do this outrageous thing to my little dog?"

"I cut MacFarlane's hair all by myself. I didn't hurt the little punk, either. He bit me—see this?" Stella held out a thumb with her handkerchief tied round it. "But I didn't hurt him. I just tied up his mouth and his feet, an' cut his hair. But that big lug, Perry, woke up then, and swore at me, and shoved me aside. Untied the damned dog, and swore at me and shoved me—but I'll get even with him."

"Please, Stella. Try to think—where did Perry go?"

"How should I know? But I know where the little punk went. Ha! Ha! The minute Perry untied him he shot out of here like a—a greased pig and beat it for the Veteran Virgin. He was a scream, I tell you. A perfect. . . ."



She called Perry's name. . . . Silence. . . . Then the macabre creak of the loose board swinging in the wind.

• • •

Lynn, winged with anxiety, was already on her way to the door. She ran across the terrace to the head of the stone steps and got her first view of the float. Then her heart dropped like lead. The only boats tied there were the Julie and a canoe. There wasn't a sign of the Veteran anywhere in the wind-crisped cove.

A glance at the beach told her the tide was going out. On the wind came a dim, exultant roar—the Bottleneck! MacFarlane alone in the old skiff, was riding the tide toward the Bottleneck!

She leaped to the Julie's painter and with fingers clumsy with haste, started to untie it. With wind blowing up against the tide, the skiff's progress might be slowed enough so she could overtake it before it reached Periwinkle Isle—or at the farthest, Court Faber's float.

Then she remembered she needed gasoline. There was a drum of it, with a copper measure, handy at one end of the float. But since all she had was Stella's word, it might be well to check with Perry to see if MacFarlane really had hidden in the old boat. It was possible Perry had taken him to the office, or——

In a flash it came to her where Perry was. The honeymoon cabin. . . .

She found him there, but not MacFarlane. And altho the day was not cold, he was sitting in front of the fireplace in which an unusual number of logs were fiercely burning. He was slumped to one side in a big easy chair, his chin on his chest, one arm hanging limp outside. Near his hand, on the floor, stood a half-emptied bottle of Scotch. He was sleeping heavily.

One look, and Lynn dropped her face into her upraised palms to shut out the sight of him for a moment. Then, resolutely, she stepped to his side and lifted his head. "Wake up, Perry! MacFarlane's gone adrift in the old skiff. The tide's going out fast. We must go after him before he gets drawn into the Bottleneck. Wake up, darling!"

Without opening his eyes, he mumbled something unintelligible, and when she withdrew her hand from under his chin, his head fell forward again.

She went on pleading with him, shaking him. She even slapped him. He was too far gone to care. At last, not daring to delay longer, she left him and ran all the way back to Illahee.

In the living room Stella, with an unopened bottle of liquor clamped against her stomach, was struggling to remove the cork. "Hi-ya, blonde bombshell!" she called, with heavy good nature. "Better have a snifter with me an'—an' get in touch with —with sub—subconscious."

Lynn gazed at her with a nightmare feeling of hopelessness. "Stella, are you sure MacFarlane went down to the Veteran?"

"Sure I'm sure." Stella waved the bottle vaguely in the direction of the cove. "Beat it like a skinned little bat out of hell."

"Then the boat has gone adrift with him, and the tide's running out fast. Stella, will you remember what I'm telling you now? I'm going down the Inlet in the Julie to get MacFarlane. I'm going immediately. Will you tell Perry where I've gone?"

"All ri'. All ri'. I'll tell the big bum."

Lynn went on to her room. She stuffed MacFarlane's small sweater into one pocket of her white pea-jacket, her opera glasses into the other, and then ran on down to the drum of gasoline on the float.

In her anxiety, she neglected to wipe bits of debris from the copper measure, before she used it to transfer gasoline to the tank of her outboard motor.

She had swung the Julie toward the mouth of the cove and was speeding ahead, when Stella came lunging out onto the terrace, her red hair and her green chiffon negligee wildly blowing in the wind. She waved her arms, she beckoned, she shouted, thru cupped hands, something that was lost in the sound of the motor.

Lynn briefly wondered at the unwonted gusto of her good-by; wondered also that Stella, so far gone in her cups, had come out to say good-by. Then she flung up her own hand in an answering gesture of farewell and, rounding the Arm, headed down the Inlet at full speed.

The wind tore at Lynn's short, dusky gold hair. The late afternoon sun struck diamond sparks from the roughened water, making it difficult for her to distinguish objects at any distance. She zig-zagged from one forested shore to the other, sweeping every vista with her small opera glasses.

There was no sign of the old skiff.

She circled Periwinkle Isle. In the wind the pendant boughs of the tall cedars were lifting and falling with slow-motion grace. The little cabin was closed today, and the place had a lonely look.

Farther down, Court Faber's log warehouse came into view. The Stardust lay there nudging the float. At sight of it Lynn's heart stirred with hope. He had not gone to town with Flan! Perhaps she'd find him here working in his warehouse.

She slowed down and ran in alongside the float. Then, fearing he couldn't hear her call from there, she went up to the warehouse and tried the door. It was locked.

She hallooed a few times on the chance that he might be back in the timber, but her voice only emphasized the windy, sunny solitude. Her spirits drooped. Now, as she looked out from this slight height, the strong wind created as it blew she could see what a disturbance against the outrunning tide. At the thought of venturing farther alone in the Julie a cool, hollow feeling grew in the pit of her stomach. She wished she couldn't hear so clearly the roar of the Bottleneck.

Then, on the screen of her imagination, flashed a picture of MacFarlane in the drifting Veteran. Little and shorn and shivering, calling, with every sound in his doggish vocabulary, on the mistress who had never failed him. Resolutely, she climbed back into the Julie and headed down the Inlet. She told herself: "I have plenty of gas. Maybe 'round the next bend I'll sight that darned old run-away skiff."

She did sight it—several hundred yards ahead. It was sedately turning end for end as the tidal current carried it along. Ignoring the fact that her motor drowned out the sound of her voice, she sent up a joyous shout, and put on more speed.

As Lynn gained on the Veteran, spray began pelting her. She became aware that the Julie had run into an odd sort of current. Everywhere about her the water was jumping up in pyramidal wavelets that made hollow sounds under the boat and jolted it like so many fists pounding the hull.

But Lynn became oblivious of this phenomenon as she centered all her faculties on getting a glimpse of MacFarlane in the skiff. He must have tucked himself back as far as he could go under the stern seat, because, try as she would, she could not see him.

• • •

She slowed her motor and came alongside the run-away, calling encouragingly to MacFarlane. It took some maneuvering before she could lay hold of the jigging Veteran's gunwhale. When, at last, she could look over, no part of the skiff was hidden from her. There were several inches of water in the bottom. Bill's feather pillow was a soggy, half submerged lump amidships.

Otherwise, the skiff was empty.

The shock of it turned Lynn sick. Conjectures whizzed thru her mind: Had MacFarlane fallen overboard? Had Stella lied when she said he had run down to hide in the skiff? . . . Torn by uncertainties, she didn't realize she was hanging to the Veteran with her power cut, until the forested shore was suddenly close and flying past at alarming speed.

She cast off the skiff and started back to Illahee. She tried to remember everything Stella had said about MacFarlane. And then she recalled Stella's rush to the terrace to wave good-by. . . . What if Stella hadn't been saying good-by? What if she had been trying to call her, Lynn, back to tell her something important?

This line of thought was terminated by a sudden cough from her motor. It ran smoothly for a few moments, then stuttered sharply, and stopped. Lynn's head went light with fear. It couldn't do that! She had plenty of gas. It had to run!

She succeeded in starting it again. Her heavily thumping heart had just quieted down when the motor gave three quick coughs, and went completely dead.

She renewed her efforts to start it, vaguely conscious of water splashing over her. The Julie, with no headway, wallowed and slapped and bumped in the chop. Lynn glanced up. The shore, frighteningly distant, seemed to be swinging about her in a circle. From all sides the pyramidal wavelets, grown taller and black-green, danced madly toward her, jumping straight up into points which the wind tore off and flung in her face.

Terror vibrated thru her. Her blood drained away. The Julie, spinning end for end, without power, without even an oar aboard, was caught in the rush of the strong, tidal current.

The deep, exultant roar of the Bottleneck was growing louder . . . nearer . . .

What Has Gone Before

Lynn Clonnard spends her vacation with one of her Aunt Julie's friends and meets Perry Holloway, who is heading for Alaska. Perry asks her to marry him. They become engaged and will marry at Christmas time. Perry wires he has a job as foreman in a mine and asks her to come immediately to Alaska and marry him there. Lynn has just enough money for a one-way passage. Court Faber, young mining engineer, rescues Lynn and her dog from an accident on the boat. Perry is late meeting her, arriving helplessly drunk. Lynn tells Perry she will not marry him. Jefferson Greer tricks Lynn into asking for a job as secretary at his mine, the Golden Totem. En route to the mine Lynn learns that Greer is Perry's boss. Out canoeing, Lynn sees Faber and Tonglaw, Greer's houseman, studying over papers. Lynn meets Flan O'Hara and Court, who is impressed when he learns she is not married. Later Greer tells Lynn he loaned money to Faber's father and in his absence acquired the Golden Totem when the mortgage was foreclosed. Court's father was drowned and Court is still bitter. Greer sends Perry to Juneau to meet some prospective investors. While Perry is goneGreer tells Lynn she is his ideal woman. Mrs. Stella Chandler, one of Greer's former secretaries, arrives with the party from Juneau. Greer discovers Court is taking advantage of the high tide to get his drill stem across Greer's land. Lynn helps Court outwit Greer. Stella checks the records and investigates the mine. Mrs. Strum, housekeeper, threatens to disclose her loss in Greer's Peru venture, but Greer promises to reimburse her. Greer confesses to Stella that the mine is a fraud, but she insists he marry her. Women Called On to Assist in 7th Bond Drive

By Irene Steyskal

The noisy and gaudy appeal to sentiment, the dramatic plea—these can be effective instruments, any propagandist can tell you, in the recruiting of volunteer workers for a campaign. In the case of war loan drives, they are superfluous, or even irritants, to the informed adult who has a sense of individual responsibility as a citizen of a community and the nation, and who prefers to act without benefit of ballyhoo.

This, therefore, is a simple statement of fact to the women of Chicago and neighboring towns from the women's division of the Chicago and Cook county war finance committee.

There are 20,000 women active in the 7th bond drive which was launched last Monday. More, many more, are needed. Needed most are the women who can help with the door to door canvassing in their neighborhoods. Even if you have only a few free hours you can make that time count.

The women's division has worked out a time saving, uncomplicated system. A woman who can help calls headquarters. The telephone is State 2940. She indicates that she wants to volunteer as a minute man for the 7th war loan drive and gives her name, address, and telephone number. Headquarters passes the information on to the district in which the volunteer resides, and the district "commander" has the next move. She provides the new minute man with a kit containing pledge cards, lapel emblems, a record sheet, and instructions.

Accepting money for a bond is not a responsibility which the minute man need assume. Her job in lining up her bond purchaser is simply to fill out the pledge card. To the credit of the American citizen, this system has proved practical because 99 per cent of all pledges can be counted upon to be fulfilled.

When the story of war financing is told it will be found that women's impressive part in the bond drives was possible largely because of the effective use made of the organizational machinery they had available thru clubs, societies, and federations. In this area, Catholic women's clubs have a war bond record of $254,143,985. Jewish women's organizations are credited with $163,714,506 at the last totaling. There are 31 national groups whose bond sales amount to $9,855,748. Women of Protestant denominations have elected to work thru other than their church groups, and hence are not classified in a religious category in the women's division records.

Mrs. Leo P. Cummings is chairman and Mrs. Richard A. Hallinan is co-chairman of the Catholic groups. They direct the work of 18 clubs in Chicago and the suburbs, in addition to the service auxiliaries of every Catholic hospital in the archdiocese and the mothers' clubs of all parochial schools, Catholic high schools, and colleges. Every parish has a woman's war bond chairman.

Chairman for the Jewish women's organizations is Mrs. Louis L. Mann. Mrs. David Wodlinger is vice chairman of the Jewish committee.

The committee for national groups is headed by Mrs. Donald McPherson. Mrs. Thomas A. Connors is vice chairman.

All have provided workers to man bond booths at theaters, hotels, and other public buildings. To the national groups are assigned the All

Chicago Hears Story of France from Two Eyewitnesses

By Thalia

Just back from the most exciting trip which any Chicago woman has taken is Mrs. Herbert Bradley, who, in a few literally flying weeks, has been with American armies in Italy, in Paris, in Germany, and in England. She went as a war correspondent and will sign her magazine articles about her trip Mary Hastings Bradley. She was just off the plane when she arrived at a dinner party in her uniform a week ago last night at the home of a famous Chicago hostess. She had come from Washington, where she stopped briefly to see her daughter, Capt. Alice Bradley Davey of the WAC, who herself was leaving immediately on a 90 day mission to Europe. Mrs. Bradley was in London on V-E night, and at the sober rather than gay dinner party which she attended that evening she said there was not a single person except herself who had not lost a son or a husband or a brother in the war.

Mrs. Bradley had luncheon in London, dinner in Scotland, came down at 1 a. m. for a hot meal in Iceland, slept cosily on the wooden floor of the plane rolled up in a blanket, had breakfast in Newfoundland, and was in New York at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. During that less than 24 hour flight six hours were lost out of her life and she has not yet, she says, adjusted herself to her watch. Germany was full of the fattest people and the fattest children, she said. France was "turned to steel and ice" by the state of the returnees from forced labor in Germany and from the prison camps. Atrocities are commonplaces, she declared, and what she saw of the Germans' deliberate starving extermination methods she cannot even talk about.

What life was like in Paris recently was told to a fashionable Chicago audience on Monday afternoon at the Casino, where, under the auspices of the Chicago chapter of France Forever, of which Mrs. Walter Brewster is president, Lt. Philippe de Croisset gave a vivid word picture of "Last Winter in Paris." Lt. de Croisset was aide de camp to the head of the French naval air force. He participated in the southern invasion of France and from September of last year until March of this year was stationed in Paris. When the Americans liberated Paris in August, the Parisians thought the war was over, he said, and for two months lived under that delusion. They went joy crazy and ate and drank up all the summer savings.

The summer sun was warm, but with the chilly fall and winter came the problems of how and where to get a meal, how to fight the cold, how to solve the transportation problem, for the bicycles which were such fun to ride in summer were no use in the deepest snow in France's history. The subway was the only means of transportation.

By Christmas time the French shivered not only from the cold but from terror, for that was the time of the German counter-offensive at Bastogne. What every one had to eat was exactly the same. Breakfast consisted of dry rye bread, for there were no fats of any kind to be had; dinner a salad of beets [one of the 10 or more French hors d'oeuvre specialties offered at each meal in peace time], boiled potatoes, or cabbage or cauliflower [or lavishly all three], and plenty of apples and bread, nothing else. Supper was a small version of dinner. "Cafe Nationale," which was, he said, an insult to both coffee and the word national, was the only plentiful drink.

There was a black market, he said, but one which was completely outside the power of the government to curb, for the whole system of life was a barter system. The country was so empty of everything that everybody exchanged something for something else, and when actual

Fresh from the Hills .... Ozark Vineyards

By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

AT Rosati, grapevines are in bloom and the air is perfumed with the winey sweetness of those tiny clustering blossoms. Fifteen hundred acres of vineyards spread their rows across the hills, and people on the trains that rush past the little white store of Richard and Maria Cardetti undoubtedly look with admiration upon those thousands of well pruned vines. Near the store of the Cardettis is the white church that lifts a cross into the blue air of the hills. It is the Church of St. Anthony and many of the little boys with dark eyes that are taught by the nuns in the near-by schoolhouse are named Tony. One of the pre-school youngsters shopping with her mother at Maria Cardetti's is named Gloria Jean. Gloria is an Italian name, says her mother.

Farther up the road stand the twin houses of Maria Gentilini, with roses budding on the trellis and a new brood of kittens playing along the iris row. But Maria, who is all alone in those twin houses, except for the St. Louis guest, Ambrogina Monolo, raises grapes where other Ozark grandmothers raise hollyhocks and zinnias. Maria, with gestures, shrugs, and a flow of Italian words, makes one understand that she once had heavy gold earrings, a wide gold wedding ring, and a gold cross, but she has them no more. With the guest acting as interpreter we learn that Maria sent them to Mussolini when he asked American-Italians for gold with which to restore to Italy the glory that once was Rome's.

It is hard to believe that this region is part of the Ozarks. Why, you'd say, it seems like a little piece of Italy that had been picked up and transported to this country. And that is just about right. Away back before the turn of the century, an American promoter went to Italy and talked practically a whole village into emigrating to America. He told the Italians of the wealth that could be gained in this country, and the freedom one could enjoy, with a whole farm of many acres for each family. It sounded like heaven. Fifty families uprooted from their native soil and came to America. The region where they were settled shall remain an emigration secret, for I don't want to be sued by an irate chamber of commerce. However, even today, the region is not particularly healthful and in those days the water which the Italians had to drink had a green scum on it. Mosquitoes were big as humming birds, says Maria. Many of the Italians took malaria and yellow fever before they could realize what was wrong. Some of them died. They were strong, healthy Neapolitans, and they didn't know how to cope with the strange evils of this new land. They were like bewildered children, homesick and heartsick.

Then a railroad took a hand in the matter. Officials of this road picked up the woebegone Italians with their bags of belongings and put them on a train headed north. At a point five miles above St. James, Mo., at a region named Knob View, they ran some box cars on a siding and said to the Italians: "Here you are, folks! Good luck in your new home!" The Italians, so goes the story that is almost a legend now, were dumped out on the timbered foothills of the Ozarks, where nothing but sandy soil, rocks, and trees could be found. Or perhaps that isn't the way it should be said. For the Italians did find something else. They found health, and happiness. Maria Cardetti, who was little Maria Guidicini in those days, tells of that time.

"Of course we had nothing. But we were happy! O, so happy! You think we had nothing to make us happy! We had fresh air and we had a spring. A spring that was clear and bubbly without any green scum on it. We could drink from it without getting all those bad diseases."

What mattered the previous disappointments when they had a spring like that? The Italian colony lived in the box cars until shacks could be built in the woods, carrying water from their beloved spring for cooking and drinking. On wash days, the women took their clothes, their sheets, their tea towels, to the clear running stream that flowed from the spring and washed them in the fresh clean water, then later dried them in the sun.

When springtime came the men of the colony looked at the soil on which they had been placed. It looked like the soil of their native land. The climate, too, reminded them of home. The nights were filled with the moisture of heavy dews and the days were golden with warm sunshine.

"Like sunny Italy," they said. And then they thought of the grapes they had grown in the old country, grapes that made wine of superlative quality.

"Not far away," said Mrs. Cardetti, in telling of those days, "there was a colony of Frenchmen. Grapes they were growing and our men went over there and got cuttings."

That was the start of Rosati, a colony that now has its own store with potted plants growing in the windows, its own church, its own school, its spaghetti dinners and 1,500 acres of vineyards. For years the colony had no priest of its own. On Sundays, in fair weather, the Italians walked five miles down the railroad track to St. James, where they could attend mass. In bad weather, they had a little shrine back in the woods, where they could meet and a patriarch of the colony could read the rosary. They remained loyal Catholics and when it was decided that the hard syllabled name of Knob View should be changed to something that sat more easily on Italian tongues, they chose the name of the first bishop of St. Louis, and the colony became Rosati. For six years now, Father Moynihan has been the spiritual leader of the group. An Irishman for this group? was my amazed question.

"Ah," said Father Moynihan, "the Irish and the Italians have always gotten along well together." It must be so, for Father Moynihan's enthusiasm for spaghetti dinners is as genuine as if he had come from Italy. And his enthusiasm for the future of Rosati as a grape growing district is as keen. Here, he says, is a spot where barren acres become fruitful ones. A spot that can be a credit to the state and to the nation.

Altho Maria had sent her earrings, her ring, and her gold cross to Mussolini when he was in his chin-thrusting glory, when the United States entered the war the community of Rosati sent something far more precious. Forty-five of their boys! Many of these boys have been with the American army in Italy and they have had fun looking up the families of their grandparents, and their distant cousins and great-uncles. When these boys return, then the 1,500 acres of grapes will be extended to 5,000 and Rosati will be on the map as an important district. The haphazard method of marketing is already licked. A couple of years ago a grapejuice company came into the district and purchased the little processing plant where Rosati wines had been made. But no wines were made. The Rosati grapes went into fine jams and marmalades which were shipped almost exclusively to the boys in service. Now the company is planning a half million dollar processing plant for Rosati. Even now they are preparing for the needs of this plant by offering Concord grape vines at 4 cents each to any one interested in starting a vineyard of one acre or more, or in expanding an existing vineyard. If you have been wondering how you might earn a living in the Ozarks a grape vineyard is one idea worth investigating.

Land is still available at surprisingly low prices [address Rev. C. A. Moynihan, Rosati, Mo., for information], and a vineyard is not a great investment. It takes about 500 plants to fill an acre of ground. Then with the trellis wires and posts necessary to form support for the vines, the cost of setting out a vineyard amounts to about $100 an acre. Unfortunately, you have to wait three years before the vines bear those long clusters of purple grapes, but after that time, your vineyard is good for 40 years, with nothing more than pruning, cultivating, and spraying needed to keep it in good condition. At present, the spraying is no minor matter, about five or six sprayings being necessary each year. But the University of Missouri is making tests on an experimental plot and in time, it is thought, one spraying can be efficient enough to check black rot and other grape evils. Even under present conditions, Father Moynihan says one man can tend 8 to 10 acres of grapes, and have time for a little fishing and hunting on the side.

Grapes are about as hardy a fruit as one can grow. Even if a late frost nips the new leaves late in spring, Mother Nature has an ace up her sleeve. She sends out a second growth, actually not as heavy as the first, but still stout enough to pay for the effort put into the vineyard that year. Only one failure has been known since 1901. And surprising to many of us, is the fact that the grapes grown on this rocky, sandy soil have a sugar content of 21 per cent, altho the United States standard test is 16 per cent. Cool nights and heavy dews, together with hot sunshiny days, produce this miracle of luscious sweetness. Last year, Rosati grapes brought $80 a ton, the highest price ever paid for them, but even in depression years the price was $35 a ton. The normal production of an acre is two tons, but some vineyards have had a yield of 10 tons per acre.

Somehow, it seems to me that all this is the working out of a great plan which the puny mind of man could never have devised. It began with the coming of the homesick discouraged Italians, who found a spot they loved. Then for a half century they worked to make fruitful those hills where only the rabbits and foxes had nested. Now when those 45 boys come home from an Italy such as their Grandfather Cardetti or Piazza or Guidicini never knew they will find homelands waiting for them. Yes, and for many of their buddies who want to get back to the song of birds, the cleanliness of sun-warmed soil, and the miracle of blossoming, fruitful vines. Here is a priest waiting to marry that boy to the girl of his choice. Here is a school paid for by state funds and taught by nuns from the near-by convent, waiting for his children. Here is a plant with capacity for all the grapes he can raise. For relaxation and amusement, there are spaghetti dinners at frequent intervals, with the whole community joining in the fun. And once a year, there is the great harvest festival, when a grape queen is crowned and every one enjoys four days of dancing and merrymaking. But most important of all will be the sight of long rows of grape vines with great clusters of cool, frosty-looking black-purple grapes ripening in the autumn sun. A sight like this makes America seem worthy of the hard fight the boys have put up for it.

money changed hands, prices were fabulous. Butter on the black market cost $20 a pound, an egg $1.30.

"Everything was tiresome and so difficult," he said, "but the spirit of every one was wonderful. Every one grumbled, of course, but they grumbled gaily. The shop windows were kept trimmed beautifully with empty packages or with bottles of colored water. The shopgirls all looked chic in the dresses they had made from old curtains and bedspreads. Paris, which was fortunately little damaged by bombings, was, as always, beautiful. But," he added, "if you could open Paris' heart, I wonder if it would not break yours?"

Pausing in Chicago only long enough to telephone a couple of old friends and hurrying out to Lake Forest recently was Mrs. Graham Aldis, who has been living for two years in Alexandria, Va., since Maj. Aldis has been stationed in Washington. She brought with her the news of the engagement of her daughter, Mary Cornelia, to Lt. Charlton Ogburn Jr. Mrs. Aldis came out to get the house ready for the marriage tentatively set for June 22. On the lawn where Mary Cornelia made her debut, after a quiet wedding attended only by the family, the wedding reception will be held, I hear.

Mary Cornelia is carrying on the family literary tradition by marrying a writer. Lt. Ogburn has many magazine articles to his credit. He was a member of the famous Merrill's Marauders in Burma, I hear, and wrote the widely known poem about them. He is now in the same department in Washington as Maj. Aldis, the United States signal corps. As in Mary Cornelia's case, whose mother and grandmother are well known as writers and whose maternal grandfather was James Keeley, famous newspaper editor, writing runs in Lt. Ogburn's family. Both his mother and his father appear in Who's Who as authors of books.

Tuesday afternoon was one of the busiest on the calendar with three large tea parties. The Woman's Athletic club welcomed its members in a gala pre-golden anniversary tea party with Mrs. Arthur Wakeley, the outgoing president, and Mrs. Albert F. Madlener Jr., the new president, the focus of the afternoon's celebration of the club's 47 years of existence. Mrs. Madlener's grandmother, Mrs. George M. Pullman, was an early member of the club, as was her mother, Mrs. Frank O. Lowden. Mrs. Philip D. Armour was the first president and for years the building on the corner of Harrison st. and Michigan av. housed the club. When it moved to N. Michigan av. it became one of the handsomest women's clubs in the country, and it now has 1,250 members.

On Tuesday afternoon all of the members who braved the elements came in their most attractive outfits and spirits. It was a delightful tea party, simple, in accord with war times, but with the gay charm of a debut party or a wedding with corsages over happy hearts, bouquets dressing up the house, and all of the favorite relatives on hand. Some of the early members of the club were greeted with special happiness, among them the indestructibly lovely Mrs. Patrick Valentine, Mrs. Allan Clement, Mrs. Henry Bartholomay, and Mme. Hettler.

A few blocks away at the Arts club the professional musician members of the club gave their annual concert and entertained their guests and the club membership at tea. Edward Collins, pianist, played six compositions of his own and the works of three Chicago composers, John Alden Carpenter, Rudolph Ganz, and Leo Sowerby. One of Mr. Carpenter's songs was also on the program chosen by Miss Kathryn Witwer. A very amusing musical skit about two rival operatic prima donnas was presented by Marie Sidenius Zendt, who wrote it; Miss Lola Fletcher, as her rival, and Rose Lyon Du Moulin as their accompanist. Mrs. Charles Swift, chairman of the music committee, was the day's official hostess, and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter was responsible for the unusual tea table adorned with dramatic birds of paradise in copper urns.

Across the bridge in the Tavern club the Arden Shore association welcomed not only its 20 provisional members who have fulfilled their allotted volunteer tasks and hours in the association and in war bond and stamp sales booths, but also prospective members with whose help the Arden Shore camp at Lake Bluff will carry on its fine work as a recuperative home for underprivileged children. There will be the new Morrow Krum playground, a memorial to Col. Morrow Krum, who was killed two years ago, and the association plans a new service for the summer. It will care for children whose fathers are in service and whose mothers are employed. Mrs. George W. Traver is president of the association.

With the San Francisco conference focusing our minds on the necessity of international understanding, the Library of International Relations propitiously opened its drive for new members under the able leadership of Mrs. William B. Hale, vice president of the library board, and her committee, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, Mrs. Ernest Ballard, Mrs. Augustine Bowe, and Mrs. John Clarke. Dr. Chiang Mon-Lin, chancellor of the National university in Peking and president of China's Red Cross, spoke at the organization meeting on "Education in China." And speaking of international relations, Dr. Chiang spent last Sunday with the Homer Dixons, returning the visit which the Dixons' son-in-law, Lt. Wallace Wakem, had recently made in Peking.

The roster of the newly organized women's board of trustees of the library was announced. It includes among its score or more members such pillars of Chicago's betterment as Mrs. Emmons Blaine, Mrs. Cyrus Bentley, Mrs. Murry Nelson, and Mrs. Walter Brewster.

The most touching testimonial to the place which the library has made in the hearts of Chicagoans bent on knowing better their fellow men was given recently by an army private who, as a civilian, had made use of the library. "This library and what it does is one of the things we're fighting for," he said, shyly, "and if you don't mind, I'd like to leave it my insurance in case I don't come back."

The wedding will take place June 9 in the Bellwood Evangelical church, following Mr. Byron's graduation from Marine Officers' Training school at Quantico, Va.

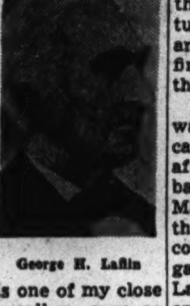
When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, May 21, 1897

Dear Julia: I have just returned from a call of condolence at the home of our mutual friend, Mrs. George H. Laflin. I know you'll be interested, for you remember her so well when she was Mary Brewster, one of our schoolmates at Maplewood Seminary in Pittsfield, Mass. Her father-in-law, Matthew Laflin, died yesterday and as she is one of my close friends, I paid my call as soon as possible, going in the morning which I should not often do.



George H. Laflin

The George H. Laflins live at 1614 Michigan av., altho they spend a good deal of time at their summer home in Pittsfield. Matthew Laflin, the father of Mr. George H. Laflin, lived at 2335 Michigan av. Called for years "the oldest living settler of Chicago," he was a link between the past of Fort Dearborn days and the modern city, and I think he took great pride in this, for he never faltered in his devotion to Chicago. From the day in 1838 when he was sheltered under the roof of the fort until he closed his eventful career Chicago was his home. He had lived to the great age of 92.

His was a life of adventure. His father was a manufacturer of gunpowder and he early entered the business himself, forming a partnership with an older brother. Matthew Laflin took charge of the sales and himself drove about the country with wagon loads of their product. Once, driving into the town of Dover, N. H., with a load of 20 kegs of gunpowder, he found that a lighted coal of fire had somehow been thrown onto the wagon. Seeing that a terrific explosion was inevitable, Mr. Laflin acted promptly. He turned the horses' heads toward the Dover river, lashed them into a run and then abandoned the outfit. This saved the town from the worst effects of the explosion, tho I believe two lives were lost. Later he started a powder factory of his own and learning in 1837 that the Illinois and Michigan canal was to be begun in Chicago he came west to try to supply the powder needed for clearing the land. He hadn't intended to remain, but was so impressed by the possibilities here that he returned next year with his family and lived [1838-1839] in the fort, finding more comfortable quarters there than were available elsewhere.

I think you'll be interested, as I was, in the different places in Chicago where he lived. His first home, after leaving the fort, was on Wabash av., between Washington and Madison sts. Then he bought from the canal commissioners a lot at the corner of Washington st. and Michigan av. where he put up a house. Later he moved this house to a lot on Wabash av. just south of 12th st. where he lived for some time. While living there he built in 1850 on the lot at Washington st. and Michigan av. the first block of brick houses in the city. There were six houses in the block and he occupied the corner one. The fire of 1871 destroyed this block and he bought a house in a block owned by W. F. Coolbaugh in Park Row, very near the Illinois Central station at 12th st. This was then a fashionable location, with such residents as Charles Wicker, James M. Walker, and Gen. John A. Logan. His latest home was at 2335 Michigan av. Doesn't it show the rapid development of our city?

His large fortune was made mainly in real estate. Nine acres which he bought for $900 in early days was sold for $400,000. It was in 1849 that he bought 100 acres on the west side where the Washingtonian home now stands, and here he built the famous Bull's Head tavern to accommodate the stockmen who brought their animals to Chicago. Near this he built barns, sheds and pens, thus establishing the first stock yards in our city, now noted as a packing center. There was no transportation from this hotel to the downtown section so he established an omnibus service.

He helped build up the Elgin Watch company, and had large holdings in it. He was credited with being many times a millionaire. About 10 years ago he made a partial distribution of his wealth, giving each of his two sons a million dollars and retaining two millions himself. In 1894 he gave $75,000 to erect a building for the Chicago Academy of Sciences in Lincoln park at the foot of Center st. He has been too feeble to enter the building, Mrs. Laflin told me, but has been able to drive past it and to see the name, "Matthew Laflin Memorial" on the facade. We shall miss this old settler. Lovingly yours,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND

An Old Music Book

Mrs. J. H. Jones, 4562 Lake Park av., has given us an old music book containing piano and voice selections popular in the 70s. A curious feature is the presence of advertisments on every page, above the music. Thus, above a "galop" is found the business card of Dr. A. Willard of 209 S. State st., who treats all diseases of the feet. His patients testify to the relief he gives and among these grateful ones is Charles B. Farwell [later United States senator from Illinois] who says: "Dr. Willard's treatment of bunions is all that could be desired," while prominent citizen L. C. P. Freer commends Dr. Willard as one of the most skilful in his profession. Even physicians, among the best known of the day—Drs. W. W. Allport and W. C. Lyman—add their voices to the chorus of praise of this foot specialist.

Continuing thru this week, possibly longer, is the "20th Century Black Magic" educational exhibit, a 7th war loan show sponsored jointly by the women's division of the Chicago and Cook county war finance committee and the Bituminous Coal institute. That the exhibit, with its promise of things to come in the post-war world, has its interest for men as well as women is indicated by the hundreds of persons who already have viewed it. Modern chemistry has drawn 200,000 different commodities from coal, and the exhibit shows the wonders worked in the 20th century laboratory with coal and its by-products.

The visitor to the Black Magic exhibit may see how coal has gone to war in the form of sulfa drugs, nylon parachutes, hammocks, and a score of other products. Verminproof nylon hammocks have been one of the comforts modern science has been able to provide for the men in the South Pacific.

Of special interest to women is the new relooming process demonstrated in the exhibit, a process that makes sweaters and other woolen garments shrinkproof. The stocking of tomorrow will be runproof and snagproof, thanks to another coal by-product process shown. Another section of the display is given to synthetic perfumes that have a coal base.

Ten thousand hues and tints for the dyeing of fabrics, textiles, and plastics can be created from bituminous coal, the exhibit shows, and the red of a lipstick, as well as the black of mascara derive from the same source.

In the tomorrow of normal production the housewife who has accumulated a nest egg in war bonds will be able to purchase a table with a cola-finished top which is impervious to scar from a burning cigaret, picture frames, compacts, handbags, and scores of beautiful and convenient articles converted from coal.

Indian Women to Hold Annual Party May 28

Indian brave is a term that has gained new meaning in this war. The young Hopi who left his remote and ancient village set within the rainbow wonderland of the Grand canyon, the roaming Navajo who turned from the free trails of his Painted Desert, the Osage, the Cherokee, the Chippewa from his Oklahoma, Wisconsin, and Michigan reservations, have written, as American soldiers on battle fronts around the world, a proud chapter in the history of their race.

Their story, with its implications for the future, will be told at the annual Indian "feast" of the First Daughters of America by Mrs. Ah-Na-Wake Hastings of the office of Indian affairs. The Indian women's group, which is affiliated with the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, will hold its party for members and a large circle of guests at 12:30 o'clock Monday, May 28, in the Wedgwood room at Marshall Field's. Mrs. Hastings will be the principal speaker.

The First Daughters' May feast is one of the most colorful among the spring parties of the women's clubs. Many members attend in tribal dress, and the table decorations are carried out in Indian designs and symbols. This year a newly organized group of young Indian women, the Daughters of Chieftains, has been invited, and several in that guest contingent plan to wear costume.

The May feast is the occasion for taking into the club as "adopted daughters" friends who have made outstanding contributions to interrace understanding or otherwise have advanced the Indian's cause. Designated for the honor this year are Mrs. C. G. Myers, retiring state chairman of Indian welfare in the club federation; Mrs. E. R. DeLaunty, retiring 9th district chairman, and Mrs. George F. Schultz. Each will receive the Indian friendship ring and an Indian name at the adoption ceremonial.

Mrs. Charles F. Fitzgerald, who has served continuously as president since the First Daughters organized in 1930, will conduct the ceremony, assisted by Miss Alsesta Murphy. Mrs. Fitzgerald's ancestors were Chippewas, and Miss Murphy is a Sioux.

Among other guest speakers at the party will be Mrs. Marc Fowler, who took a leading part in having an Indian welfare department incorporated in the Illinois club federation; Miss Elizabeth Rock, secretary of the Cass Lake, Minn., unit of the First Daughters; Mrs. Leslie H. Moss, who succeeds Mrs. Myers as state Indian welfare chairman of the club federation in Illinois, and George G. LaMotte [Flaming Rainbow], treasurer of the National Council of American Indians.

Mrs. S. Y. Patterson will exhibit a recently acquired collection of Sioux art and handcraft, and will tell stories connected with various articles. Mrs. Patterson is widely known for the educational work she has done to extend appreciation for the Indian arts. Another participant in the program will be Miriam Mills, lyric soprano, who will sing Indian songs.

A. A. U. W. Unit Plans Business Meet Saturday

One of the convention casualties of the war was the American Association of University Women's national gathering. But branches thruout the country have found means for "a meeting of minds if not of persons," and next Saturday will see many local units assembled to hear recordings of talks by the national president, Dr. Helen C. White of the University of Wisconsin; Miss Marion Talbot of the University of Chicago, founder of the association; Freda Kirchway, editor of The Nation, and a panel discussion by Dr. Margaret Mead, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Capt. Mildred McAfee of the navy, and Dr. May Shattuck Fisher.

Chicago branch, of which Miss Gertrude Smith is president, will assemble at 1 o'clock that day in the Rose room of Huyler's restaurant. The luncheon session will be given to committee reports, nominations of candidates for office, and a vote on legislative proposals made at the recent state convention in Springfield. Mrs. Foster Ballard represented the Chicago group at that meeting.

The second half of the session will be devoted to the recorded program, after which the group's seven official delegates will cast their vote on a national program proposed for the association for the 1945 to 1947 period.

Ceramic Show Is Current at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett

Hubert Ropp, dean of the school of the Art institute, has proved himself for many years one of Chicago's most talented and able painters and a teacher of distinction. His administration of the Art institute school during the war years has been very successful. Mr. Ropp is one of the least contentious men we know in regard to contemporary art, and one who is broad minded in a wise and just fashion. His instinctive good taste and keen perception of proportion are perhaps the lights by which he steers his promising course.

At the moment he is turning his attention to industrial art, a most interesting development today in the art world. Mr. Ropp plans to bring to the Art institute school gallery exhibitions that will be of interest to students, faculty, and the public. The current exhibit is a traveling ceramic show of work and educational photographs from several schools—Pratt institute, the New York State College of Ceramics, Cranbook Art academy, and Sophie Newcomb college. Four cases of pottery and ceramic sculpture, showing a great variety of glazes from dull finish to rich red luster, are on display. The pictures illustrating the exhibit show ceramic processes for craft and industrial use.

Mr. Ropp announced last week that Emil Holzhauer, well known American artist, will be a visiting instructor in the Art institute summer school, opening in a few weeks. Holzhauer will teach figure painting. At present he is a professor of art at Wesleyan college, Macon, Ga. His work is represented in many important museums in the United States. During June the painter will enjoy a one man show in a special exhibition in the Art institute school gallery.

A new class, volume design, will be offered students of the summer school this year. The work will be in three dimensional forms applicable to industrial designs, architectural sculpture, displays, and interior designs. Another popular course in the summer school will be classes in sculpture and landscape painting. Appealing to the classroom teacher is a course called "The Working Methods of Art Education." In history of art a course is scheduled which will cover the development of Dadaism from 1917 to 1922 [when it died of its own weakness] and surrealism since 1922.

The Renaissance society of the University of Chicago offers a group exhibit of painting and sculpture by Chicago artists in Goodspeed hall, 1010 E. 59th st., to June 6. One of the most promising artists is the sculptor, Egon Weiner. Mr. Weiner is to have a one man show of his work next March at the Art institute. Recently he was advised by the trustees of the Oakland, Cal., Art gallery that his sculpture, "St. Paul," was awarded the silver medal in the gallery's annual exhibition of painting and sculpture.

Mr. Weiner spent much time in Rome and is obviously influenced by the primitiveness of early Christian art. An important work of his is "Ecce Homo," which while being of unusual severity still does not imitate Epstein. Of the sculpture in the present exhibit, Weiner's is the most interesting.

Among the painters — Gertrude Abercrombie, Aaron Bohrod, and Charles Schucker — possibly Abercrombie offers the most intriguing fare, tho there is something to be said for Bohrod's color and Schucker's sincerity.

The Chicago Galleries association, 215 N. Michigan av., opened a new exhibition April 12 to continue to June 2. Esther Richardson is showing colorful and decorative water colors and oils of the west and midwest; Walter Graham offers a group of water colors of the northwest and rural Illinois, and Otto Hake, veteran Chicago painter, submits original sketches for recently executed murals.

• • •

Doris Rosenthal has a serious one man exhibit in the Marshall Field galleries. The show opened last Wednesday and will continue three weeks. Miss Rosenthal is familiar to most of us for her painting of the Mexican peasant, child and adult. The current exhibit continues along similar themes with Guatemala and Mexico sharing the limelight. As usual, the paintings are in subdued colors, but the artist's wise use of white sets off the lack of exuberance in her color to good effect.

• • •

An exhibit of delightful water colors by Bessie C. Williams, president of the Ridge Art association, is on view in the Tudor gallery, Chicago Woman's club, Fine Arts building. It is a pleasant show.

• • •

Dale Nichols, who actually was set upon his career as a painter thru the encouragement of the All-Illinois Society of Fine Arts with special emphasis on the interest Mrs. Edwin N. Johnson showed him, has been appointed art editor of the Encyclopaedia Britannica publications. He succeeds Grant Wood in that post. Dale Nichols is noted for his work in commercial art as well as in fine art. His paintings are familiar to a host of Americans. He represents one of the healthy currents of contemporary painting that is accepted and valued everywhere.

• • •

The Skokie Art guild is holding its first Chicago exhibition in the club woman's bureau, Mandel Brothers. Among the valuable items in the show are the group of water colors by Mary Bornath, the two effective water colors by Leslie Davis, the attractive child portrait, "Sabra," by Frank Ransley, and the delightful still life, "No. 33," by Melaine Reynolds. "Susan," by Kenneth Ransley, and "Pheasant Season," by Robert Shepherd, with "Palisades," by Richard Dickinson, are other works not to be overlooked.

The Institute of Design, 247 E. Ontario st., has an interesting exhibition of advertising, furniture, painting, photography, sculpture, and textiles on view to June 1. The artists represented are members of the faculty and include L. Moholy-Nagy, Calvin Albert, Marli Ehrman, Ralph Rapson, Andi Schiltz, and Crombie Taylor.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

A preview of a new stock of goods now offered for sale in the White Elephant Rummage shop, 27 E. Ohio st., was had at a movie party held recently in the Esquire theater by the woman's auxiliary board of the Children's Memorial hospital for the express purpose of raising stock for the shop, which is conducted for the benefit of the hospital. "Those look like my best dinner plates" said a woman admiring the array of gifts brought to the theater as admission and which were displayed on a long table in the lobby. She referred to gold bordered white china plates which were the contribution of Mrs. Hopewell Rogers, and which had been a wedding present to her. Another wedding present on view was a dozen blue glass liqueur glasses made in the shape of boots, which had been sent to Mrs. Frederick Hauck. They were brought to the party by Mrs. Hauck's mother, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, honorary chairman of the rummage shop committee. Other contributions included a large doll wearing a crisp organdy dress and bonnet, a dinner blouse of knitted red wool and gold threads [mighty fashionable right now]; a Sheffield silver egg service, and a black lacquered Chinese tray inset with mother of pearl. Mrs. Charles K. Foster, president of the hospital's auxiliary board, wearing the ever popular "uniform" of black and pearls, supervised the checking of the gifts. Mrs. Nathaniel Leverone arrived at the theater wearing a navy blue suit and carrying her furs. Mrs. William H. Mitchell came in from Lake Forest for the party, wearing smart tweeds of narrow brown and beige stripes.

One of the first Paris hats seen in Chicago was worn to a Fashion Group luncheon by the speaker, Carmel Snow, editor of a fashion magazine, who purchased it during the four months she spent recently in England and France. Contrary to the fabulous concoctions which have appeared in print as Parisian headgear, it was a perfectly conservative black, off the face bonnet. Mrs. Snow's black costume was conservative, too, and the corsage which decorated one shoulder was that good old American standby, a single, large gardenia. Evening gowns are not worn in Paris, Mrs. Snow told her audience, but they are being designed, and the most unusual features of these dresses are long, tight sleeves, and bouffant skirts held out in front at the hem line by ruffled taffeta petticoats stiffened by horsehair. Housegowns are worn as evening dresses in homes, she said, and the most necessary attribute of a good figure has become a tiny waist.

One of the coldest and most disagreeable May days on record did not discourage a large contingent of France Forever members from coming out to hear Lt. Philippe de Croisset speak at tea in the Casino club. Most of the feminine guests arrived bundled up in fur coats and clutching umbrellas which they dared not raise outside for fear the heavy winds would turn them inside out. On duty in the foyer to welcome the hardy souls who had ventured out that day was the organization's president, Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, wearing a French gray crepe dress with a sunburst of tiny tucks radiating from the neck line, and a little gray sailor crowned in cornflowers. Mrs. William Henry Wood, who had known the speaker in Paris, came to the party in a slim black crepe gown, unadorned save for a jeweled clip at the neck line, and a wisp of a hat with chartreuse blossoms tangled in its black veiling. Another touch of chartreuse was a chiffon scarf which Mrs. Pauling Donnelley knotted about her throat, to enliven a black dress and harmonize with a green straw calot with bunches of white flowers at her temples. A geranium red scarf printed in black and white covered the bodice of Mrs. Byron S. Harvey Jr.'s tailored black dress, while Miss Eleanor McClurg came to tea wearing her Red Cross uniform.

Costume of the week: Mrs. Hugo Vogel's chocolate brown dress, blond sable jacket, and hat of stiffened beige chiffon springing upwards softly from a base decorated with small lace medallions. The hat is romantic whimsy, and the dress tailored simplicity. About her neck Mrs. Vogel tied a narrow brown ribbon, from which was suspended a gold ornament resembling a military decoration.

PITTSFIELD, MASS. Despite a mid-May 6-inch snow storm and cold copious rains, Chicago and suburbs are well represented among early arrivals in the Berkshire hills. They include Mrs. W. Rockwood Gibbs of Lake Forest at Rock Ridge farms, Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. William Felton Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. George O. The Berkshire Garden center at Stockbridge, of which Mrs. Barrett [Margery Barker] is president, issued today the first number of its monthly magazine, Cuttings, in which she says:

"Spring again. How good it will be to see each other once more and to begin our 11th year of activities under the able leadership of our director, A. Kenneth Simpson. With the ending of the European war will come a rebirth of a desire to grow things of beauty in our gardens. This summer let's start planting for food, but add a touch of planting for beauty. Good digging."

• • •

Mrs. Barrett has called the initial meeting of the center's horticultural committee for next Saturday when Dr. Malcolm A. McKenzie of the Massachusetts State college faculty, will speak. The center season starts with an enrolment of 756 representing 22 garden organizations.

Stern Home Is Show Place in New Orleans

By Mildred Peterson

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

New Orleans is famous for so many things: There is the picturesque, fun-loving French Quarter with its old market dating from 1813; the busy harbor, filled with vessels from many countries, warships, ferries, fireboats, barges, and tugboats; the important war plants, and Canal st., one of the widest and best lighted streets in the world, paved in modernistic style with pink and white terrazzo marble, built over the old canal. Then there is the $13,000,000 Huey P. Long bridge across the Mississippi river at New Orleans, which has a height equal to a 36 story building and extends for four and one-half miles; the Lake Pontchartrain district with its beautiful drives, yacht club, and resort area; Newcomb college, Loyola university, and Tulane university of Sugar Bowl game fame founded in 1835, and last but by no means least, New Orleans' lovely homes and gardens.

After the Louisiana Purchase, Americans from the east began to settle in New Orleans and, not being altogether welcomed by the French, they laid out their own section of the city on the upper side of Canal st. which served as a sharp dividing line between the new section and old French Quarter.

In time this section became known as the Garden district because of the lovely ante-bellum, colonial homes, and beautifully planted lawns and gardens, many of which display tall, stately palms and old, massive oaks, draped with Spanish moss. In time this section, which is a link in the city's 60 mile azalia trial and which during February, March, and April is ablaze with blooms, was filled and newer residential divisions, such as Metairie and Country Club became popular.

• • •

It is here, at 11 Garden lane, overlooking the velvet green of the New Orleans Country club, that a former Chicago girl, Mrs. Edgar B. Stern [Edith Rosenwald, daughter of philanthropists Mr. and Mrs. Julius Rosenwald], and her husband, a member of an old New Orleans family, built an attractive white pillared, southern type home when they were married some 24 years ago.

Several years ago that large home was moved up the lane, since a larger home was desired by the Sterns and their three children: Audrey, who was married last summer to Lt. Thomas Hess, an aviator stationed at Selma, Ala.; Lt. Edgar B. Stern in the army signal corps, and Phillip Stern, apprentice seaman, in the V-12 program at Harvard.

This new home, occupied two years ago and named "Longue Vue," because Mr. and Mrs. Stern became engaged while visiting a picturesque old estate on the Hudson bearing this name, is considered the finest home in New Orleans, with gardens surpassed by none. Petite, friendly, unassuming, sun tanned Mrs. Stern would make no such claim. Neither would she divulge the number of rooms in this glorious menage, but friends reported that there are from 45 to 50.

She admitted that she had the same feeling as her famous father, who contended "I never want to own much property. I just want the piece next to mine," and so, little by little, they added to the grounds so as to make possible the wonderful formal, sunken gardens.

Four "fronts" has this Louisiana colonial cottage home, adapted by the Sterns and their New York architect, William Platt, to today's needs. The library, powder room, children's sitting rooms, kitchen, and part of the servants' quarters are on the first floor. The usual long "breeze way," or wide hall, separates the floor in half, with rooms on either side.

The dining room, located in the northeast corner, is particularly charming and has its own vine covered, walled, patio garden adjacent on the north. On the east the long windows, decorated in creamy rose curtains and soft green draperies, face the Country club grounds. The exquisite Oriental murals of birds, trees, and flowers harmonize with the soft blue-green woodwork, as does the Karbagh rug, which with those of the halls, came from Russia, and the rose background in the several wall cases, which are filled with lovely cream white Leeds china pieces. Silver wall candle sconces lend further dignity to the room, in which is 18th century dining furniture.

Part of the Stern collection of green Bristol glass bottles are on top of the mantle of the fireplace on the west wall.

In every room and thruout the hallways were wonderful arrangements of many flowers from the spacious gardens. On one console table stood an old crystal and gold French flower holder, which had separate vases for about a dozen different varieties of camellias.

On the south front is the formal garden, while the eastern exposure overlooks more blossoming camellias and azaleas [there are hundreds of varieties in the gardens], bamboo, Spanish moss draped oak, hackberry, and sweet olive trees, with the wide vista of the beautiful golf course and Country club grounds in the distance.

The same columned effect is maintained on the north side, white with the deep green shutters, which faces more gardens, tennis courts, and the playhouse. There, as is the custom once a month, all of the presidents of the Garden clubs of New Orleans get together to plan and work on the gardening and beautification of the government hospital grounds and the city of New Orleans.

In keeping with Mrs. Stern's belief that "in good art, form follows function," the main playroom is panelled in Louisiana cyprus, which has a finish of white lead and wax. The floors are wide boards in a darker tone, and the interior decorating here, as elsewhere thruout the home, as well as the landscaping, was done by Ellen Biddle Shipman, who at 75 is considered by Mrs. Stern to be the dean of the landscape gardeners.

It was in the Stern home that the long-to-be-remembered "cherished possessions" auction sale took place for two nights a few months ago, which netted the garden clubs of New Orleans over $3,000 to carry on their philanthropic work. As president of the Garden Study club of New Orleans, which is a chapter of the Garden Club of America, Mrs. Stern and the presidents of the 14 garden clubs of the city managed this affair, which will be held annually in this playhouse.

• • •

Opportunity will be given at this assembly for questions from the floor concerning such problems as would usually have been discussed at the state convention, canceled this year because of war time travel restrictions.

Members of the Peoria Student group and the Artist-Student Music Club of Springfield also will perform.

Tomorrow's all day session will be a closed one.

• • •

The program will be shared by Reinhold Schmidt, basso; Ella Steele, soprano; Jean Breivogel, cellist, and Thalia Heim, pianist.

A FRIEND IN NEED

[Sally Joy Brown department activities are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

By Sally Joy Brown

Often wheel chairs may mark the difference between the lonely, confining existence of a sickroom and the opportunity to move about and enjoy the freshness and beauty of the outdoors. They may become the means of contributing to an invalid's feeling of well being where before had been only a feeling of helplessness.

Our readers, always alert to our petitions for the needy are particularly so when those appeals come from the sick and disabled, and we are confident the following requests for wheel chairs for a small boy and an elderly woman will be heeded.

• • •

Billy is one of the twin sons of an overseas soldier. Since his birth the little lad has had muscular spasms, and walking has been extremely difficult. Altho exercise and massage has been beneficial, operative care finally became necessary. Now he is home from the hospital, his legs encased in casts which reach from his toes to 3 inches above his knees. These add greatly to his weight, and it is impossible to move him about without great effort and strain. Consequently, he is confined to his bed more than he should be. His mother has given him excellent nursing care and is hopeful that he will be able to walk when his father returns from foreign service. However, unless he is able to get out in the fresh air and sunshine, she fears that he will lose the ruddiness which she has fought so hard to keep, despite his handicap. A wheel chair would prove to be a great help in permitting him to enjoy the outdoors and contacts with his little friends.

• • •

Another wheel chair request, which we hope can be filled by a reader who has one no longer in use, is for Mrs. K., an elderly woman who has been unable to walk for more than a year. Her husband, who also is frail with age, does the housework and cooking, and not only looks well to her needs, but earns their meager living by a few hours' employment in the evening. A wheel chair would enable him to care for her with greater facility and give the enjoyment of an occasional outing.

Dainty Bridal Lingerie Has Sheer Accent

By Rea Seeger

Trousseau lingerie is, this year, made of delicately tinted, fragile looking sheers, as well as the traditional shimmering satins. Because of the summer weddings ahead, emphasis is on the filmy beauties, usually of blush pink, sky blue, angelic white, and a very few in mint green and soft tones of yellow. If the pastels don't particularly click, there are all kinds of dainty floral prints. Brand new affairs are those of pastel sheers, exquisitely appliqued with delicate colored motifs.

Matched sets of nightgown and negligee still continue in popularity. Many times the negligee is of sheer, and the nightgown is of matching colored satin, but both are trimmed exactly alike as to lace and fine handwork. Again lace triumphs over all other details as trousseau embellishment for nightgowns, negligees, and matched sets of slip, gown, and panties. Also featured significantly are the gowns and lingerie, pieces beautifully decorated with fanciful applique patterns and motifs in delicate contrasting colors: Blue on pink, blue on palest yellow, white on blue, or green.

Also effective are the appliqued scrolls and bands of gleaming satin on sheer or dull textured crepe.

A few all-silk, costly gowns and negligees still are available. They are extraordinarily beautiful and tempting to those who have never quite forgotten the patrician elegance of silk. But the prices are shocking even to the most extravagant shopper. Of course they're worth their weight in gold because of the limited assortments and sizes. All-whites and a few pink and blue gowns, lavishly encrusted with fine lace, provide ideal gift suggestions for any indulgent friends or relatives.

There are new models to check, too, this season. The new peignoirs, negligees made without yokes that fall in straight, loose lines to the floor, are cut with long, full gathered sleeves and tie with a soft bow high at the throat. These are matched to gowns and are available in the sheer and satin twosomes or both satin or both sheer. Later you'll find extremely effective summer duets of peignoir and nightgown in washable cottons.

Another new garment is the wrap around nightgown. This is made with a low top and a very wide skirt, and it is long and graceful with a narrow tie sash belt. Many of the most effective gowns of the wrap around type have effective applique details in contrasting pastel colors.

Lace is another summer charmer featured in the current collections of trousseau lingerie. Long, fitted, lace hostess gowns and negligees still are the most provocatively feminine creations for any trousseau, summer or winter. Nothing equals this flattering stuff for either trim or as the fabric for an entire creation. White, ivory tints, some pastels, and a lot of spider web-thin black are available, and at amazingly modest prices.

Sketched are five trousseau lingerie models, all from one superlative collection. They are to be found in a Chicago store. For further information call Superior 0200.

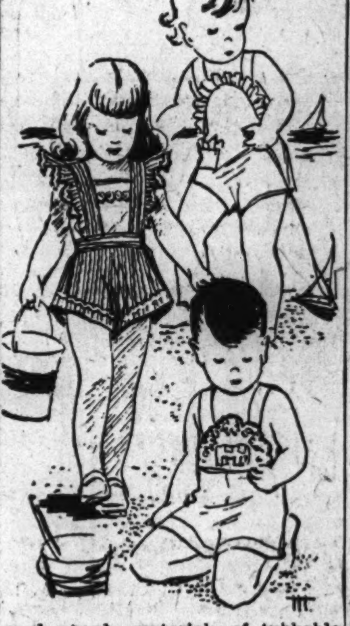
Exploratory toddlers have a wonderful time discovering sand piles, wading pools, and cool green grass when warm summer days permit outdoor play. They also crow just as delightedly when they find themselves attired in cunning new sun suits, since they are just becoming clothes conscious, too. Toddlers' suits are many and varied, all of good, sturdy materials of tubbable white, colors, and stripes, ranging in size from 1 to 3.



The spanking white sun suit at top, which may be worn by boys or girls, has a narrow pink ruffle around the bib and across a single pocket. Pink binding trims the pant legs.

Definitely for little girls is the pinafore sun suit of striped seersucker. The gay fly away ruffles over the shoulder and tiny pant legs are trimmed with white rick rack. The full ruffles cross in back and tie in a bow at the waist band.

A bright red elephant surrounded with embroidery trim on a scalloped bib is the only decoration on the white cotton suit at bottom. The white shoulder straps cross in back and fasten at an elastic shirred waist band.

Not illustrated is a suit for a little girl fashioned of blue and white striped percale. The heart shaped bib, minute pocket, and pant legs are edged with white ruffled lace.

Protect Your Clothes from Moth Damage

By Edith Weigle

With summer approaching, it's time to give some thought to the moth protection of winter garments, blankets, and rugs you may be storing until next fall. The eternal fight against moths is monotonous, and just one of those things most of us endure year after year, like taxes.

So, the sooner and the more efficiently we go thru the regular routine, the better. Because of heat and humidity moth life in this area is most abundant from April to October, the eggs hatching in four to eight days in warm weather.

What some home managers are apt to forget is that the larvae or worms may become dormant for from six months to two or three years, then start nibbling on woolens again! So, if you use a moth spray you should repeat the process once a month during the summer.

Also, it doesn't do much good to spray garments and put them away in bags in a clothes closet where moths have been living in cracks and dark corners for a long time. You are giving your garments temporary protection, but it would be better to rid the closet itself of the pests.

This can be done only by filling the area with a gas deadly to moths. The closet must be sealed shut over night, or for a day, to allow the gas to penetrate in every nook, crack, and crevice. Then, spray your dry cleaned or freshly laundered garments with a good moth spray and put them away in airtight bags and you should have no further worries.

Many women like to use moth crystals, as they do afford more than temporary protection for woolens. By placing them in an airtight bag with the articles to be kept moth-free they create a gas and continue creating it for some time. The fumes kill all forms of moth life.

Containers holding solid packs of these crystals, if used in closets but not in closet bags, should be hung fairly high. They do have an odor that is unpleasant to many people, but it is not so unpleasant as moth riddled garments.

• • •

If used in an average sized trunk or cedar chest at least a pound of the crystals is required for adequate protection. If you employ a spray remember that a full pint of the liquid is required to protect a man's woolen suit.

Most sprays, as has been mentioned, merely protect against moths. There is one, however, that both kills and protects. Use this repeatedly and thoroly in closets where you suspect there may be moths and remember that they live in tiny crevices and cracks in the baseboard and in any dark, hard-to-get-at spot.

For information on where in Chicago the moth crystals and sprays mentioned in Miss Weigle's article may be purchased telephone the Tribune Public Service Office, Sup. 0200, or write in, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

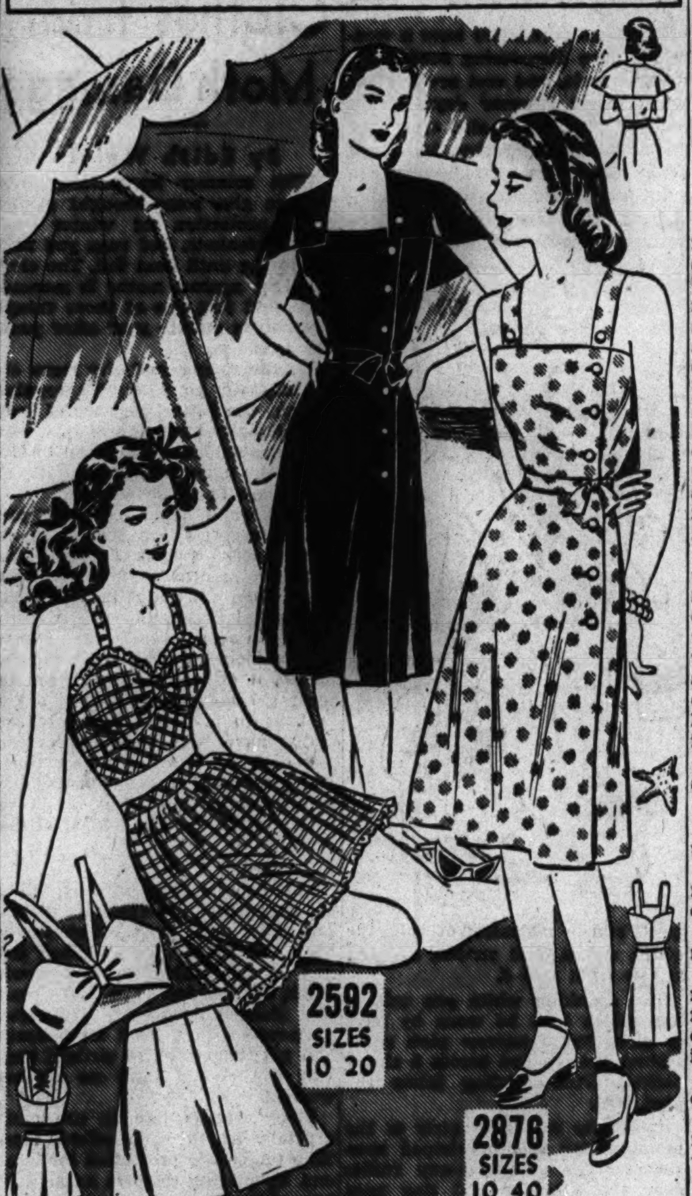
Patterns by Clotilde



"Time was" when play clothes were merely functional, not decorative as well. Designers, determined that this year's outdoor togs should be both comfortable for wear for sports on hot days, and feminine, too, have dished up these lovely designs. The simple patterns make the sewing of these models as pleasant as sitting on the shore and basking in the breeze.

One model creates a side-buttoned, low-backed frock with shoulder straps. Top these smooth lines with a brief cape which buttons onto the straps, and you have a cool and smart summer street costume. Both prints and plain colors make up handsomely. How about a navy, dark brown, or black outfit with white buttons?

The other pattern puts ruffling around the bra top and at the hem line of the brief skirt, under which there is, well concealed, a pair of tailored shorts. Remove the skirt, and you're ready for that game of beach ball or tennis.

Style No. 2592 is designed for sizes 10 to 20. Size 16 requires 1¾ yards of 35 inch material for skirt and bra, with 3 yards of ruffling; 1¾ yards for shorts and bra.

Style No. 2876 is designed for sizes 10 to 40. Size 16 requires 2⅞ yards of 39 inch fabric for dress with removable cape; 2½ yards of 35 inch material for sunback dress alone.

Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing.

Thru the Looking Glass

Sometimes the skin that is oily is sensitive as well, and that always poses a problem on how to combat the oiliness without causing irritation. We think one good answer lies in some cleansing packs, little oblong cloth bags, filled with crushed herbs, fragrant and pleasant to use. Many adolescents who are troubled with complexions which are oily and prone to eruptions, have found them an excellent standby, and older women whose skins are clogged or overly oily swear by them, too.

Before using the herbal pack, the face and neck should be thoroly cleansed with soap and water or cleansing cream to remove all make-up and surface soil. The little cloth bag should then be soaked in hot water [never lukewarm] for about three minutes until the contents are thoroly softened.

• • •

Hold the pack in the hand, forming a kind of cushion, and, using it wash cloth fashion, give the face and neck a vigorous scrubbing. Rub it well over the entire surface until a milky film forms. Let the film settle for a few minutes, then rinse it off with the water in which the pack had been soaked. The pack leaves the face shining clean and free of any trace of oil or grime and is gentle and soothing withal.

After the pack has been used, it should be swished thru clear water and pinned to a towel or rack to allow it to air and dry thoroly. If properly cared for, each pack will last for at least three treatments.

The cleansing packs are not expensive and are a tremendous help for any one who needs something that will help control an oily condition and foster and protect complexion health and beauty.

Tips on Home Food Freezing Printed Today

By Mary Meade

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

Never before has there been so much interest in preservation of foods by freezing. A few families are fortunate enough to be able to buy home freezing cabinets now; many others will be ready to buy as soon as materials for these freezers are released and production begins on a large scale.

Manufacturers of refrigerators and of some other electrical and household equipment are making extensive plans for getting into production of home freezers as soon as conditions permit. Home freezing is a live subject right now, and an interesting one.

Zero degrees is the recommended temperature for freezing and storing foods at home. Commercial companies use lower temperatures which are expensive and impractical for smaller units. Food frozen and held at zero will keep in good condition for a year, which is as long as any family wants to keep it.

Here are a few interesting facts about freezing and frozen foods.

Meats, Poultry, Fish

Freezing has a tenderizing effect upon meats.

Ground meats, cured, and corned meats won't keep as long as whole cuts and unsalted, unspiced meats.

Meat may deteriorate in storage if not chilled thoroly before storage.

If meat is frozen too slowly it may dry out and lose flavor; slow freezing also produces large ice crystals which cause excessive leaking of juice when thawed.

Lean meats keep longer than fat ones.

Poultry may be stuffed before freezing, but there isn't much advantage, as it takes so long to thaw.

Poultry shouldn't be kept in storage more than six months, as a rule.

Since cooked shrimps tend to become tough in storage, it usually is better to freeze them raw.

Meats, poultry, and fish usually are thawed before cooking.

Vegetables

Vegetables should be started to cook in the frozen state, as thawing encourages the development of bacteria.

Frozen vegetables cook more quickly than fresh ones because of the preliminary blanching or precooking necessary before they are frozen.

Cabbage and tomatoes do not freeze satisfactorily; most other vegetables, including even Brussels sprouts and eggplant, do.

Fruits

Most fruit must have sugar or sugar sirup added to keep their color and flavor. Apples and rhubarb are the exceptions.

Fruits are at their best when served immediately after thawing, or before completely thawed.

There is a great deal of published literature on home freezing of foods. Extension services of the agricultural colleges and state universities, as well as many commercial institutions, have done a great deal of research on the subject. I shall be glad to send a list of reference material and available booklets and bulletins on frozen food preservation to any interested reader. Address Mary Meade, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Opening lead: Queen of hearts.

It is fundamental in the principles of card playing that the defenders should be placed in such a position that the one with the key cards must make his play before declarer uses his important card. The simplest case is the one in which dummy holds king, queen, and one of a suit and the player on declarer's left holds the ace. A low card is led toward dummy. This places the defender in a position where he must play before declarer plays from dummy. If defender ducks, the queen wins and the process is repeated. There are more complicated variations of this theme. Where you suspect that one of your high cards may be ruffed, it is well to make the opponent who is short of the suit play before you put up that high card, so that if he ruffs you need not play the important card, but follow suit with one that would be a loser in any event.

In today's hand South was declarer at a contract of four spades and West led the queen of hearts. This was won with the ace and the suit returned, declarer winning with the king. The king of spades was then played and when East followed with the jack it began to look as tho trumps might not break. Declarer, therefore, planned to make the enemy waste a trump on a loser instead of a winner. He played the ace and king of clubs and then ruffed a third round in his own hand. He played the king of diamonds first and then followed with a low diamond. If West ruffed dummy would follow with the losing diamond. Trumps could then be drawn and declarer would score five spade tricks, two diamonds, two clubs, and a heart, for the total of 10. If West discarded [which he actually did] the ace of diamonds could be cashed and a low heart ruffed in the closed hand. The three high trumps then bring the total to the required 10.

Note how different is the result if the ace of diamonds is played first. West will then ruff the king of diamonds, a winner when it is played on the next round. And declarer will find himself one trick short. Since West is known to be long in trumps, he is apt to be short in diamonds, and that is the reason for playing the king first and compelling him to play before you do from dummy.

A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interesting.

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 20th. If that wonderful new LISTERINE Tooth Powder container is a sign of "things to come," what an economy of time and money postwar packaging will mean! First off, there's MORE quick-action LISTERINE Tooth Powder in this new double-size container . . . and it will stay fresh longer in the cylindrical moisture-proof walls of laminated waxine. A sturdy metal base assures you against wetting the powder when you set it down on your washbasin. Best of all, though, is the unique Prolon plastic red top designed to make exact pouring quick and easy,—no untidy waste of spilled powder, no loss in time. You'll agree that though the manufacturers couldn't improve their fine dentifrice, they've given us a real improvement in the way they "dish it up" for using!

Your guests are apt to burst right into Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" if you give them fresh garden salads "laced" with this "honey" of a dressing!

HONEY FRENCH DRESSING

• • In a 1 qt. jar place ⅓ cup honey, 2 tbs. Heinz Tomato Ketchup, 1 tsp. Heinz Prepared Yellow Mustard, 1 tsp. Heinz Dehydrated Horse Radish, 2 tsp. salt, ½ tsp. celery seed, 1 tsp. chopped parsley, 1 clove garlic, ¼ cup Heinz Distilled White Vinegar, 2 tbs. lemon juice, 1 cup salad oil. Cover. Shake vigorously. Yields 2 cups. Serve over garden salads.

But DO remember that the soul of any dressing is the vinegar you use! That's why I implore you to use HEINZ Distilled White Vinegar . . . mellowed in wood to a clear, subtle perfection and ready to give a masterful flair to any salad it touches! It has just the vigor that's needed to bring out the flavor of each ingredient and to "bind" together the delicate tastes of spring vegetables. Try this recipe,—and you'll see what I mean!

TOMATO ASPIC RING WITH SALAD CENTER

• • Combine 11-oz. tin Heinz Condensed Cream of Tomato Soup, ¼ cup grated celery, 1 tbs. grated onions, 1½ tsp. sugar, 1½ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. celery salt, dash red pepper, 2/3 cup water, 1 bay leaf. Heat 10 min. Strain. Add 4 tsp. unflavored gelatin (softened in ½ cup cold water 10 min.) and stir till dissolved. Add 2 tbs. Heinz Distilled White Vinegar. Pour into ring mold which has been rinsed in cold water. Chill. Unmold. Serve with 3 cups chicken, meat, fish or vegetable salad in center. Serves 6.

Happiness becomes more beautiful through sharing—which seems to be the one ideal of the canary! So why not get one of these golden-voiced pets for your home? Just make sure you keep your little "yellow-feathers" happy and healthy so that joyous, happy-hearted singing is your reward! This requires a BALANCED diet . . . and that's why you should choose FRENCH'S Bird Seed and Biscuit, the "time-tried" aid to your songster's health and happiness! FRENCH'S is the largest-selling bird seed in the United States . . . ask for it!

FLATTEN THAT BULGE

Any girth, any fat, any "bulges" to spare? Then try a P. N. PRACTICAL FRONT CORSET and get your figure under control. Truly, this corset, with its famous inner vest, has a wonderful way with protruding stomachs, bumper backs, and excess fat. It quickly "flattens that bulge," "eases up" and evenly distributes surplus flesh. It trims your figure into smoother lines — supports and lifts the stomach in tugless, pinchless comfort! A P. N. PRACTICAL FRONT is surely a wise foundation if your figure's a bit on the heavy side! Ask for it at Department Stores, or write to Nancy Sasser, 271 Madison Ave., New York 16, N. Y. for name of your nearest store.

Lovely Hands a "Must!"

Combine the luscious color of strawberry mousse, the fragrance of May's loveliest blossoms and the smoothing softness of fresh country cream . . . and you've the essential qualities of YARDLEY Hand Cream! Cost is only 65c a bottle,—a Hand Cream that combines both luxury and down-to-earth hand-service! You'll find this YARDLEY Hand Cream ready for you at Drug and Department Stores everywhere . . . ask for it!

Just another reminder of the fruitfancy that can do such a lot toward helping you spread your butter further . . . and at the same time give a "taste-treat" to every member of the family! Speaking, of course, about the fine ORANGE MARMALADE, made by the makers of WELCH'S Grape Juice, from the FRESHEST and FINEST orange crops! It's made to the American taste,—neither too tart nor too sweet . . . remarkable for its fresh orange appeal. No citrus concentrate gives it bitterness or an "ersatz" flavor. Ask your Grocer for WELCH'S Orange Marmalade,—all of the family will love its orange-goodness!

Does your face return the courtesies of May . . . or do you wish you had blinkers against the revealing brightness of Spring? A word of advice is to investigate that special cream which supplies important hormone substances. Name of it is PLUS 30 CREAM, made by Bonne Bell. You'll love the cooling, refreshing "feel" it gives wherever you apply it. Cost is $1 at smart shops; or at Gourielli, Inc., 16 E. 55th St., N.Y.C. 22, N. Y.

Did you ever stop to think that each of us is a set of chemicals walking around on two legs? And chemicals . . . well . . . chemicals smell, don't they? Take that thought to heart and you'll understand why I'm repeating my advice about AMOLIN Deodorant Cream! It's the safest, sweetest, easiest way to deodorize I know . . . spreading on as easily as face cream, and vanishing instantly! AMOLIN leaves underarms soothed and with a rose-petal fragrance. Try it,—see if you don't stay dainty and freshly sweet all day. Cost is 29c and 49c a jar . . . and every bit of this white cream will stay soft!

Lady of the House

Along the Little Roads

We followed the little road where it led over a rickety bridge, then down a tangled trail beside a tumbling stream arched over by great trees. . . . Came, then, suddenly into a clearing so bright with sunshine its every detail was etched against calm blue sky and cool rushing water. . . .

How like our tangled thoughts! Yet, if we can find a little path and follow thru, we come out into a clearing, quiet, sunlit, where we can see things plainly.

So, too, in those still turbulent lands, among the stark, staring vignettes etched in dreary gray and somber black by the red storm of war, there must be little pools of peace, little roads untouched by the hot breath of battle, trees draped in soft and tender green or in riotous bloom prophetic of a rich fruiting, gay flowers unscorched by the hot blast of guns, fragrance of rain-wet lilacs thru lingering bitter smoke, and acrid fumes. . . .

And somewhere—manywheres, I hope—along these little roads, women planting gardens to heal the torn earth and their own sick hearts. . . .

And of us, who here at home again plant our little dooryard gardens in comparative peace, Esther Lloyd Hagg asks if we have noticed how certain flowers have a special magic for certain hours? The brightly colored ones are gay and brilliant in the daytime, but quite invisible at night; while the ethereal white ones lend light and fragrance to the darkness; so she suggests—

To Plant in a Garden

Red poppies, sky-blue morning glories,
And marigold ruffles, unwind!
When the sun-fairies dance in my garden,
Whirling silk skirts they shall find!

For evening, purple petunias,
As dusk floats invisible veils,
Blurring their velvets in mystery,
Spilling their inks down dim trails.

But for the night the white blossoms,
To star the soft darkness with lights,
To hold pearly cups to catch moon-drops,
And to beckon the heart to white flights!

When Katharine Dignum wrote this sonnet she must have stood at night under a cloud of—

Apple Blossoms

Look long and lovingly upon this night,
When apple trees all veiled with spring's rich bloom
Are magically bathed with silver light,
And with Pomona's fragrance now perfume
The orchard lanes. The fragile petals lie
Heavy with nightfall. 'Mong the maples near
There is no sound; nor yet a lone bird's cry
Disturbs the scented silence lingering here.
Drink deeply of the fragrance of this bower,
And feast your soul, where haunting beauty seems
A bit of paradise, this midnight hour.
Hold back the dawn with its bright piercing beams.
Look long and lovingly upon this night
Ere this enchantment vanishes from sight.

Come Wander with Me

Come wander with me down this walk,
Perhaps some comfort we may find,
If we take time to think and talk,
And leave all prejudice behind.
Some magic of the mortal mind
Might lift us from our bitter mood
So dark we grope with eyes half blind,
And heart made sick with platitude;
Might give to us a faith renewed
In God's plan for all humankind.

FLORENCE DENISON

Thru the Fence

I found her violets blooming in my garden.
I scarcely could believe my wondering eyes,
For she was gone—the neighbor I had cherished;
Or so they said—for Death had closed her eyes.

I knew that I would miss her friendly greeting,
When new leaves burst, and birds began to sing.
And knowing, and remembering, felt reluctant
To welcome the new coming of the spring.

Today I found her violets in my garden.
Thruout the winter's night—'tis plain to see—
They wandered, thru the fence, into my garden.
[She always gave her first fresh blooms to me.]

GERTRUDE ROBB

Frustration

I am a spirit, long in thrall,
Wing-tied upon a little hill;
Eager to soar above the clouds,
And stir the elements, at will!

I am a spirit held in bond
To small conventions—must my will Lie meekly dormant, as at birth?
Must I remain subjective still?

I am a spirit held by ties—
Meager and commonplace they seem,
For I would search among the stars,
In quest of beauty and a dream!

On the House

If you like to do things yourself there is a helpful free booklet available which gives exact directions on all kinds of rug and carpet repair. . . . Pictures and text explain how to repair braided and hooked rugs as well as how to hold rug and replace tufts.

A war time substitute which is likely to stay with us in our post-war homes is a nonpressure pipe of cellulose fibre and coal tar to replace tile pipe for service sewers from house to street, foundation drainage, downspouts, etc. . . . Among its outstanding advantages is the fact that it can be laid with such tight joints that tree roots will not penetrate either pipe or joints.

Mothers Have Important Job to Do at Home

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

The soldier was down at his parents' home saying good-by before going overseas.

Since his marriage he had never discussed his wife with his mother, altho she knew he was not happy. She hadn't yet seen his little year and a half old boy, so of course the young father was full of the doings, the sweet ways, and looks of his son.

Thruout his visit John's mother had noticed at intervals a troubled look come into his eyes. Finally she said rather hesitantly, "John, is there something bothering you that you can talk about?"

"It's the baby, Mother. I guess I'll just have to spill it. The thing I mind most about going over is leaving him so completely at—well, at Anne's mercy. She's so impatient and irritable with him. Actually, Timmy acts as if he didn't love her—and that's really quite awful, because she's the only one he has to be with. He's even beginning to look unhappy. I've noticed it lately on Sundays when I've had the day off. I get an awful sinking feeling when I think that Anne may go on like that with him, maybe for two or three years while I'm away, and while he's growing into a little boy. It's going to be hard on him and bad for him, too. She seems to be getting worse with him rather than better, and she doesn't half take care of his clothes nor feed him right."

What a burden for a wife to add to those a man in the service has to carry. So no civilian has any right to lay on top of a service man's heavy burden one infinitesimal worry, and certainly no big worry like this one just described. Such a young wife as the one I am writing of [and this is a true story] needs to be given a good mental, moral, and spiritual shaking.

How different this wife from a young mother I met on the train with a lovely little baby girl. The journey was long, so we got quite far conversationally before it was over. "It's funny, I suppose," she said, "but somehow since Bill's gone over, I feel much more as if this was his baby—sort of a trust that I must keep and protect for him. When he comes back I want to feel that I've done everything I could and should for Jill. It's only my part—and small compared to his."

Maybe you think our boys don't have time to worry. But these fathers in the service do. In Europe and the Pacific they're concerned and think about their children, even in the midst of it all.

Church Society to Hold Benefit Party Saturday

Borrowing color, music, and mood from neighbor countries to the south, the Girls' Friendly society of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago will hold a Pan-American fiesta all day Saturday in the Morrison hotel. The party is a benefit for Holiday House, the G. F. S. summer camp near Glenn, Mich.

Climax of the festivities will be a tea at 4:30 o'clock at which the young women and the diocesan president of their organization, Mrs. Harry Hughes, will entertain Bishop Wallace E. Conkling and Emilio Almada. Senor Almada is the consul of Mexico in Chicago.

• • •

The program will open at 9 o'clock in the morning with an American school girl style show in which the models will be members from local units of the G. F. S. To give color and variety to the picture, girls from Mexico and other Central and South American countries will appear in native costume. Mrs. Frederick A. Brown is the chairman in charge, and the show will be judged by Mrs. Conkling, Mrs. Walter S. Underwood, Mrs. Rollin T. Chamberlin, and Miss Patricia Stevens. Mrs. Homer Greer of Glencoe and Miss Anna Hoerger, 7755 Calumet av., are co-chairmen of the fiesta committee.

Talent is being recruited from the membership for an amateur program that will be presented in the afternoon.

Among the church groups of adults holding meetings this week is the Protestant Woman's protectorate, a philanthropic organization headed by Mrs. Fred W. Waterman. The protectorate gives aid and counsel for elderly women in need. Following a conference of the board at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow, the general meeting will convene at 1:30 o'clock in Dixon chapel of the Chicago temple at 33 N. Clark st. The Rev. Paul Turner, minister at the Presbyterian church in Riverside, is scheduled to give a talk.

The protectorate shares in the annual tag day of the Associated Charities of Chicago. Those who assisted last Monday in tagging will be entertained at a tea after the meeting. The party has been arranged by Mrs. Henry Leoppert, who served as chairman.
